An Investment Better than Ponzi's

Even if Ponzi's get-rich-quick scheme had proved a wonderful success, it would not have been such a blessing to humanity as is Buckley's Bronchitis Mixture, the one sure remedy for colds, coughs, bronchitis, bronchial asthma and other throat and chest troubles. Ponzi's scheme only meant wealth. Buckley's means health and perhaps life. If you have a cold or hacking cough, beware the saying: "Cold—cough—coffin." Don't run risks. Get a bottle of Buckley's Mixture—and get it to-day. One dose will bring relief. It has helped thousands, and it can do the same for you. Buckley's Mixture is not a soothing syrup. It is a scientific preparation, twenty times more effective than other cough mixtures. Ask your druggist for it, and look for the name on the bottle. Take no substitute. Price 75c. a bottle. For sale at all Drug Stores or by mail from W. K. BUCKLEY, LIMITED, 142 MUTUAL ST., TORONTO. 9

LIQUOR IN COFFINS.—Checking up on liquor they seized at the undertaking parlors, prohibition enforcement agents listed nearly 100 gallons of various kinds of liquor. Smiles instead of tears were on the faces of visitors to the undertakers, neighbors noticed, and a squad of prohibition agents arrive suddenly. In a purple casket, lined with light gray satin, three dozen quarts of high grade Scotch whiskey reposed; more whiskey was found in a body casket, while the casket cupboards lining the rear room of the establishment were loaded with cases of whiskey, the agents said. Sam Harris, one of the partners was arrested.

THE WOMAN HE MARRIED

BY JANE PHELPS

AN OFFER OF HELP

Chapter 70

Mr. Burns came early, as he had said he would, before 3 o'clock. He seemed very pleasant was lovely to Junior, to whom he had brought a toy horse, and very flattering to me. He commented upon my appearance saying.

"So few women knew how to dress. You seem to have the art of wearing clothes well."

He could have said nothing that would have appealed to me more strongly. After a bit I spoke of Dick then emboldened by his attitude, the nice way he responded, I mentioned how worried and anxious he had been and that he had lost a great deal in L. C. C.

"That is, of course, a great deal for us" I explained, blushing that I talked about money to anyone but Dick, or a woman friend.

"Too bad Mr. Williams couldn't have hung on. The stock is all right, it was only a raid."

"But Dick couldn't know that, then—I don't think he had money enough to take care of it any longer. Our capital is very limited."

"Too bad! I wish you would let me help you."

There it was at last! His proposition to help us. I trembled so I could scarcely speak, as I replied:

"Thank you, Mr. Burns that will be lovely of you."

"Call me Clarence, Nan." Then "I think you have the prettiest name I know, Nan!" He repeated it with a smirk.

I felt embarrassed unaccountably so. Why should his tone and manner change so suddenly? Perhaps he misinterpreted it. He was trying to be kind.

"I never have called anyone but my husband by his first name—any man." I said rather stiltedly.

"Then it is time you commenced," he laughed and patted my hand which hung over the arm of my chair. Then "Now tell me what Dick is doing in the market. You say he let his stock go?"

"Yes, he has only some T. L. M. now."

"Then why is he worried?"

"Because he lost so much of our capital and, well; because we owe quite a good deal. You see," I stumbled on "he—we—were so sure that you knew all about L. C. C. that we bought more than we would have otherwise I let my dressmaker and others wait, thinking we surely would make enough to warrant it." I spoke of the dressmaker because he had mentioned my dressing and because I felt in some way it was more usual than to owe for household expenses."

"Who makes your charming gowns?" He still held my hand, and patted it in a fatherly fashion.

"Felice."

"You are an extravagant little minx to go to her. Even if I am a bachelor I know something of her prices. But how much do you owe?"

I flushed painfully to have the question so bluntly put. I don't know what I exected. I wanted him to help us yet someway I felt terribly embarrassed and uneasy. I think the uneasiness was uppermost. Yet I quickly thought of what I should say—the amount I should tell him. Everyone said dred would mean nothing to him I figured.

"Two thousand dollars." I said faintly. I counted in what I owed both Mildred and Clara and that would just about pay our debts.

A long drawn whistle puckered his lips.

"You are extravagant! I like your nerve though. A woman owes it to herself to look her best, and you certainly pay that debt, if no other." He took out his checkbook and I thought was going to give me the $2 00 right then and there. Instead he leaned toward me, pulled me from my chair and tried to embrace me. I drew back insulted horrified.

I scarcely understood the full meaning of what he was saying but I ordered him from the house. That he should dare say such things to me Dick's wife! That he should even think he could! I was terrible. When he understood that I meant what I said, he went—but not before he had said sneeringly, he hoped I would be able to pay Felice and others I owe without his assistance.

I hated him! I felt unclean as if I had been in some terribly dirty place. And I couldn't tell Dick. He had enough to worry him now without telling him of Mr. Burns' insult to me. It would drive him frantic, and lead to—I shuddered as I thought of what he might do if he knew.

Retail Merchants Hold Their Annual Reunion

cy lately is to buy the cheap article and not pay the price of superior goods. The merchant today stands in a peculiar position with the consumer clamoring for cheaper goods and the manufacturers announcing that they are to be dearer. The cure for the present state of affairs was with the Press.

After a song by Mr. Ed. Saunders pleasingly rendered, Mr. J. Cuthbertson Doyle delivered an address of about one hour's duration. In this address he expressed his delight in being back again in Charlottetown where he always received inspiration to do better. He declared that Charlottetown stood pre-eminent in the organization, all uniting loyally, there being no foreign element or the usual conditions which in larger centres are liable to make for discord.

Mr. Doyle then gave a very comprehensive outline of the main activities in the Dominion Association during the year and quoted largely from the address of the President, delivered at the Winnipeg convention.

At the close of his address of which space will not permit of an outline, the speaker was accorded a hearty vote of thanks which he fittingly acknowledged.

Then came the election of officers, the result being as follows:

President—J. P. Gordon.
Vice President—B. W. LePage, M. L. A.
Secretary—W. A. Stewart.
Treasurer—Sextus McLellan

The meeting then adjourned.

Tribute to Mr. Chester McLure

The "Fur Trade Review", published in New York, the oldest and most influential journal of the kind in America in its January issue says:

We do not believe that there is anyone in the fur world who is better entitled to the right to be called the greatest judge of silver black foxes than W. Chester McLure, of Charlottetown, Prince Edward Island. Mr. McLure had the unique distinction last year of being a judge at the three fox shows held at Boston, Montreal and Muskegon. It speaks well for his ability as an expert when it is recalled that at all three shows his decisions were received without question.

The wonderful growth and development of the silver black fox industry were most manifest in 19[illegible] The fact that three highly successful shows were held, and a surprisingly large number of animals exhibited, demonstrated once and for all that the breeding of silver black foxes in captivity is an accomplished fact, and that the furs produced are the equal of, if not better than, any taken from the wild.

The introduction of these beautiful furs to the trade, their marketing and steady supply can in no small measure be attributed to the energy, perseverance and business ability of Mr. McLure.

Fittingly Remembered

Mr. Michael McCarey, who has been a faithful employee of the P. E. Island Railway for 45 years and is now retiring from active service was fittingly remembered several days ago when he was presented with a well filled purse by his fellow employees. Master Mechanic P. McQuaid made the formal presentation and read the following address.

Michael McCarey, Esq.,
Charlottetown.

Dear Sir,—Having learned that you are to be retired on the Provident Fund after a service on the C. N. R., extending from 1875 we your fellow-employees, desire to express our deep regret at your departure, and our appreciation of your many, manly qualities displayed during your long and faithful service.

For nearly half a century you have been employed in those shops in various capacities, in all of which you have acquitted yourself to the entire satisfaction of your superiors, and on your retirement you have the proud satisfaction of knowing that not a single demerit is shown against you.

I conclusion, we ask you to accept this small gift which, we trust, will be a more convincing proof of our esteem than mere words.

Mr. McCarey made a suitable reply, heartily thanking his friends for their kindness.

ENGLISH TEACHERS COMING TO CANADA.—As a sequel to the suggestions made by the Canadian education authorities for an exchange of British elementary and secondary teachers with Canadian a number of English teachers are shortly leaving for Canada for a year's tour. The city of York is introducing this novel experiment through Alderman J. B. Morell, who recently returned from a tour of Canadian towns and cities. It is understood that an interchange has been arranged between five or six principal Canadian towns. The teachers are paying their own travelling expenses but will receive salaries from the schools they visit the same as Canadian teachers exchanging here.

First Bonspiel of Season

The first Bonspiel of this season was held at the Charlottetown Curling Rink beginning Thursday afternoon and lasting well into the morning before a large crowd of spectators and the interest taken was manifested in the shouts of encouragement that came from onlookers and the players themselves "whoa" and "sweep" rending the air in all tones and cadences.

It was a "rip, roarin" game from start to finish, forty-five players taking part in the games played.

There were several splendid prizes offered which made the outcome more interesting and each rink worked well for the highest score.

The Charlottetown Selling agency donated a cap as one of the prizes and it was won by Mr. D. A. MacKinnon who made the highest score of the day.

At 6.15 and again at 10.30 p. m. luncheon was served to the hungry and excited curlers by Mrs. J. Fitzgerald, Mrs. Ted Reddin and Mrs. Alex. Scott, the players doing full justice to the good things provided.

Mr. C. L. Miles has generously offered a prize of four tins of Players cigarettes to be played for at a later date.
