Canuck Girls Now Overseas Number 3,000

BY MARGARET ECKER
Canadian Press Staff Writer

LONDON, Jan. 3—(CP)— Canadian women who gave their services at frontline posts overseas learned what war was in the year 1943.

Some of them were wounded on foreign soil, had their ears deafened by gunfire, and knew the terror of bursting bombs. But for most of the nearly 3,000 women with "Canada" badges on their uniforms the war has not been as dramatic as that.

The women in the headlines were those who served on the Mediterranean front; the nursing sisters in North Africa, Italy and Sicily and the Canadian Red Cross girls in the same theatre. Of the nursing sisters, 12 were wounded by a shell in Sicily; 100 were aboard a torpedoed ship in the Mediterranean and lost everything they had.

Canadian women were the first nurses in Sicily and they worked for weeks within gunfire of the front line, although no nurses are in the mobile nursing vans that move up behind the front line.

Women of the Canadian services in Britain have settled into English life. They have made friends with the people here. Many have married here. Some through educational courses are carrying on civilian careers interrupted by enlistment.

More than 1,000 nursing sisters, under the command of Lt.-Col. Agnes Neil of Peterborough, Ont., are serving in Canadian general hospitals and casualty clearing stations in all parts of Britain.

They work hard, play hard and study the same way. Their quarters are in the hospitals where they are posted and they have their own messes. They're the glamor girls of the Canadian services.

More than 100 nurses have married since they came to England.

The girls in air force blue, members of the R. C. A. F. (Women's Division) are sampling English life a little more deeply than the other services. The 350 working at air force headquarters in London live in their own flats or boarding houses with the fun and the headaches of rationed shopping and living.

Their commanding officer, Wing Officer Kay Walker of Montreal and Ottawa said:

"Living out has given our girls the opportunity to know London, to become better acquainted with the British people than they would in barracks."

The girls still prefer to play together as they work together, they have bridge clubs, theatre parties, sightseeing tours. Like women in all the services many of them are taking educational courses at the universities and through the war services. Most of the girls do a couple of nights a week of volunteer work at service club canteens, at hospitals, or assisting with child welfare work in the East End of London.

About two dozen Wids have married in Britain.

MANY IN LONDON

Most of the Wids working in London are clerks of various categories. But out on the bomber stations the girls live the same life, and do most of the ground jobs the men of the R.C.A.F. do. They live in Nissen huts of tin. Most of their work is done outdoors

They are the girls behind the bombing raids over Gemany. They pack the safety equipment, the rubber dinghies for men who may have to bale out over the North Sea, they operate the wirelesses that are a bomber's contact with home over enemy territory; they are flight mechanics, making minor repairs on aircraft, aircraft instrument repairers, parachute riggers, photographers, drivers barbers, cooks, messwomen, teletype operators.

Four times as many khaki-girls of the Canadian Women's Army Corps serve in England now than did when this year started. The majority of them work in London, at Canadian Military Headquarters, as switchboard operators, clerks, drivers, office workers. But two companies are in the field, at Canadian army camps where they live under active service conditions in tin huts and work as laundry employees, cooks messwomen, drivers, as well as clerks.

In London the girls live in barracks, big comfortable mansions where they eat better than most people in England and have a well-rounded program of social life, educational courses, physical training, games such as baseball and basketball, welfare work, theatre-going and sightseeing tours. About three dozen have married since coming overseas.

Rookies to overseas service are the 32 girls of the Women's Royal Canadian Naval Service whose advance party arrived here on Sept. 1. The girls work in London at the offices of the senior Canadian naval officer as clerks and postal workers.

Theirs is a real Allied Nations' life. They live in quarters with British Wrens and the English girls are introducing the Canadian girls to Britain.

The 186 members of the Canadian Red Cross Corps serving here and in the Mediterranean know what service is. They come overseas with little financial reward other than their living. They are ready for any job that is given to them from peeling potatoes in a soldiers' leave club, office work in Canadian Red Cross headquarters here, transport driving, welfare work among the Canadian blind at St. Dunstan's handicraft work in Canadian hospitals here, welfare work in hospitals in the theatre of operation to ambulance driving in the Liverpool docks area.

MONCTON, N.B., Jan. 3 — (CP) —Moncton's vital statistics for 1943 show a record high number of births, deaths and marriages. The largest increase was in births—a total of 1,293 or 252 more than in 1942.

SEA VIEW And Vicinity

Christmas Day dawned bright and clear with a higher temperature following the extremely cold days of the past week. The sleigh roads in the country are very good making it possible for a number of family gatherings which are so eagerly looked forward to and greatly enjoyed.

Mrs. Frank McKay entertained the members of the Darnley and Sea View W.M.S. on Wednesday evening for their Christmas meeting. Owing to the severe cold the meeting was smaller than it otherwise would have been. President Mrs. Frank McKay presided and gave the call to worship. The meeting opened by singing "O Little Town of Bethlehem" after which the program from the Missionary Monthly was carried out by the president leading in the candlelight service, assisted by the other members. This program was most impressive with Christmas carols, sung at different periods. The theme of this program was most appropriate The Light of the Knowledge of God. The business period was then conducted and the officers for the coming year were appointed. President, Mrs. Frank McKay Vice-Pres., Mrs. Colin Donald. Secretary-Treasurer, Mrs. McGregor. SAY IT WITH RUFFLES

How to broaden the shoulders without bulk and be pretty about the whole thing is being illustrated in hostess gowns. They say it with flowers or with ruffles (self ones). They do it with rows of same across the top of the bodice below the shoulder line and running down to the waist —as simple as that, as pretty as it sounds, and still a shoulder-widener and a hips deceiver.
