THE KING'S COUNTY GUARDIAN

Offices in Montague, Capt. W. A. Johnstone, Agent, and in Souris, A. J. McDonald, Agent.

The latest news, first of all.

Miss Maggie Sencabough, has returned to Georgetown after visiting Miss Annie Keir, Malpeque.

All amounts for Guardian advertising and subscriptions in Montague and vicinity should be paid to W. A. Johnstone, agent, and in Souris and vicinity to A. J. McDonald, agent. 1—10drtf.

Mrs Capt L. McNeil, Mrs A. Bell and Miss Emery of Wood Islands, were in Montague Friday on their way home from Farmington, where they have been visiting Mrs Geo Robertson. While there they visited friends in Souris, Rollo Bay, St. Peters, and the famous summer resort Bay Fortune. They were delighted with the scenery of that section of the country, and the kindness of the people.

To the Editor of The Chronicle:

Sir:—My attention has been directed to Principal J. Fearon's letter in your issue of recent date in reference to the depredations of the white-marked Tussock moth in Nova Scotia but especially in Halifax. In no form of activity is the old adage, "A stitch in Time Saves Nine," more true than in the war against insect pests. Practical men might adopt the paraphrase "A dollar in Time Saves Nine," and the tree lover would add, "and saves the trees." The custom of waiting until considerable damage has been inflicted by the pest, until gaunt and bare branches take the place of leafy shade, is only too common in many of our cities in Canada. Action should be taken at the earliest stage possible as nothing is more discomforting and unsightly than the sight of what were once handsome shade trees, now almost killed and wretchedly struggling for existence. Opportunity is been taken, therefore, of making certain suggestions, which if adopted by the civic authorities and individual citizens, would help save this most valuable form of public property.

The most conspicuous stage in the life-history of the white-marked tussock moth is the egg mass which the female covers with a whitesh substance. Each egg mass contains 200 to 400 eggs desposited upon the old cocoon and these egg masses are generally located on the trunks and larger branches of the trees; some, however, are found in crevices, on wooden palings and in other places to which the caterpillars have crawled to spin their cocoons. The gathering and destruction of these conspicuous egg masses during the winter before the young caterpillars hatch in May or June is the best radictative measure that can be employed. The egg masses can be gathered either by scraping them off the bark or other attachment by means of a small scraper or by hand, or they may be destroyed by creosote oil, as in the case of the egg masses of the gipsy moth; by merely moistening the egg mass with creosote the eggs will be destroyed.

These operations can be carried on during the winter and a small gang of men would be able to treat all the trees within the city limit during the period that the insect is in the egg stage. If all the egg masses on a tree are destroyed and a three-inch band of "tanglefoot" is painted around the trunk of the tree at a height of about 4 or 5 feet, in May or June, the tree may be kept free from the caterpillars, owing to the fact that the female moth cannot fly and the caterpillars could only reach the foliage by crawling up the trunk, having hatched from eggs in another situation.

In Rochester, N. Y., where the ravages of this insect were very serious prizes were offered, in 1894, to school children gathering the largest number of egg clusters, and excellent results were obtained. It should be pointed out, however, that such a competitive method among young people is not so safe as through the employment of men to hunt out every egg mass, for which much tree climbing is necessary; the children might be encouraged to aid such men. If the above method of destruction is adopted it may not be necessary to resort to spraying the trees with an arsenical poison, as many cities are accustomed to do. But should such a procedure be found advisable great care should be exercised in the selection of spraying pumps and the method of spraying. In many places more arsenical spray finds it way into the drains than on to the leaves, owing to faulty methods of spraying. Mr Fearon refers to the use of steam sprayers in the United States, but no doubt he means power sprayers, which are run by gasoline engines, such as are employed in the Gipsy and Brown-tail Moth work in the New England States.

The cost of destroying the egg masses of the moth and the banding of the trees with tanglefoot is insignificant compared with the results—healthy shade trees in the streets and parks, a protection from the sun and a pleasure to the eye.

GREAT MILITARY CHANGES TO BE MADE IN CANADA.

OTTAWA, Aug. 27—Upon Brigadier General McKenzie, now Chief of staff and Chief Military Adviser in Canada, will devolve the work of carrying out the charges recommended by General French. The work will be a considerable one covering some years. To do away with the present system of Military Districts and replace with a system of commands will be the work of considerable magnitude. It will mean that many new artillery and cavalry corps will be added to the militia force. At present these arms of the service number some 5,000 men; each number will have to be doubled while to equip additional batteries with guns and outfit will involve an expenditure of several millions. There will also be the task of organizing head-quarters staff for each of the military commands.

THE CALL OF THE BOSS.

I'm folding up my bungalow, although I'd rather not,
I've packed away my fishing kit, for I must leave this spot,
I've passed my last farewells around to all my woodland mates,
I've got to leave these surroundings where lie buried all my hates,
The ripples in yon rocky brook must ripple all alone,
I'll miss those happy, healthy days I sprawled beside it prone,
With joyful visions rising of a juicy, speckled "beaut"
Oh, how I yelped with rapture when my highest hopes bore fruit.

I'd like to catch another trout before I take the train,
I'd like to stay up here awhile and tempt them once again,
Perhaps that big one in the pool might nibble pretty soon,
But—dash it all—this message says, be back in town at noon.
The rising sun gives promise of another splendid day,
The birds are singing songs, but I must break away,
All nature bids me linger, but the boss will not allow,
I've got to leave these surroundings, for the office needs me now.

Each spark has been extinguished where my cheering camp-fire burned,
My outfit's on my shoulder, and my back to freedom's turned.
My briar pipe—the dearest pal lone camper ever had,
I'll carry back to Boston town to cheer me when I'm sad;
My head is full of wood-lore but my pocket's short of cash.
I'm dragging stubborn feet along as overland I dash—
Back to the old typewriter for me,
Back to the office high,
Until my pocket book can heave another fishing sigh.

SPECIAL OFFER TO CANDIDATES

We are anxious to help all candidates entered in the Big $11,000 Price Contest. We appreciate the splendid work that has been done during the first period that closed last Saturday night. The sole object of this contest in the giving away of $11,000 in Prizes is to increase the circulation. We want 50,000 NEW readers. This means many thousands of NEW names. People who have hitherto not regularly taken The Charlottetown Guardian, The Halifax Herald, The Mail or The Weekly. To further encourage contestants to obtain the largest possible number of NEW regular readers we have decided to make this further offer.

To each candidate who sends in FIVE NEW YEARLY subscribers to either The Halifax Herald, The Evening Mail or The Weekly Mail and Homestead, for when secured in conjunction with The Charlottetown Guardian, we will allow the same ratio of votes as issued for ONE FIVE YEAR subscription according to the schedule at the time the subscriptions are received. This will apply during this period which ends Sept. 3rd and opens wide the OPPORTUNITY for ALL candidates to secure the ratio of votes. This by no means alters the existing schedule, but gives those candidates who cannot secure long term subscriptions a fine chance to secure the votes necessary to win the prize they are working for. Remember this only applies to NEW SUBSCRIBERS and candidates will be careful to ascertain whether names sent in are already on our mailing list. Mark each slip carefully and write name and address plainly. The extra votes will be issued at the end of the period.

GET BUSY NOW AND RUSH IN THE NEW NAMES BEFORE SEPT. 3rd.
