Private Sale
A Rare Opportunity to obtain a home combining the advantages of CITY, COUNTRY and SEASHORE, is now offered by the undersigned who will dispose, at private sale, of his residence and property at 126 Brighton Road, Charlottetown, adjoining the beautiful Victoria Park and on the shore overlooking the entrance to Charlottetown harbor.

Residence contains twelve rooms and has all modern conveniences, including the best type of pipeless furnace, recently installed and eminently satisfactory. House is thoroughly repaired and painted, is completely equipped with good storm windows and fly screens, and has a spacious verandah on three sides.

Outbuildings consist of barn about 35x20 containing a garage 18x20 and stable room for three horses or cows, a hen house and an ice or wood house the latter of which is now filled with sufficient ice for the season. All are in good repair.

There are about four acres of exceptionally fertile land including a beautiful and well kept lawn and a large vegetable garden in a high and forward state of cultivation. Fruit trees consist of apple, plum and cherry. There is a strawberry and a blackberry patch.

In a word the above is a home for the discerning few who demand and know and appreciate what is best. Inspection is invited.

"THE LOVE PENDULUM"

BY MARION RUBINCAM

GWENDOLYN

Chapter 32

The only thing to do was to call her Gwendolyn, or better yet, by her pet name Gwen. I did not like to either. I'm afraid I never liked her at all.

Yet in justice to her, there were many likeable qualities. Whatever reason I had later for my dislike, I had no reason at all that day, or for sometime afterwards.

I sat beside her while she poured tea from a great brass samovar which stood on a low table by her, and I watched her closely and critically. Perhaps a dozen persons came and went while we sat there.

When we rose to leave she detained us and kept us until all the others had gone.

Meantime the artist she mentioned had arrived, a well-known painter from Paris, who had met my father over there. He was tall and middle-aged and distinguished. He kissed the hands of the women who were present in a courtly manner that was very becoming to him, and I saw Win's eyes on him. Win was taking notes from him too, for Win learned fast.

There was a stock broker present, a physician, a civil engineer, a boy from college, and some others. Gwen seemed able to talk to all on his or her special subject.

It was baseball with the college boy.

"I tried to get up a "nine" in the little village near Laurier—my summer home, you know. It's a medieval French village near the Loire, my chateau is on a wee hill at its very edge. Those little boys—they were amusing!" She flashed a smile at him, all the time pouring tea and managing the tea things. "They can't, you know, they simply can't. Born and bred to work, it will take generations before they can learn to play. I was umpire. One lad made a home-run once—." She went on, rattling out baseball slang as easily as he did and keeping him laughing with her descriptions.

"Another cup, my dear. Of course! You like three lumps, don't you? I always remember." The boy had gone, the artist was standing by her, his cup in his hand. He, too, was given that strange fascinating smile of hers.

"Yes, this is the charming child I spoke of. Don't you think she should be done a bit after the French manner?" Her left hand rested a moment on mine. "Those eyes and that rumple of gold hair? Do you remember the group of cherubs at the National Gallery in London? And the day we were there! Ah, mon ami, that was a perfect day!

"And by the way," she had forgotten me in another interest, "you haven't been in town long enough to see the Avenue Gallery Exhibition, have you? Only some work by a young student, an American who has been studying in Paris. But such effects! A landscape Cezanne himself might have done—you must see it."

She took in the whole room now. Win was watching her, fascinated. "Such a manner for a beginner! Such lines, such bold, sweeping effects! Sometimes he leaves whole patches of canvas bare. Sometimes he pours his pigment on, just squeezing it from the tube. But the effect of depth he achieves! The ease and boldness of all old painter, the emotionalism of maturity—he's barely 21!"

The painter left, joining another group. Gwendolyn smiled at the stock broker, who came over and sat on a chair near her tea table.

"I have a hunch about Cardinal Copper," she announced.

"Another hunch! My dear Gwen, your hunches are extraordinary." The man had a clear, booming voice. The room listened when he talked.

"But I've been right—how many times?"

"Eight out of ten, I should say," the man answered. "What is it to be, up or down?"

"Down ten points this week. I want to sell 5000 short as soon as it moves. Will you let me know instantly the minute something happens? You remember I went short on steel a week before the last smash? I said this Canadian strike situation would have an effect—"

She rattled on. She seemed to have the stock market in hand as thoroughly as she had art, baseball, politics or books.

"Did you ever see such a woman?" Winthrop asked as we drove home.

"Yes—that is, if you mean women as versatile as she is," I answered.

"Did you ever know one as clever? Why, she knows all about everything. Last night she was talking music. There was a chap there who played. They were at it all evening. She knew as much as he did. She went over and played a little on the piano to illustrate something she said. She does that wonderfully too."

"Everyone is taught music enough to play a little," I answered, growing cross at this continual praise.

"But you should have heard her—and the way she talked about it. She composes too. That's something not many people can do."

Again I kept silent. I intended to watch the copper stock she was talking of, and to see the pictures she was enthusing over. At least I could judge then whether her judgment was as good as everyone seemed to believe. Then I did a foolish thing.

"Win," I said suddenly, "I believe you are falling in love with her!"

Instantly I was sorry. But it was said.

YOUNG DAUGHTER MADE WELL

Mother Tells How Her Daughter Suffered and Was Made Well by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Vancouver, B. C.—"My daughter is a young girl who has been having severe pains and weak and dizzy feelings for some time and had lost her appetite. Through an older daughter who had heard of a woman who was taking it for the same trouble, we were told of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. My daughter has been taking it for several months and is quite all right now. It has done all it was represented to do and we have told a number of friends about it. I am never without a bottle of it in the house for I myself take it for that weak, tired, worn-out feeling which sometimes comes to us all. I find it is building me up and I strongly recommend it to women who are suffering as I and my daughter have."—Mrs. J. McDONALD, 2947 26th Ave. East, Vancouver, B.C.

From the age of twelve a girl needs all the care a thoughtful mother can give. Many a woman has suffered years of pain and misery—the victim of thoughtlessness or ignorance of the mother who should have guided her during this time.

If she complains of headaches, pains in the back and lower limbs, or or if you notice a slowness of thought, nervousness or irritability on the part of your daughter, make life easier for her. C

OLIVE OIL BRINGS SILKY SHEEN TO DULLEST HAIR

What is the secret that is giving beautiful hair to thousands of women? Simply the use of Olive Oil in the shampoo! Hair specialists say that hair should never be washed without it. For it keeps hair from dry, brittle dullness. You can have this luxury at home now, cheaply. Just get a bottle of PALMOLIVE SHAMPOO—at any drug or department store. Use it but a few times and you will marvel at the lovely sheen it gives to your hair. Cleanses gently. Leaves hair gleaming and soft as finest silk.

Privy Council Upholds Supreme Court Judgment

(British United Press)

LONDON, July 22.—The Privy Council upheld the judgment of the Supreme Court of Canada with costs in the action of the Provincial treasurer of Alberta versus the Canadian Northern Railway.

Lord Haldane Sumner, Harmoor and Phillimore debated exhaustively the question whether the words "any statute" are applicable only to provincial statutes. It is hardly necessary to say that the ordinary grammatical sense of the words in the statutes should be adhered to unless in so doing it leads to absurdity repugnacy and inconsistency which is not the case in the present instance.

CAN EAT HIS OWN LENGTH IN MACKEREL.

EASTBOURNE, July23.—All the romances of the South Seas have produced a few "beach-combers" more picturesque than Mr. and Mrs. Hugget, whose life on the beach here, according to them, has much of the glamour, if infinitely more rigour, than that of the dwellers on the palm shaded shores of the Pacific.

But if they are fascinated by the situation of their home, to residents in the neighbourhood it is not so fascinating, and thus the follow- of the Watch Committee which are ing is to be found in the Minutes to be submitted to the Eastburne Towa Council at its next meeting.

"Complaint of misance arising from a woman living on the beach at the fishing station referred to the Chief Constable for attention."

Thisterse sentence gives little idea of the romance of the Huggets. The husband, who is 75 years of age, has lived all his life out of doors, and he treats the sweeping winter winds of the Channel as if they were the warm breezes of the Pacific. The beach is his home and his life. Here he lives in the bitterest weather, with his 43 year old wife, a Cultured travelled woman, who speaks five languages. Their present home is a piece of old canvas propped up by sticks. For the last eight years this has been their shelter. Their bed has been the soft sand.

Hugget is a boatman, and states that any other life would kill him. He is weather-beaten and tanned, but stiong as an ox, and still a stranger to a day's illness. He has had thirteen children, eight of whom are alive, and he is grandfather to 35.

His chief fame, however, lies in his appetite. No mangoes or luscious tropical food for Philip. Just to watch him eating his breakfast is one of the sights of Eastbourne. Every morning he puts away at least 12 eggs, a loaf of bread, and two quarts of milk. His only poast is "I can eat my own length in mackerel."

Many People Wonder

why it is that glasses are worn more commonly in the present generation than in the past. Some say that the race is deteriorating, some that is for style, but the real reason is that our modern civilization requires the eye to do more work than was even the case before.

Consequently, the eyes, if in the least defective, may give you a lot of trouble though in reality they are no worse than those of your grandfather who did not wear glasses till he was an old man.

If you feel the least symptom of eyestrain, remember that it is natures warning to you and consult us at once.
