THE COOK'S CORNER

OVEN-GRILLED SANDWICHES

A substantial snack for busy days is an oven-grilled sandwich, served with a hot beverage or a glass of cold fruit juice.

12 slices bread
1-2 lb. soft American cheese, sliced
6 tablespoons melted butter or other fat

Make sandwiches of bread and sliced cheese, remove crusts, and cut sandwiches in two. Cover cookie sheet with heavy brown paper, and brush with fat. Arrange sandwiches on paper and brush tops with fat. Grill in very hot oven, 475 degrees F., until golden brown 8-10 minutes. Serve piping hot. Makes six double sandwiches.

SCOTCH SCONES

Sift together 3 cups flour, 3 teaspoons baking powder, 1 teaspoon salt, and 2-3 cup fine granulated sugar. Then cut in 2-3 cup shortening. Add 1 cup chopped raisins. Beat one egg until very light, and add to it about 3-4 cup milk. Combine this with the flour mixture to make a soft dough. Turn out on to a floured board, and pat out to 3-4 inch thickness. Cut into triangles, and place on a greased baking sheet. Brush each scone with a little cream, or with a little of the egg and milk mixture, if there is any remaining. Bake in an oven of 425 degrees F about 10 or 12 minutes.

THE HAPPY MEDIUM

BRISTOL, England — (CP) — "Do you wish to plead guilty or not guilty?" a defendant was asked in a court here. "Unguilty," was the answer.

All That Glitters

By Frances Parkinson Keyes

"That isn't my idea of a joke. Helen's coming to stay with me as soon as she's been presented at court. I invited them both, but Isabel declined in the sweetest note you ever read in your life. She said she wouldn't dream of putting me to so much trouble, that she'd stay at the Meurice, as she always did. If she hasn't told you all this it must be because she's meant to give you a pleasant surprise. I haven't said anything about it because I thought that sooner or later you'd say something to me. I'm sorry, Giles, I'm awfully sorry things have turned out this way. But we'd better make the best of them, hadn't we? That is, you don't want to say farewell forever tonight, do you? Or anything else dramatic? I think myself we'd better try to set the clock back. Not that we can, of course. But I think we'd better try."

They both tried, with determination. But the spontaneity that had beatified the spring had gone; a sense of strain marred their companionship. It had never been Zoe's habit to go to Giles' apartment unless she knew that he expected other visitors at about the same time. Now she took to dropping in casually, at odd hours, as if to prove her confidence in his discretion and her sympathy with his predicament. But several weeks went by before he took the initiative by actually asking her to come. Then he sent her a note.

Dear Zoe—he wrote— Could you drop in this evening between six and seven? I think I can get in myself by that time. And I'd like to find you waiting for me. Yours always, Giles.

It was after eight. The pearly light which had flooded the city and the Seine when she first went out on the terrace of his apartment still transfigured it. But its quality was changing. The long gloaming of midsummer had set in.

She was not impatient, but she began to be troubled. It was so unlike Giles to be late. When at last she heard his step behind her and turned to see his face, she knew it was even worse than she had feared. He came up to her and took both her hands. "Zoe, Isabel is here. At the Meurice. She's left Helen behind, in England, with the Grenvilles. Helen isn't coming over until next week, when you expected her. She says she's ready to do anything I want her to."

"Well, what do you want her to do?"

"Nothing. I tried to tell her so. And she wouldn't believe me. I couldn't tell her that I simply didn't want her."

Zoe's pent-up emotion was unleashed at last. "Go back and tell Isabel the truth," she said fiercely. "Tell her you don't love her any more. Tell her you do love someone else. Tell her who it is, if you have to. Tell her you want a home with a helpmate in it. Tell her all that before it's too late! If you haven't got the guts to do it, I'll never speak to you again as long as I live!"

Dorothy Dix Says—

WIVES HAVE TAKEN MEN OFF DOMESTIC THRONE IN AMERICA

Educated Women Refine Crude Males While Cultured Husbands Seldom Improve Mates

A CORRESPONDENT says: "According to the law of the land, the husband is the head of the house. He is supposed to establish the official status of the family and to be the one who, in common parlance, rules the roost. But is this true? The man is, of course, dominant in his business, but in his home doesn't the average man sing pretty small. And doesn't the wife wear the breeches, and I don't mean slacks, either?"

Right you are, Mister. In this country, at least, women, by hook or crook, or by subtlety or wiles, have somehow managed to ease men off the domestic throne and to have grabbed it for themselves. And Gallup poll would show that in ninety-nine households out of a hundred it is Friend Wife who settles all of the family problems, without bothering even to consult Husband about them, and when there is any argument between them about any matter he compromises by doing her way.

BETTER FOR WIFE TO BE SUPERIOR

Whether this is for the general good or not is open to discussion, but, nevertheless, it is a fact that, taking them by and large, wives have far more influence over their husbands than husbands have over their wives. And when a couple are not evenly matched it is better for the man himself, and for the general interest of the family, for the wife to be the superior one.

There are many reasons for this. One is that in our particular civilization a man take his social position, as a general thing, from his wife. She boosts him up, or pulls him down. She decides whom they shall know and he gravitates to her crowd.

When a woman marries, she can open the doors of her own set to her husband, but a man cannot force his friends to accept his wife unless she belongs to their own lodge and knows the pass words. Mary may marry a very rough diamond and take him with her into the houses of the elect, but if John marries an uncouth woman, every door will be barred to her.

Why a wife finds it easier to lift a husband up to her level than a husband does to hoist his wife up to his, is one of the inexplicable mysteries of matrimony. It just happens that way. If a man marries a broad-minded, tolerant, generous woman, he almost invariably becomes broad-minded and tolerant and generous, too. But if he marries a woman who is mean and prejudiced and narrow and stingy, he almost always becomes hard and narrow and mean also.

WOMAN OFTEN DEVELOPS CRUDE HUSBAND

Over and over again we see the wife perform the miracle of making a silk purse out of a sow's ear. We have seen a woman marry a man with little education and no social training prune his grammar and pronunciation and polish his manners until he had the speech and bearing of a gentleman. We have seen fine wives develop all that is good in their husband's souls. But we rarely see a husband turn a boorish woman into a lady.

We have seen greedy women who wanted money and the things that money buys turn their husbands into thieves. We have seen jealous, possessive women make men forget the mothers who bore them. We have seen dull women without understanding or appreciation put out the fire of ambition in a man's soul and kill his every aspiration.

But we have known very few men who ever really improved their wives. Few neat men ever cured an untidy wife of slovenliness. Few educated men ever inspire their wives with a desire to improve their minds. Few generous men ever open the hands of a tight-fisted wife.

FATHERS SELDOM INFLUENCE CHILDREN

And as for the father's influence with his children compared with that of his wife, it is negligible. This is inevitable because the mother is with them more than the father and it is her hand that molds their characters. She forms their ideals. She sets her indelible stamp upon them.

If the mother is intelligent, she sees that her children have an education, but if she is dull and uneducated, she lets the matter drift and they go to school, or not, as they choose. If the mother is ambitious, she pushes her children on. She is a driving force in their lives. But if she is unambitious and happy-go-lucky, she rears the kind of boys and girls who take life easily and are satisfied just to drift through the world. And, no matter how much it breaks the father's heart to see promising child material ruined in the rearing, there is little he can do about it.

And it is the wife who makes the atmosphere of the home. If she is a cultured woman, she makes it a place of beauty and refinement and gathers a delightful circle about her. But, no matter how cultured and refined a man is, he cannot give this stamp to his home, nor bring about him the people whom he would like to associate with if he is married to an illiterate and common wife.

So, after all, it is the wife who is the power behind the throne in almost every house.

Price Control Questions And Answers

Questions and Answers on Price Control will appear in The Guardian as a regular feature each day. The questions are those which have reached the Wartime Prices and Trade Board from housewives in this region. The answers are provided by the Board Readers. Persons who have intelligent questions to ask on price control are invited to send them in writing to the Women's Regional Advisory Committee of Wartime Prices and Trade.

Q. Why was honey rationed after some people had two or three hundred pounds and others none?

A. At the beginning of the honey season there was enough to supply normal requirements. If everyone bought according to his needs there would have been no shortage. But many people became hoarders, thereby creating a shortage. In order to distribute the remainder of the supply as equitably as possible rationing was effected. It was not done before because the supply did not show a need at the beginning of the season. The Board adopts rationing only as a last resort, because it drains manpower markets, is expensive to administer, and causes much work for dealers who are handicapped by the labor shortage. Therefore, honey was rationed just because some bought beyond their needs.

Q. My baby was born in August. Can I apply for canning sugar for him? If so, where?

A. No. Canning sugar application blanks were supposed to be filled in and returned to your local ration board office by April 15. Canning sugar requirements were alloted in June. Had your baby been born before April 15, and had you applied for canning sugar then, you local ration board could have arranged to set aside supplies for him.

BABY'S TEETHING UPSETS QUICKLY CHECKED

YOUR BABY must "get a tooth." But he need not get a fever with it—if baby's mother is wise he won't.

Here is what one wise mother, Mrs. Archie Begbie, of Consecon, has to say: "We have not lost one night's rest through teething as I always use my old standby, Baby's Own Tablets. They are worth their weight in gold."

And Mrs. B. A. Sebine, of Galt, Ont., says: "I have given Baby's Own Tablets to my baby girl since she was three weeks old and, although she cut her teeth rapidly (all four molars at once) she has never yet wakened us at night. I would not be without these tablets."

Give these prompt-acting, sweet-tasting tablets at the first sign of teething fever. Easily crushed to a powder, if desired. Analyst's certificate in every package.

Also effective in Constipation, Simple Fever, Diarrhoea, Upset Stomach, Colic, Simple Croup and Fretfulness. Get a box today. Sickness so often strikes in the night. 25 cents. Money back if you are not satisfied.

EMBARRASSING

The A.T.S. private had gone for a walk in the country near her camp. It was a hot day so when she came to a pool a little off the road and surrounded by trees, she decided to have a dip.

She folded her clothes on the bank and jumped in, swam around for a while, and then scrambled out.

As she did so she saw an Army officer approaching and hid behind one of the trees. He came nearer and nearer, and suddenly called out: "Camouflage platoon, dismiss!"

Whereupon all the trees walked away!

MIGHT BE MISTAKEN

"You've made a mistake in your paper," said the indignant man, entering the editorial sanctum. "I was one of the competitors at the athletic match yesterday, and you have called me the well-known lightweight champion."

"Well, aren't you?" said the editor.

"No, I'm nothing of the kind, and it's confoundly awkward, because you see, I'm a coal merchant."

Charming New Slip Cover Is Quickly Made for Winter

Underskirt Plays Hide and Seek

Winter turns our practical fancy to making cheery chintz covers, and isn't this one smart? So charming in rosy chintz, bows of green and a green petticoat peeping out!

And so easy to make! A few deft pats, a little pinning, a bow here—there—and you're done!

What you do first is to lay a length of fabric down the inside back and seat of your chair, allowing a 4-inch tuck-in between. Then you'd smartly bind the seams with green, work with fabric right side out.

Pin firmly along the chair outlines and next cut inside the pins, leaving 1½ inches for seams. Fit, pin and cut each section the same way—arms, back, cushion. Where arms and back curve, take up surplus material with darts, as in diagram. Then to basting and fitting and sewing on binding, as our other diagram shows.

Now—the skirt! Stitch on your petticoat just above the chair legs. Over it, fit and pin the chintz skirt in two pieces.

Wasn't that tiny effort well worth it? Our 32-page booklet explains in detail how to measure, cut and finish slip covers for many types of chairs and sofas, also for auto seats. Describes making of smart box-pleated and swag flounces.

Send 15c in coins for your copy of HOW TO MAKE SLIP COVERS to The Charlottetown Guardian Home Service. Be sure to write plainly your name, address and the name of booklet.

Living & Leisure

The Woman's Realm

LIFE'S ESSENTIAL

We may live without poetry, music and art;
We may live without conscience and live without heart;
We may live without friends; we may live without books;
But civilized man cannot live without cooks.

He may live without books—what is knowledge but grieving?
He may live without hope —what is passion but pining?
But where is the man who can live without dining?

To eliminate accidents in your bathroom, put soap and towels within easy reach before using the tub and hold on to something secure while stepping in and out of the tub. Never touch light switches or electric appliances while standing in the tub or holding onto a faucet.

For climbing to make repairs about the house use a ladder not boxes, machinery or other makeshifts. Set the ladder firmly on the ground, at a safe angle. Face the ladder and avoid carrying things such as nails and screws in your mouth when climbing.

HUNDREDS OF VARIETIES

Corn includes hundreds of agricultural varieties that may be classified into seven principal groups, namely, pod, pop, flint, dent, soft, sweet and starchy-sweet.

COMFORT IN SOLID MATTRESS

Now that Canadians cannot buy mattresses of the spring-filled type, they are finding that the solid-filled mattresses have much the same resilience, providing the ticking is filled or packed with good quality materials. To get the best wear from a mattress, it should not be rolled or bent, since such treatment affects the even distribution of the filling. Sit on the edge of a mattress and you'll break down its side walls. Failing to turn the mattress at least once a week produces sags and hollows. Covering it with a protective sheet of muslin guards against dust and tears, and it can be kept clean and refluffed by vacuum cleaning, airing and occasional sunning.

To make bacon go further, cut it in one-inch pieces, add a slice of diced bread, and fry all together until bread is crisp and brown, stirring the while.

You've probably had the discouraging experience of washing a sweater with a few extra-dirty spots on it that disappear immediately you put the sweater in water, and re-appear with renewed brilliance as soon as the sweater is dry. Next time, before you dip your sweater mark these extra-dirty spots with white or contrasting, thread. Then, when the sweater is in the suds bath you will know exactly where it needs a little extra treatment. This idea can also be used when washing other garments but remember to use a fine silk thread and a fine needle on rayon or other delicate fabrics, so that the material will not be damaged.
