The Mystery Of The Singing Walls

Within the room Graham had sunk to his knees beside the physician and, bending low, was carefully examining Burke's distorted blood-stained face.

"It sure is a curious wound," he commented. "That slit in the neck isn't a quarter of an inch long and see how very narrow it is and in the form of a straight line, not a jagged and uneven hole. The weapon must have had a blade not over a quarter of an inch wide, very thin and extremely sharp, not alone the point but the edge as well.

"One thing is sure, and that is that the murderer didn't throw away his weapon." Busby commented.

"The knife that did this job was no small affair. And I have looked everywhere.

"Are you sure one of those Italian stilettoes wouldn't answer the description?" Dr. Darnell suggested. "Perhaps some foreigner committed this crime."

"No," Graham declared positively. "Stilettoes have either a round blade like an ice pick, making a round wound, or a triangular-shaped blade making a triangular hole. This wound is a flat slit like a razor cut."

The physician had risen to his feet and slowly had backed against the fireplace his tall figure reminding John of the armored carving of the ornate stone. As he faced the two detectives there was a stern, almost accusing gravity on his keen, clear-cut features.

"How with you men watching did that poor fellow meet his death?" he lamented. "I thought you had the room guarded."

"We did," Busby answered bitterly. "Only, somehow, some way somebody got by us or was in here all the time."

"But you searched the room before you planted the bullet, didn't you?" Dr. Darnell persisted. "Certainly, you saw us do it," John put in. "There was nobody in this study and nobody went in I can swear to that."

"Yet somebody either was in here all the time or slipped by us," Graham concluded grimly. "It isn't like the shooting of Mr. Warburton which might have taken place at a distance, through a window or some secret hole in the wall. To stab a man and remove the knife the assassin must have been actually standing before this fireplace."

The police captain had turned his back and his stubby, graying fingers were feeling their way along the wall, tapping carefully the sabbat panels, testing the stones of the fireplace to discover whether they were loose.

"It's uncanny," he grumbled finally. "Before we left Burke we searched every inch from that woodbox to the chimney flue, and tried every panel, and I know my business. There was no one in this room I swear by all that's holy to that, and Osborn is sure no one came in. Yet he was killed."

"How about the elevator?" John suggested. "Isn't there some entrance from its shaft into this room?"

Graham answered. "I thought of that because, just before we heard the body fall we caught his singing in the walls. But the sides of the elevator wall are of solid concrete. It has been built into the old house recently and the to where, underneath a fold of the rumpled rug, lay a booklet of red-grained morocco leather. Rapidly his gnarled misshapen thumb turned the leaves, and pushing himself to his feet, he tipped the little memorandum sideways so that the soft glow of the lamp faintly illuminated a row of numbers on the inside of the fly leaf. Then he slid along before the safe and swung halfway around the massive steel door until the fine lines on the dial were visible.

Fashion Fancies

By Marie Belmont

Smart English women have introduced the double sweater costume, which makes a most effective and comfortable outfit for sportswear.

The one above departs from strictly sports lines, so that it may be worn for a daytime costume as well. The color is pale green, the skirt being crepe and the slip-on sweater of matching mohair, very thin and cool.

Over this is worn the sweater coat, this time of pale green yarn in coarser weave, showing an all-over painted design of flowers in soft colors.

SKIN TROUBLES

Come from Constipation

Constipation is the cause of most complexion troubles. The waste matter is picked up by the blood and carried to all parts of the body, especially the skin.

No one needs to have a yellow, muddy complexion. Proper diet, exercise, surface cleanliness, and above all—internal cleanliness. Nujol prevents the formation of intestinal poisons that ruin your health and complexion.

Constipation is dangerous for anybody. Nujol is safe for everybody. It does not affect the stomach, and is not absorbed by the body. Medical authorities approve Nujol because it is so safe, so gentle and so natural in its action.

Nujol makes up for a deficiency of natural lubrication in the intestines. It softens the waste matter and thus permits thorough and regular bowel movements without gripping.

Nujol can be taken for any length of time without ill effects. Unlike laxatives, it does not form a habit, and can be discontinued at any time.

Ask your druggist for Nujol.

THE FINDING OF THE KNIFE

Vaulting the overturned Japanese figure, the two detectives threw themselves to their knees on the long, Oriental runner stretching below the side wall before the safe.

Moving over beside them, Dr. Darnell and John watched curiously as the speeding fingers seized the scattered papers, scanned them carefully and tossed them aside. All at a sudden, Busby hitched himself
