How Pat Proposed to Make the Petrol Hang Out

Of course you know the story of the Irishman who was painting a fence, and who worked for all he was worth in order that he might get his job finished before the paint gave out.

It was one of those jokes our grandmothers laughed at before our grandfathers bought razors.

Well, here's a new version of it.

The hero, again, is an Irishman, but this time not a painter. Oh, no; a chauffeur driving his master home from the country late one evening.

The nearer the car approached the town the faster it went until, when about ten miles out, it was travelling at something like fifty miles an hour.

"Steady, man, steady!" cried the master to his servant. "If you go on like this we shall get held up by the police."

But the Irishman set his lips firmly, made the car go faster still, then hissed:

"We're still nine miles from home, sir, and I've only enough petrol for three. If we hurry we may just do it!"

REV. JOSEPH H. HERTZ

Chief Rabbi of the British Empire, the fifth chief rabbi to be chosen by the Jews of England since the days of Cromwell.

Two Suicides in a Family

An inquest was held at Warrington on James Tomlinson, forge laborer, who was found hanged in his bedroom. It was stated that Tomlinson served in the South African War, and was in receipt of eightpence a day pension. His wife committed suicide seven years ago, when he gave way to drink. A young daughter stated that about eighten months ago her father sent her brother to a reformatory, and this worried him a good deal.

Memorial to Executed Men

It is proposed to place two memorial tablets on the mausoleum in Loughmore Cemetery, county Tipperary, where rest the remains of the Brothers Cormack, who were hanged in Nenagh Gaol in 1857 for the alleged murder of a land agent named Ellis. The remains were removed from the gaol to Loughmore about three years ago.

In Bed For 51 Years

As the result of an accident to her spine a woman named Hatherley, of St. Mary Church, Torquay, took to her bed fifty-one years ago, and has lain in bed ever since. In the same room for over seven years lay her deaf and nearly blind mother, who died at the age of ninety-seven.

Could Not Face Operation

At an inquest on Gunner Sidney Anderson, aged twenty-six, who shot himself in Preston Barracks, Brighton, it was stated that he had written that he could not face another operation for appendicitis. He left a letter apologising to the officers and adding, "I have done my duty."

Doctor's Wife Takes Poison

"I am at the beautiful sea and I may walk into it. I am a mental and physical wreck," ran a letter stated at the inquest to have been received by Dr. James Anderson, Leicestershire, from his wife, who was found dead at Southchurch, Essex, with a bottle of poison by her side.

Died at 109

Mrs. Hannah M'Kinnon, Ballygawly, county Tyrone, has just passed away at the remarkable age of 109 years, having retained her faculties up to the last.

Hat Causes Suicide

Upset apparently because she had to wear one of her mother's black hats at her employer's funeral, Maddelina Bertini, fifteen, afterwards drowned herself in the Thames. A verdict of "Suicide during temporary insanity" was returned.

Recovered His Sight

George William Hoyle, of Halifax, who had been blind for six months, recovered his sight following a series of fits

BIG WATERWHEELS

Hama, in Northern Syria, is justly famous for its huge waterwheels. The city lies some 110 miles northeast of Damascus on the banks of the river Orontes. It is undoubtedly a very ancient town, and is referred to in the Bible as Hamath the Great. The river flows through the city in the form of an S, and upon its banks are four huge waterwheels, each bearing a name of its own. They are used for pumping up the water of the Orontes for irrigation purposes, and also for supplying the town. The wheels are driven by the flow of the river on what is known as the undershot principle; that is to say, the wheel is moved by water passing beneath it. The largest wheel has a diameter of about 70 feet, and the Syrians declare it is the largest in existence. Like the others, it is built of wood, a dark mahogany. The axle is of iron. The creaking of the wheels is incessant day and night. They never stop. In winter and during early spring the flow of the stream is partially blocked to reduce the rapidity of the revolutions, but on no account are the wheels actually stopped. Placed upon the banks of the stream amid the trees and gardens for which Hama is justly proud, the wheels present a decidedly picturesque effect. They are favorite rendezvous of the boys of the town. For a few cents some of the more daring will climb up the spokes of the moving wheel to the summit and then jump into the stream below.

Rector's Many Businesses

The Rev. John Gower, rector, of Trefriw, Wales, died at the age of eighty-three. He was of an exceptionally burly build, and possessed extraordinary physical strength even to the last. Recently he declared in the pulpit that he was an accomplished boxer and wrestler, and had more than once trained young men in the noble art of self-defence. He was also a very keen business man, and owned numerous properties. Among the trades, etc., he worked by means of foremen were the following: Slate quarry, stone quarry, lead mines, undertaker, joiner, upholsterer, carpenter, wheelwright, grocer, baker, smithy, car proprietor, motor-bus proprietor, carter, farmer, market gardener, poultry farm, refreshment-house, lodging-houses, and river fishing licenses.

Diversions of a Tramp

The occupants of a Welsh farm, were alarmed by the unusual behavior of a tramping laborer who had been allowed to sleep at the farm one night on the promise of work next morning. The man demanded breakfast before commencing work, but was refused a meal until after he had done something to earn it. He then chased the farmer's wife round the house with a pitchfork. He afterwards went into the farmyard, where he proceeded to milk a cow and drink the milk, afterwards stealing a number of eggs and trying to escape on the back of a pony which was in the yard. He was, however, prevented from doing so by two laborers, who chased him from the premises, but he outdistanced his pursuers.

Four Hundred Trout Poisoned

No fewer than 400 trout were killed as the result of a collision on the railway at Okehampton, Devon. The accident occurred during shunting operations, and a tank containing several tons of vitriol was thrown over an embankment into the road. The acid poured in streams down the roadway and flowed through a field and down gulleys to the river. Many of the poisoned trout were found to have had their skin peeled and bleached by the acid. A number of dead eels were also found on the banks of the river. They had evidently jumped out of the water to escape the vitriol. In a roadside garden which it invaded the acid destroyed every plant it touched.

Postman Travelled 500,000 Miles

It is computed that John Cooker, the letter-carrier between Dale and Milford and the villages of Hubberston, Herbrandston, St. Ishmael's and Marloes, Pembrokeshire, for forty-nine years, who died at the age of eighty-six, travelled 500,000 miles in performing his duties.

Tobacco Round the Legs

In connection with a burglary two suspicious-looking characters, known to the police as expert thieves, were apprehended in the vicinity of Farm Cross. When the men were searched rolls of tobacco were found coiled round their legs. The tobacco was identified.

Dying Consumptive's Suicide

It was shown at the inquest at Godmanchester on a consumptive named Wolter Sandifer that he paid the doctor for attending him, and while the medical man was receipting the bill in another room Sandifer shot himself dead. The doctor said the man would have died a natural death within three days.
