THE CHARLOTTETOWN GUARDIAN

TUESDAY, JANUARY 19, 1909.

CANADIAN BANK OF COMMERCE.

The annual statement of this bank is printed on another page of today's Guardian. It is a highly assuring statement. With a paid-up capital of ten millions and a rest account of six millions, the Canadian Bank of Commerce stands easily in the front rank among the monetary institutions not only of Canada but of the American continent. Its numerous branches are located throughout the length and breadth of the Dominion. It has long had a reputation for able and prudent management, such as inspires public confidence.

Last year was noted in the commercial world as a period of depression, and yet the net profits of the Canadian Bank of Commerce for the year amounted to $1,637,332. Something less than half this amount was appropriated for the 8 per cent dividend, while of the remainder, with the balance brought forward from last year, a million was added to the rest account. The shareholders thus obtain a fair return for their investment while the stability of the bank is by so much enchanced.

The Bank of Commerce began business here a few years ago under the able and popular management of the late J. M. Davison, whose demise was felt to be a public loss. He is succeeded by H. A. Holmes under whose capable direction it is to be confidently expected the usefulness, prestige and popularity of the bank will be fully maintained.

EXPRESS DELAYS.

It is little wonder that there is so much complaint regarding the service given by express companies throughout Canada. On Thursday last The Guardian was advised by wire that two rollers urgently required for its printing press were on that day being shipped from Toronto. Yesterday on arrival of the mail special from Georgetown enquiry was made of the Canadian Express office in this city, for the box containing the two rollers in question, but the reply made was that it had not arrived. A telegram was at once despatched to the shippers in Toronto and a reply received that the box was shipped on Thursday.

The same night not only a Grand Trunk train but also a C. P. R. train left that city about ten o'clock arriving in Montreal the following morning. On Friday at noon an I. C. R. train left Montreal and the same evening a C. P. R. train both for Pictou, the former arriving about six o'clock p. m. and the latter at 10.35 p. m. on Saturday.

There were thus two routes from Toronto to Pictou with time enough and to spare for connections, but this was of no avail. The Boards of Trade of this Province and throughout Canada, as well as business men and the public generally do well to record their protests against the unreasonable delays which so frequently occur in the express service.

Nobody in this world knows very much about the unseen world to which we are all sometime to make our way. It lies beyond all merely human observation and experience. "We have but faith we cannot know, for knowledge is of things we see." None the less the subject is one of absorbing interest and many will want to hear what Percy Pope will have to say on the subject tonight. Mr. Pope is a profound student of both science and religion, whose blended and not discordant lights may possibly lead to clearer and sounder views as to what lies in the great beyond than have hitherto been generally held.

THE WESTERN VIEW.

"The Intercolonial has never paid interest on its cost. The Maritime Provinces have always regarded it as their consolation for entering confederation. If it had paid they might have seen a grievance in the achievement."

The above is taken from the Canadian Courier, which usually takes a fair and broad-minded view of public matters. This is unfair and illiberal, to a degree. It betrays the narrow spirit of the far inlander. It insinuation that the Maritime Provinces are seeking for grievances and subjects of irritation is hardly worthy of a journal claiming to be national.

The canals have cost as much as the Intercolonial. They are like the railway a Government property. They happen to be in Ontario and Quebec. They do not pay and have never paid interest on their cost, or working expenses. A few years ago they were made free of tolls for the benefit of the people of Ontario and Quebec whom they serve.

The Courier complains that the Maritime people have been given low rates on the Intercolonial and that an increase in rates has not been proposed by any politician at least not by any politician in the Maritime Provinces!" Save the mark. And Ontario utilises the Government canals without any tolls at all.

Moreover the Intercolonial has now and always had local rates that were paying rates. It has been demonstrated a score of times that the traffic on which losses are made is the through traffic from Ontario and Quebec, carried at less than cost. If any has profited by the socalled "low rates" on the Intercolonial it is the manufacturers, merchants and producers of Ontario and Quebec.

Here in Prince Edward Island we are paying from two to five times the rates for equal distance on the Government Railways, along with Government steamers that the people of Ontario pay on their through traffic on either the company or Government railways.

In the face of these facts it is adding insult to injury when Ontario newspapers and serial publications discuss Intercolonial affairs in the temper and terms used by the Canadian Courier. But the people of Ontario do not know the facts. Their newspapers have much to say about the I. C. R. not paying, but are discreetly silent about the canals.

The Guardian is informed that as a result of the highly successful Exhibition held last fall the directors of the King's County Exhibition Association have declared a dividend to the shareholders, of 12 per cent. This is something handsome.

The Toronto Globe recently sent Mr. Blue, a member of its staff, to the Maritime Provinces to sound public opinion in regard to suggested changes in the management of the Intercolonial Railway. To The Telegraph in St. John on the eve of his return to Toronto, Mr. Blue stated that he found the plan of an independent commission to be very much in favor, and on the other hand found very little support for the transfer of the road by sale or lease to one or other of the big railway companies.

A HUNDRED YEARS FROM NOW.

There's a picture in the window
Of a little shop I know,
With boys and girls dressed as they were
A hundred years ago.
And since I saw it, I have thought,
And keep on thinking how
The children, maybe, will be dressed
A hundred years from now.

Will girls wear caps or farthingales,
Or hoops in grand array?
Will they wear bows like butterflies,
Just as they do today?
Will boys wear jackets short, or tie
The hair in queues? Just how
They'll really look, I'd like to know
A hundred years from now.

What do you think the boys and girls
Will eat in those far days?
Will they be fed on breakfast foods
In many sorts of ways?
With all the good and nasty things
Be worse for them than rice?
Will ice cream soda make them sick,
And everything that's nice.

Will children's books have pictures then,
Or just all reading be?
Perhaps they'll be hand-painted and
Most beautiful to see.
But when I think of these I have,
I truly don't see how
They can be any prettier
A hundred years from now.

GREAT DISTRUCTION OF AUTOMOBILES

BOSTON, Jan. 18—Thirty minutes after fire was discovered in the old Providence depot three hundred and fifty automobiles, worth eight hundred thousand dollars had been destroyed.

The old depot was converted into a garage, the most extensive in the city, employed for a repair and storage building, situated between Berkley Street and Columbus Avenue. In an instant after the fire was discovered, the flames were shooting in all directions, but the adjoining buildings were all well protected and the fire confined to the one place.
