Finances, Education Problems Confront Prov. Legislatures

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

By mid-February Canada's provincial legislatures are expected to be in session, and a Cross-Canada Survey by The Canadian Press shows all will be struggling with the problems of municipal finances and education costs in various forms.

Quebec opens its legislative session Jan. 14, following the next day by Ontario. The British Columbia House starts work Jan. 23. Though no firm dates have been announced for Newfoundland, Nova Scotia, New Brunswick or Saskatchewan, all are expected to start on or before Feb. 13. The Manitoba legislature opens Feb. 6, Prince Edward Island Feb. 11 and Alberta Feb. 13.

Reports from provincial capitals indicate that only Saskatchewan faces the prospect of an election after its session. Premier Woodrow Lloyd, who leads 33 CCF members in the legislature at Regina against a Liberal opposition of 21, is expected to call the vote for April, May or June.

Natural resources rank as major debating topics in at least two provinces.

Newfoundland is awaiting a consultant's report on financing a $45,000,000 bond issue for a new privately owned pulp mill. When the report is received the legislature will be called into session, Premier Joey Smallwood has said, adding it would be "early in the new year."

IRON FOR JAPAN

Newfoundland also expects debate on Premier Smallwood's plan to sign contracts with Japanese interests for sale of iron ore from projects proposed for Labrador.

British Columbia is looking to final approval of the Columbia River treaty under which the province will sell its downstream power benefits to the United States while going ahead with its own hydro development on the northern Peace River. Also being considered is possible use of the Fraser River for power.

In Prince Edward Island, a municipal affairs act, the province's first, is expected to be introduced.

Rising education costs in Nova Scotia will be mainly responsible for an expected boost to $108,794,000 from $100,412,000 in the provincial budget. A royal commission has been studying the cost of borrowing money in the province and is expected to make its report in the coming session. During last fall's election campaign Premier Robert Stanfield promised there would be no tax increases.

In New Brunswick another commission has been studying municipal finances and taxation. Its report is expected before the legislature meets, prompting debate and perhaps some legislation.

Premier Jean Lesage of Quebec has promised provincial portable pensions legislation which will include using accumulated capital for provincial development.

In Ontario, a budget of between $1,400,000,000 and $1,500,000,000 is in prospect. Debate is expected to be heated on medical care insurance. A new Liberal leader will be chosen to succeed John Wintermeyer who quit after his personal defeat in the election last year that saw Premier John Robarts' Conservatives return with an increased majority.

Finances are major issues on the Prairies. Manitoba may have to impose retail sales taxes to meet rising costs. The province along with Saskatchewan, is considering the question of financing Roman Catholic separate high schools. Alberta is planning to subsidize low-income groups with payment of medical insurance premiums.

Other major items coming up for debate in the legislatures include:

Newfoundland: Lowering the voting age from 21, though not necessarily to 18.

P.E.I.: Revision of the Highway Traffic Act, higher civil service salaries and adjustment of the island's liquor laws.

Nova Scotia: Establishment of a ministry of fisheries and study of a royal commission report on a ministry of fisheries and study of a royal commission report on school bus safety.

New Brunswick: Electoral reform, possibly including a redistribution of constituencies in line with population shifts.

Quebec: Establishment of an education ministry and reenactment of the provincial labor code following public hearings last year.

Ontario: New laws governing sale of used cars, and stiffer licensing regulations for dealers.

Manitoba: Revision of the Manitoba Companies Securities Act, financial assistance for hospitals, financial aid for parochial schools, and study of religious education in public schools.

Saskatchewan: Revision of land expropriation laws, an investigation of child care on Indian reserves, and possibly a plan to let cities share in taxes paid by industries located just outside their borders.

Alberta: Legislation to require lending agencies to state clearly the interest rate and service charge they make in contracts, and revision of the Landlord and Tenants Act and the Land Titles Act to bring them into line with modern urban growth.

British Columbia: Opposition demands for more social workers in the province, which now has fewer than it did 10 years ago.

Opening lead — queen of diamonds.

Many a contract depends upon how the cards are divided in a particular suit.

For example, consider this hand where South is in six no-trump. Declarer can count eleven winners after West makes the opening lead, and his only chance of making a twelfth trick lies in bringing home four club tricks instead of three.

Ordinarily, for this to take place, declarer would have to find the clubs divided 3-3. But in the actual case, South should make his four club tricks and the slam, even though it turns out that the clubs are divided 5-1. Moreover, he should accomplish this feat without the benefit of seeing the East-West hands.

Declarer wins the diamond lead with the king and plays the king of spades, West taking the ace and continuing with the jack of diamonds.

South wins with the ace, East discarding a spade. At this point declarer has no idea how the clubs are divided and how he will eventually fare, but, in order to learn as much as he can about the composition of the adverse hands, he cashes four heart tricks.

This sheds a lot of light on the matter because West shows up with four hearts, which, added to his six diamonds and the ace of spades West has already shown up with in the play, accounts for 11 of his original 13 cards.

When South now leads a spade to the jack and West follows suit he learns that West could not possibly have been dealt more than one club.

Accordingly, he cashes the king of clubs. West playing the ten, and then leads a club from dummy. If East follows with the seven, declarer finesses the eight, confident that it will win, since West can have no more clubs.

It does not help East to play the nine instead of the seven, since South can take it with the queen and return to dummy with a spade for another club lead through East's J-7.

DAILY CRYPTOQUOTE — Here's how to work it:

A X Y D L B A A X R
is L O N G F E L L O W

One letter simply stands for another. In this sample A is used for the three L's, X for the two O's, etc. Single letters, apostrophies, the length and formation of the words are all hints. Each day the code letters are different.
