DUKE HER PROBABLE HEIR

LONDON, Feb. 27.—The Duke of York and his bride will begin housekeeping on £25,000 a year.

At present he has £10,000 a year, but when he takes a wife this annuity is automatically increased by £15,000 in accordance with the arrangement made by Parliament on the King's accession

The Duke may be very much better off at some future time. He is an immense favorite with Mrs. Ronald Greville, of Polesden Lacey, Dorking, and a rumor has it that this wealthy and childless widow intends making the Duke her heir.

She inherited from her stepfather, Mr. W. M'Ewan, the Edinburgh brewer, the bulk of his fortune of over a million and a half.

WHALE IS RICHEST CREATURE

The whale is worth more money than any other living creature. A single Greenland whale will have in its mouth about a ton of whalebone, which alone is worth from $7,500 to $10,000. From its blubber twenty-five tons of oil may be obtained. As whale oil brings something like $100 a ton, this represents another substantial sum. Another species, the sperm whale not only provides enormous quantities of the finest oil, but may also prove to contain amber gris, which is worth considerably more than its weight in gold.
