TALMAGE'S SERMON.

ferent chances. Three times are enough." Are they enough, my brother? Remember the lad's parents. Remember that he is an impulsive fellow and not bad at heart. Remember that Christ forgave Peter again and again until at last Peter rose above his weaknesses and gave his life fully and freely back to Christ. Will you do as much for that young man in your employ as Christ did for his impulsive and denying disciple?

From the filthy pieces of clothes gathered by the ragpickers in Germany and France I have seen the manufacturers of Watervliet, Mich., make the purest and whitest writing paper. From even the modern Peters of the three denials there have been developed the Peters of the martyred blood. One day General Charles George Gordon, more widely known as "Chinese" Gordon, saw a handsome Chinese youth being led out to execution. The condemned had been guilty of many crimes. Gordon was struck with the looks of the lad and begged for his life. He said that he himself would guarantee that the boy would do right. Gordon's request was granted. The famous soldier of Queen Victoria and of Jesus Christ took the lad to his own quarters. He made the Chinese boy then and there promise never to do wrong again. Did he fulfill his pledge? From that day on the most faithful servant Gordon ever had about him was that boy, rescued by the Christian general from the executioner's axe. He followed Gordon to Egypt. And the Chinese lad's blood mingled with Charles George Gordon's blood when the massacre at Khartoum ended the earthly life of England's most famous Christian soldier. Ah, the Peters of the three denials are worth saving.

But, steady, my brother. Be patient also with those who are harsh in their criticisms of others. Remember that for them a day of reckoning is coming, or perhaps has come. Who among your brothers and sisters to-day is having the hardest times? Is it not the sister who never had in her heart any love for the common people? Is it not the sister who felt she was socially and mentally a little higher than any one else? Who to-day is most mercilessly laid upon the dissecting table of criticism and having his whole life cut to pieces? Is it not the man who himself once most vigorously wielded the censorious scalpel? Do not worry that these sinners who are so harsh in their criticisms against the sins of others will not have their just rewards. Verily, verily, I say unto you, their condemnation will come from God. It is better for us not to try to snatch the divine thunderbolts out of God's hand.

But there is still another class of aggressive critics against which I would plead with you to apply the teachings of my text. They are those who have no sympathy with you in your work. I do not mean those who are maliciously falsifying, but those who are honestly, truthfully and positively do not like your way of doing things. Now, my brother, the best way for you to overcome such criticism is not by going out and trying to destroy your neighbor's influence for good, but simply by being patient; by simply saying nothing against your honest though antagonistic neighbors, but by going ahead and doing your own work in your own way and proving beyond all peradventure that God has blessed you and will continue to bless you in what you are doing in his name.

Nine-tenths of all the criticisms made against us would soon die if we ourselves did not go forth to fight those criticisms and thus make matters worse. Hugh Clifford, the old jungle traveler, once vividly described a startling experience he had when traveling in the Malay peninsula. He and his men were attacked by a huge swarm of angry, revengeful bees. Immediately the party swung their blankets around their heads and tried to fight them off, but it was useless. They were stung everywhere. "Take to the water!" Clifford cried to his men. The Malays ran for their lives. The bees not only drove them into the water, but continued stinging them there. The furious insects threatened to kill them while they were in the river itself. "With hands like boxing gloves and heads like inflated footballs from the awful stinging," wrote Clifford, "my suffering party then limped away to the next village. Half an hour later one of my men came into the village uninjured. He had seen the bees coming and had sat down and waited the assault. They covered him from head to foot, but as he offered no opposition they did not sting him." What is true of the Malay bees is true also of the human bees. With buzz and threatenings in great swarms they may light upon you. They may crawl all over you and aggravatingly tickle your face and hands and heart, but if you will not fight them, but simply go on doing the work that God has given you to do, your assailants will become harmless, and after awhile they will leave you in peace and in ease.

Thus, my friends, the whole teaching of this text is this: Drop your battle ax and as a Christian farmer go to gospel seed planting. Drop your war clubs and go to driving an ambulance. Do not boast of how many enemies you have killed, but speak rather of how many friends you have been able to win through gospel love. This text has in it the language of pardon, not the hiss of hate. It is a flower garden whose most fragrant blossoms grow best upon the grave hillocks under which are buried the hideous corpses of bitter strife. It is a lighthouse to warn voyagers off the dangerous rocks and to guide them into the harbor of safety and not the search light of an invader, ready to single out for destruction a hiding foe. Oh, my brother and sister, will you not try to practice Paul's moderation? Will you not let your forbearance and gentleness and Christian forgiveness be known unto all men?

JACK'S RED DEVIL.

A Pretty Girl Tells Her Experience Riding In It.

"Yes, we decided yesterday morning to go to the beach a week earlier than we had expected," said the young woman in the pongee traveling coat at the station to the friend who was down to the station to bid her goodby, "and it fell to my portion to look up the old mammy who had all of our washing. We knew in a vague sort of way that the washerwoman lived somewhere down in south Washington, and my mother dimly remembered that the address was somewhere on Tenth street, not far from the wharfs, and with this sparse information to guide me I had set out to hurry the old washerwoman along in case I should be able to find her.

"It wasn't a very cheerful job, but I approached it with what enthusiasm I could muster. I was standing downtown at one of the transfer stations waiting for the car to come along that would take me to south Washington, when Jack Scorcher came whizzing by in that cute new red devil of his. He saw me and pulled the auto around to where I was standing.

"'Want a ride?' Jack asked me—you know I've known Jack ever since I wore a pigtail and he knickerbockers—and I just guess I did want a ride under those peculiar circumstances. But I hated to tell him of the errand on which I was bound. I stepped in alongside of him, though, and he raced his buzz wagon out Massachusetts and Connecticut avenues, explaining its fine points to me in language that I didn't understand in the least. Then I thought what a fine thing that auto would be in which to hunt around for that old washerwoman of ours, and so I just out and told Jack.

"'I'm hunting for a washerwoman, or was when you picked me up,' I said to him, 'and mamma 'll be distracted if I don't find her, for we're going away tomorrow,' and so on, and Jack grinned.

"'Well, we'll go dig the washerwoman up—it'll be a lark,' he said, and down to south Washington he headed the machine at such a clip that I thought sure he'd be arrested.

"Well, we penetrated the region in south Washington in which mamma had the general idea our washerwoman lived, and Jack tooted his auto horn with all his might in front of a lot of shanties to call the occupants out in order to make inquiries of them as to the location of our washerwoman. At last we got on the trail—an old black man pointed out the house to us a couple of squares down the street. Jack shot his machine down there and pulled up in front of the shanty that had been pointed out to us.

"'You needn't get out,' Jack said to me. 'I'll just toot the old girl out in front.' And he began to pull awful blasts out of his auto horn.

"There was no response for some time, but finally, after three or four minutes, the old mammy, whom I instantly recognized, opened the front door and looked amazedly at me.

"'Yo' all mus' excuse me, honey, fo' not uh-comin' out d'rectly. Ah heeard de ho'n uh-tootin',' the old washerwoman said to me, 'but Ah dun thought it was de gyarbage wagon!'

"And do you know that Jack looked real miffed over it—the poor, old aunty imagining that his fine, new red devil was the garbage wagon? 'Deed he did! Wasn't it childish of Jack?"

Bleeding Piles and Erysipelas.

Two Severe Cases Which Illustrate the Extraordinary Soothing, Healing Virtues of Dr. Chase's Ointment.

Scores of people do not think of trying Dr. Chase's Ointment for bleeding piles because they have used so many other treatments in vain and do not believe their ailment curable. It is by curing when others fail that Dr. Chase's Ointment has won such a record for itself. It will not fail to promptly relieve and completely cure any form of piles, no matter how severe or of how long standing.

Mr. James Uriah Pye, Marie Joseph, Guysborough Co., N. S., writes:—

"I was bad with bleeding piles for about four years and could get no help. Chase's Ointment cured me in a very short time and I cannot praise it too highly for this cure. Mrs Thomas Smith was troubled with erysipelas in the feet and legs and was all swollen up. I gave her some of the ointment, which took out the swelling and healed all the sores. She had tried many treatments before, but none seemed to do her any good. I am telling my friends about the wonderful cures which Dr. Chase's Ointment made for Mrs Smith and myself, and would say that it is only a pleasure for me to recommend so excellent a preparation."

Wherever there is irritation, inflammation, ulceration or itching of the skin Dr Chase's Ointment will bring quick relief and will ultimately heal and cure. On this account it is useful in scores of ways in every home for the cure of eczema, salt rheum, tetter, scald head, chafing, itching peculiar to women, pin worms, piles and all other skin diseases and eruptions.
