To Maintain Print Butter Quality

In recent surveys of print butter in different parts of Canada in wholesale establishments and on retailers' premises, considerable variation in quality of butter branded and sold as First Grade has been found, D. M. Beattie, Associate Chief, Dairy Products, Grading and Inspection Services, Dominion Department of Agriculture, said at the recent meeting of the New Brunswick Dairymen's Association, held at Fredericton. Butter in First Grade wrappers was lowered in grade for having flavours which indicated that little attention had been paid to the grading of cream. Also, butter of First Grade flavour, but showing ordinary workmanship defects, was lowered from First Grade, on the indication that proper working of the butter had been neglected.

Butter was found in First Grade wrappers which had been purchased on First Grade certificates, but had been removed from the solids, reworked in the churn with an addition of salt, and when examined in print form was placed in Second and Third Grades for showing mottled colour and containing undissolved salt, and, in some cases, free moisture. Other butter purchased for First Grade was put improperly through the power cutting machines, and it was necessary to lower the grade of the prints for weak texture, streaky or wavy uneven colour, and free moisture or leakiness. All the defects mentioned were traceable to the manufacturer or cutter of the butter, and indicated that the butter was improperly branded as to quality when it reached the retail store for distribution to the consumer.

On the other hand, the responsibility of the retailer when he receives butter of the First Grade quality, is to see that his purchases are in line with sales, so that no unusual accumulation of butter takes place. His storage facilities should be satisfactory to keep the butter well refrigerated and that it should be stored so that no absorption of undesirable flavours will taint the surface of the print while in his possession.

OTTAWA, Dec. 5 —(CP)— Col. O. L. McCullough, M. B. E., of Hamilton has been appointed chief administrative assistant of the Veterans Department, Veterans Minister McKenzie announced tonight. He will act as senior assistant to Walter Woods, Deputy Minister, and will be responsible for supervising the allowances and personal services at Ottawa, as well as other administrative functions.
