Sloan's Liniment

Read this unsolicited grateful testimony—

Not long ago my left knee became lame and sore. It pained me many restless nights. So serious did it become that I was forced to consider giving up my work when I chanced to think of Sloan's Liniment. Let me say—less than one bottle fixed me up.

When You Want Paint, Buy Good Paint---"Sherwin-Williams"

We sell only one kind of paint and that is Sherwin-Williams Paint. There are lots of other paints on the market and we could sell any of them, but we believe that in Sherwin-Williams we are offering you the very best paint value possible.

Sherwin-Williams paints will stand and amount of sun, wind, rain, hail, snow, frost or air because there is good body to the paint and there is no adulteration used in any of the fifty Sherwin-Williams processes.

There is a Sherwin-Williams paint for any purpose—for your furniture, floors, walls, barns, out-buildings, farm implements, engines or boat.

And we can honestly say that no matter what you use Sherwin-Williams paints for—if it is the right kind of paints for the purpose—it will give you perfect and lasting satisfaction.

—MISLEADING.—In the Guardian of Feb. 24th, there appeared an item referring to the raising of the schooner Apati, Capt. Giffin, Halifax, which was somewhat misleading, as the schooner was represented to be in a most difficult position off Egmont Bay. This schooner, it will be remembered, ran ashore off Egmont Bay in the big rain storm of last July and has since been the subject of much interest to the community at large. Captain T. H. Giffin, the owner, who called at this office yesterday, on his way to Halifax, stated that the contractors whose tender had been accepted, do not anticipate any special trouble over the vessel's position in the ice and are now busily engaged preparing for its successful floating which they hope to accomplish in the near future.

VALUE OF THE CURRY COMB

The value of the curry comb is universally recognized by horse-men, but as yet, grooming of the dairy cow is not generally practiced on the average farm. With the scarcity of labor most farmers find other work occupying their time, they believe, to better advantage than carrying the cows. The question arises: will it pay in actual cash to groom the cows daily? One dairyman recently stated that he believed grooming would increase the flow of milk per cow by two quarts per day when a cow was in full flow of milk, or, with a herd of twenty cows, the increase would be sufficient to pay a man fair wages. Taking five minutes per day to groom a cow or one hour and forty minutes for a herd of twenty, the remainder of the day would be free for other work. Grooming tends to keep the hide clean and the pores open; consequently the cows will be healthier than those not groomed. The dirt and loose hairs brushed off the body each day will naturally lessen the amount of dirt falling into the pail during milking, making it easier to keep the milk up to a high quality. A well-groomed cow is attractive to the eye, which has a cash value if the animal is for sale. Taking everything into consideration, using the curry-comb and brush on the cow is time well spent.
