

THE CHARLOTTETOWN GUARDIAN

Morning Daily (Founded in 1887)
Authorized as Second Class Mail, Post Office Department, Ottawa.

President, Ian A. Burnett; Vice-President, Wm. R. Burnett; Secy.-Treas., G. M. Burnett; Editor and Managing Director, J. R. Burnett; Associate Editor, Frank Walker.

"The Strongest Memory is Weaker Than the Weakest Ink."

FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 22, 1946

Repatriation Almost Complete

Figures recently released by Army headquarters reveal that 281,012 Canadian servicemen and women have been returned to this country from stations abroad during the period 8 May 1945 to 9 November 1946.

No Place For Pioneers?

Estonia is a tiny republic on the Baltic Sea, north of Latvia and west of Russia. The country is now under the domination of Russia, and at least some of the people do not like this.

Mr. James Kendis, 68, a song writer for 40 years and co-author of such hit numbers as "I'm Forever Blowing Bubbles" and "If I Had My Way", died in London this week.

Ottawa Stands Firm

Hon. Ian Mackenzie, Minister of Veterans' Affairs, has written to the Ottawa civic authorities about their traffic laws. It appears that Mr. Mackenzie is a very busy man.

Another Antarctic Expedition

The stories of the Antarctic explorers of old will be revived again with the projected expedition to that region of a dozen ships and 4,000 men of the United States Navy.

Notes By The Way

Science will take the place of man in the role of father in years to come, says a Philadelphia physician. There seems to be no hope for women.—Exchange.

Mr. Hsley's Inadvertence

In a recent radio speech Finance Minister Hsley reviewed the Government's alleged record in national reconstruction, with emphasis on what it has accomplished in tax reduction since the war's close.

The Toll of Disease

(Royal Bank Monthly Letter) "Though this country has made good progress in providing the things necessary to full health, there are still too many Canadians ill too many babies dying too many deaths in motherhood, and too great an attitude of 'let someone else do it' even in regard to caring for one's own health."

EDITORIAL NOTES

On the decline. Hooper rating of radio programs show a decline to 10.8 million listeners for the highest listenership in 1946 compared with 23.7 in 1936.

Despite all the warnings of our better sense, we still can't seem to find any better remedy for the high cost of living than doing something that is bound to make it higher.—Vancouver Province.

Once again a faithful dog has died in this world. A North Boston child, lost in the making of a frightful accident, died in the making of a frightful accident.

A preference for doctors' prescriptions in plain English or French—rather than in the traditional Latin—was expressed at the closing sessions of the Canadian Association of Medical Students and Internes at Montreal.

Surely the Jones Government, out of its abundance, will now reimburse Mr. William Callbeck, Bedeque, for discharging the solemn duty regarding a monument to the memory of the Hon. Philip Callbeck, which has just been erected.

At the inter-city football match, Montreal Alouettes vs. Toronto Argonauts at Montreal Saturday, 20,683 passed through the turnstile, the amount realized being close on $45,000.

Mr. James Kendis, 68, a song writer for 40 years and co-author of such hit numbers as "I'm Forever Blowing Bubbles" and "If I Had My Way", died in London this week.

The Marchioness of Huntley, the wife of the Marquis of Huntley, who is a cousin of the Earl of Aberdeen, is visiting U. S. A. and Canada.

Very few people can keep their heads when the hobby of stamp-collecting is mentioned, either they espouse it or reject it, and with equal passion. The fervor of the stamp-collector is icy and intense; the man who considers a stamp as a mere means of paying for postal service is likely to be loud and hyperbolic in his mockery of the whole technique and philosophy of the philatelist.

Sir Arthur Seymour Sullivan, English composer, died this date 1900; he wrote overtures and incidental music for several of Shakespeare's plays, works for orchestras, songs, and three cantatas; his name is best remembered because of his association with the long series of comic operas, written mostly to libretti by Gilbert, and of which Patience, H. M. S. Pinafore, The Pirates of Penzance, The Mikado, The Gondoliers, and The Yeomen of the Guard, are the best known.

Premier John Hart, B.C., goes to Ottawa November 24 to discuss with Federal government authorities arrangements for a financial deal to replace the wartime tax agreement.

In the Sorel by-election, Mr. Sabourin referred to the declaration made in the Commons last June by Minister of Justice St. Laurent when on the redistribution bill the minister had laid it down that a mere resolution of a majority of Parliament is sufficient to banish the French language as one of the official languages of Canada.

Mr. James Tuplin, Summerside, noted pioneer fox rancher, formerly of Black Banks where on his ranch he grew some of the most highly-prized silver fox pelts in the world, is a visitor to Charlottetown.

The magazine Author and Bookman comes up with the rather disturbing report that one-third Canadian houses contain no books.

Premier Jones and Hon. Mr. Howe are in complete agreement on one subject—the continued and progressive prosperity of the nation, including this Province. Improvement in quality standards of merchandise rather than any catastrophic decline in prices will probably be an important feature of the economic readjustment expected some time next year.

Looking toward the future, the more we know about the past, the more we know about the future. The more we know about the past, the more we know about the future.

Headful Pompeians, especially the upper classes, escaped by boats into the sizzling sea. Japanese were unharmed who, obeying the sirens, warning of the oncoming raid, fled into shelters when twin B-29's appeared overhead.

Both the atomic bomb and Vesuvius can litter death widely because they attack from overhead. But neither penetrates the earth much and life-giving soil, unlike human beings, remains unharmed.

Headful Pompeians, especially the upper classes, escaped by boats into the sizzling sea. Japanese were unharmed who, obeying the sirens, warning of the oncoming raid, fled into shelters when twin B-29's appeared overhead.

Headful Pompeians, especially the upper classes, escaped by boats into the sizzling sea. Japanese were unharmed who, obeying the sirens, warning of the oncoming raid, fled into shelters when twin B-29's appeared overhead.

Notes By The Way

Science will take the place of man in the role of father in years to come, says a Philadelphia physician. There seems to be no hope for women.—Exchange.

Toronto embalmers are threatening to strike for shorter working hours. An immediate reduction in deaths is demanded.—Woodstock Sentinel-Review.

Despite all the warnings of our better sense, we still can't seem to find any better remedy for the high cost of living than doing something that is bound to make it higher.—Vancouver Province.

Once again a faithful dog has died in this world. A North Boston child, lost in the making of a frightful accident, died in the making of a frightful accident.

One of the supreme joys of living is undoubtedly full appreciation of the value of leisure and the knowledge of how to use it. Persons who say they are bored because they have nothing to do are making a frightful admission of mental sterility. They have allowed their perceptions and curiosities to atrophy, with the result that they themselves are only half alive.—Galt Reporter.

Today the hunger for peace and the hatred of war is deeper and stronger than in 1919. Once more machinery for maintaining a lasting peace has been born. But, instead of the high hopes and confidence that marked the first post-war years nearly three decades ago there is world-wide fear and uncertainty as to the future. Today men know what to do to attain peace. They recognize that had they and their governments not been so busy fighting and killing and binding to conscious forces, they might have done much to avoid the great tragedy. Today men know that world co-operation, the free flow of commerce and the system of collective security, if given the sincere and undeviating support of governments, will prevent another war.—Winnipeg Free Press.

Very few people can keep their heads when the hobby of stamp-collecting is mentioned, either they espouse it or reject it, and with equal passion. The fervor of the stamp-collector is icy and intense; the man who considers a stamp as a mere means of paying for postal service is likely to be loud and hyperbolic in his mockery of the whole technique and philosophy of the philatelist. But philatelists, like numerologists and people who insist on sleeping with their heads toward the True North, are unshakable in their faith, and this winter there will be thousands of them in every part of Canada, bent over their desks during the long winter evenings, peering intently through magnifying lenses at their treasures, their darlings, their adored ones.—Kingston Whig-Standard.

The policeman of today is a man of parts. Finger-printing, the radio, civic bylaws, traffic control, pedestrian management first aid, jiu-jitsu, marksmanship and applied psychology are only a few of the things which are expected of him. There was a time when all that was demanded was the physique of a wrestler and a working knowledge of ward politics. Now Chief Knight requires a man who is not only a B.A. before they start out to pound a beat, and if this is so we might reasonably suppose that one day the chief of London will have his Ph.D. in public safety. And why not?—London Free Press.

A year ago there arrived in Canada from Perugia an ancient walled city on a hill in the interior of Italy which is well known to tourists, the bride of Bruce Matheson, a Canadian serviceman from Ripley Ontario. She knew no English and she was in very poor health, however, Mrs. Matheson has mastered English to such an extent that she is as fluent in it as in her mother tongue. As a result, she is helping her neighbor with their sewing problems. She is also learning to knit. And what is more, she has taken his place on a rural mail route and is also looking after a flock of 850 hens.—Braceville Recorder and Times.

The magazine Author and Bookman comes up with the rather disturbing report that one-third Canadian houses contain no books. Canadian households contain no books. Canadian households contain no books.

Premier Jones and Hon. Mr. Howe are in complete agreement on one subject—the continued and progressive prosperity of the nation, including this Province. Improvement in quality standards of merchandise rather than any catastrophic decline in prices will probably be an important feature of the economic readjustment expected some time next year.

Looking toward the future, the more we know about the past, the more we know about the future. The more we know about the past, the more we know about the future.

Headful Pompeians, especially the upper classes, escaped by boats into the sizzling sea. Japanese were unharmed who, obeying the sirens, warning of the oncoming raid, fled into shelters when twin B-29's appeared overhead.

Both the atomic bomb and Vesuvius can litter death widely because they attack from overhead. But neither penetrates the earth much and life-giving soil, unlike human beings, remains unharmed.

Headful Pompeians, especially the upper classes, escaped by boats into the sizzling sea. Japanese were unharmed who, obeying the sirens, warning of the oncoming raid, fled into shelters when twin B-29's appeared overhead.

Headful Pompeians, especially the upper classes, escaped by boats into the sizzling sea. Japanese were unharmed who, obeying the sirens, warning of the oncoming raid, fled into shelters when twin B-29's appeared overhead.

Headful Pompeians, especially the upper classes, escaped by boats into the sizzling sea. Japanese were unharmed who, obeying the sirens, warning of the oncoming raid, fled into shelters when twin B-29's appeared overhead.

Headful Pompeians, especially the upper classes, escaped by boats into the sizzling sea. Japanese were unharmed who, obeying the sirens, warning of the oncoming raid, fled into shelters when twin B-29's appeared overhead.

Headful Pompeians, especially the upper classes, escaped by boats into the sizzling sea. Japanese were unharmed who, obeying the sirens, warning of the oncoming raid, fled into shelters when twin B-29's appeared overhead.

Notes By The Way

Science will take the place of man in the role of father in years to come, says a Philadelphia physician. There seems to be no hope for women.—Exchange.

Toronto embalmers are threatening to strike for shorter working hours. An immediate reduction in deaths is demanded.—Woodstock Sentinel-Review.

Despite all the warnings of our better sense, we still can't seem to find any better remedy for the high cost of living than doing something that is bound to make it higher.—Vancouver Province.

Once again a faithful dog has died in this world. A North Boston child, lost in the making of a frightful accident, died in the making of a frightful accident.

One of the supreme joys of living is undoubtedly full appreciation of the value of leisure and the knowledge of how to use it. Persons who say they are bored because they have nothing to do are making a frightful admission of mental sterility. They have allowed their perceptions and curiosities to atrophy, with the result that they themselves are only half alive.—Galt Reporter.

Today the hunger for peace and the hatred of war is deeper and stronger than in 1919. Once more machinery for maintaining a lasting peace has been born. But, instead of the high hopes and confidence that marked the first post-war years nearly three decades ago there is world-wide fear and uncertainty as to the future. Today men know what to do to attain peace. They recognize that had they and their governments not been so busy fighting and killing and binding to conscious forces, they might have done much to avoid the great tragedy. Today men know that world co-operation, the free flow of commerce and the system of collective security, if given the sincere and undeviating support of governments, will prevent another war.—Winnipeg Free Press.

Very few people can keep their heads when the hobby of stamp-collecting is mentioned, either they espouse it or reject it, and with equal passion. The fervor of the stamp-collector is icy and intense; the man who considers a stamp as a mere means of paying for postal service is likely to be loud and hyperbolic in his mockery of the whole technique and philosophy of the philatelist. But philatelists, like numerologists and people who insist on sleeping with their heads toward the True North, are unshakable in their faith, and this winter there will be thousands of them in every part of Canada, bent over their desks during the long winter evenings, peering intently through magnifying lenses at their treasures, their darlings, their adored ones.—Kingston Whig-Standard.

The policeman of today is a man of parts. Finger-printing, the radio, civic bylaws, traffic control, pedestrian management first aid, jiu-jitsu, marksmanship and applied psychology are only a few of the things which are expected of him. There was a time when all that was demanded was the physique of a wrestler and a working knowledge of ward politics. Now Chief Knight requires a man who is not only a B.A. before they start out to pound a beat, and if this is so we might reasonably suppose that one day the chief of London will have his Ph.D. in public safety. And why not?—London Free Press.

A year ago there arrived in Canada from Perugia an ancient walled city on a hill in the interior of Italy which is well known to tourists, the bride of Bruce Matheson, a Canadian serviceman from Ripley Ontario. She knew no English and she was in very poor health, however, Mrs. Matheson has mastered English to such an extent that she is as fluent in it as in her mother tongue. As a result, she is helping her neighbor with their sewing problems. She is also learning to knit. And what is more, she has taken his place on a rural mail route and is also looking after a flock of 850 hens.—Braceville Recorder and Times.

The magazine Author and Bookman comes up with the rather disturbing report that one-third Canadian houses contain no books. Canadian households contain no books. Canadian households contain no books.

Premier Jones and Hon. Mr. Howe are in complete agreement on one subject—the continued and progressive prosperity of the nation, including this Province. Improvement in quality standards of merchandise rather than any catastrophic decline in prices will probably be an important feature of the economic readjustment expected some time next year.

Looking toward the future, the more we know about the past, the more we know about the future. The more we know about the past, the more we know about the future.

Headful Pompeians, especially the upper classes, escaped by boats into the sizzling sea. Japanese were unharmed who, obeying the sirens, warning of the oncoming raid, fled into shelters when twin B-29's appeared overhead.

Both the atomic bomb and Vesuvius can litter death widely because they attack from overhead. But neither penetrates the earth much and life-giving soil, unlike human beings, remains unharmed.

Headful Pompeians, especially the upper classes, escaped by boats into the sizzling sea. Japanese were unharmed who, obeying the sirens, warning of the oncoming raid, fled into shelters when twin B-29's appeared overhead.

Headful Pompeians, especially the upper classes, escaped by boats into the sizzling sea. Japanese were unharmed who, obeying the sirens, warning of the oncoming raid, fled into shelters when twin B-29's appeared overhead.

Headful Pompeians, especially the upper classes, escaped by boats into the sizzling sea. Japanese were unharmed who, obeying the sirens, warning of the oncoming raid, fled into shelters when twin B-29's appeared overhead.

Headful Pompeians, especially the upper classes, escaped by boats into the sizzling sea. Japanese were unharmed who, obeying the sirens, warning of the oncoming raid, fled into shelters when twin B-29's appeared overhead.

Headful Pompeians, especially the upper classes, escaped by boats into the sizzling sea. Japanese were unharmed who, obeying the sirens, warning of the oncoming raid, fled into shelters when twin B-29's appeared overhead.

Notes By The Way

Science will take the place of man in the role of father in years to come, says a Philadelphia physician. There seems to be no hope for women.—Exchange.

Toronto embalmers are threatening to strike for shorter working hours. An immediate reduction in deaths is demanded.—Woodstock Sentinel-Review.

Despite all the warnings of our better sense, we still can't seem to find any better remedy for the high cost of living than doing something that is bound to make it higher.—Vancouver Province.

Once again a faithful dog has died in this world. A North Boston child, lost in the making of a frightful accident, died in the making of a frightful accident.

One of the supreme joys of living is undoubtedly full appreciation of the value of leisure and the knowledge of how to use it. Persons who say they are bored because they have nothing to do are making a frightful admission of mental sterility. They have allowed their perceptions and curiosities to atrophy, with the result that they themselves are only half alive.—Galt Reporter.

Today the hunger for peace and the hatred of war is deeper and stronger than in 1919. Once more machinery for maintaining a lasting peace has been born. But, instead of the high hopes and confidence that marked the first post-war years nearly three decades ago there is world-wide fear and uncertainty as to the future. Today men know what to do to attain peace. They recognize that had they and their governments not been so busy fighting and killing and binding to conscious forces, they might have done much to avoid the great tragedy. Today men know that world co-operation, the free flow of commerce and the system of collective security, if given the sincere and undeviating support of governments, will prevent another war.—Winnipeg Free Press.

Very few people can keep their heads when the hobby of stamp-collecting is mentioned, either they espouse it or reject it, and with equal passion. The fervor of the stamp-collector is icy and intense; the man who considers a stamp as a mere means of paying for postal service is likely to be loud and hyperbolic in his mockery of the whole technique and philosophy of the philatelist. But philatelists, like numerologists and people who insist on sleeping with their heads toward the True North, are unshakable in their faith, and this winter there will be thousands of them in every part of Canada, bent over their desks during the long winter evenings, peering intently through magnifying lenses at their treasures, their darlings, their adored ones.—Kingston Whig-Standard.

The policeman of today is a man of parts. Finger-printing, the radio, civic bylaws, traffic control, pedestrian management first aid, jiu-jitsu, marksmanship and applied psychology are only a few of the things which are expected of him. There was a time when all that was demanded was the physique of a wrestler and a working knowledge of ward politics. Now Chief Knight requires a man who is not only a B.A. before they start out to pound a beat, and if this is so we might reasonably suppose that one day the chief of London will have his Ph.D. in public safety. And why not?—London Free Press.

A year ago there arrived in Canada from Perugia an ancient walled city on a hill in the interior of Italy which is well known to tourists, the bride of Bruce Matheson, a Canadian serviceman from Ripley Ontario. She knew no English and she was in very poor health, however, Mrs. Matheson has mastered English to such an extent that she is as fluent in it as in her mother tongue. As a result, she is helping her neighbor with their sewing problems. She is also learning to knit. And what is more, she has taken his place on a rural mail route and is also looking after a flock of 850 hens.—Braceville Recorder and Times.

The magazine Author and Bookman comes up with the rather disturbing report that one-third Canadian houses contain no books. Canadian households contain no books. Canadian households contain no books.

Premier Jones and Hon. Mr. Howe are in complete agreement on one subject—the continued and progressive prosperity of the nation, including this Province. Improvement in quality standards of merchandise rather than any catastrophic decline in prices will probably be an important feature of the economic readjustment expected some time next year.

Looking toward the future, the more we know about the past, the more we know about the future. The more we know about the past, the more we know about the future.

Headful Pompeians, especially the upper classes, escaped by boats into the sizzling sea. Japanese were unharmed who, obeying the sirens, warning of the oncoming raid, fled into shelters when twin B-29's appeared overhead.

Both the atomic bomb and Vesuvius can litter death widely because they attack from overhead. But neither penetrates the earth much and life-giving soil, unlike human beings, remains unharmed.

Headful Pompeians, especially the upper classes, escaped by boats into the sizzling sea. Japanese were unharmed who, obeying the sirens, warning of the oncoming raid, fled into shelters when twin B-29's appeared overhead.

Headful Pompeians, especially the upper classes, escaped by boats into the sizzling sea. Japanese were unharmed who, obeying the sirens, warning of the oncoming raid, fled into shelters when twin B-29's appeared overhead.

Headful Pompeians, especially the upper classes, escaped by boats into the sizzling sea. Japanese were unharmed who, obeying the sirens, warning of the oncoming raid, fled into shelters when twin B-29's appeared overhead.

Headful Pompeians, especially the upper classes, escaped by boats into the sizzling sea. Japanese were unharmed who, obeying the sirens, warning of the oncoming raid, fled into shelters when twin B-29's appeared overhead.

Headful Pompeians, especially the upper classes, escaped by boats into the sizzling sea. Japanese were unharmed who, obeying the sirens, warning of the oncoming raid, fled into shelters when twin B-29's appeared overhead.

Notes By The Way

Science will take the place of man in the role of father in years to come, says a Philadelphia physician. There seems to be no hope for women.—Exchange.

Toronto embalmers are threatening to strike for shorter working hours. An immediate reduction in deaths is demanded.—Woodstock Sentinel-Review.

Despite all the warnings of our better sense, we still can't seem to find any better remedy for the high cost of living than doing something that is bound to make it higher.—Vancouver Province.

Once again a faithful dog has died in this world. A North Boston child, lost in the making of a frightful accident, died in the making of a frightful accident.

One of the supreme joys of living is undoubtedly full appreciation of the value of leisure and the knowledge of how to use it. Persons who say they are bored because they have nothing to do are making a frightful admission of mental sterility. They have allowed their perceptions and curiosities to atrophy, with the result that they themselves are only half alive.—Galt Reporter.

Today the hunger for peace and the hatred of war is deeper and stronger than in 1919. Once more machinery for maintaining a lasting peace has been born. But, instead of the high hopes and confidence that marked the first post-war years nearly three decades ago there is world-wide fear and uncertainty as to the future. Today men know what to do to attain peace. They recognize that had they and their governments not been so busy fighting and killing and binding to conscious forces, they might have done much to avoid the great tragedy. Today men know that world co-operation, the free flow of commerce and the system of collective security, if given the sincere and undeviating support of governments, will prevent another war.—Winnipeg Free Press.

Very few people can keep their heads when the hobby of stamp-collecting is mentioned, either they espouse it or reject it, and with equal passion. The fervor of the stamp-collector is icy and intense; the man who considers a stamp as a mere means of paying for postal service is likely to be loud and hyperbolic in his mockery of the whole technique and philosophy of the philatelist. But philatelists, like numerologists and people who insist on sleeping with their heads toward the True North, are unshakable in their faith, and this winter there will be thousands of them in every part of Canada, bent over their desks during the long winter evenings, peering intently through magnifying lenses at their treasures, their darlings, their adored ones.—Kingston Whig-Standard.

The policeman of today is a man of parts. Finger-printing, the radio, civic bylaws, traffic control, pedestrian management first aid, jiu-jitsu, marksmanship and applied psychology are only a few of the things which are expected of him. There was a time when all that was demanded was the physique of a wrestler and a working knowledge of ward politics. Now Chief Knight requires a man who is not only a B.A. before they start out to pound a beat, and if this is so we might reasonably suppose that one day the chief of London will have his Ph.D. in public safety. And why not?—London Free Press.

A year ago there arrived in Canada from Perugia an ancient walled city on a hill in the interior of Italy which is well known to tourists, the bride of Bruce Matheson, a Canadian serviceman from Ripley Ontario. She knew no English and she was in very poor health, however, Mrs. Matheson has mastered English to such an extent that she is as fluent in it as in her mother tongue. As a result, she is helping her neighbor with their sewing problems. She is also learning to knit. And what is more, she has taken his place on a rural mail route and is also looking after a flock of 850 hens.—Braceville Recorder and Times.

The magazine Author and Bookman comes up with the rather disturbing report that one-third Canadian houses contain no books. Canadian households contain no books. Canadian households contain no books.

Premier Jones and Hon. Mr. Howe are in complete agreement on one subject—the continued and progressive prosperity of the nation, including this Province. Improvement in quality standards of merchandise rather than any catastrophic decline in prices will probably be an important feature of the economic readjustment expected some time next year.

Looking toward the future, the more we know about the past, the more we know about the future. The more we know about the past, the more we know about the future.

Headful Pompeians, especially the upper classes, escaped by boats into the sizzling sea. Japanese were unharmed who, obeying the sirens, warning of the oncoming raid, fled into shelters when twin B-29's appeared overhead.

Both the atomic bomb and Vesuvius can litter death widely because they attack from overhead. But neither penetrates the earth much and life-giving soil, unlike human beings, remains unharmed.

Headful Pompeians, especially the upper classes, escaped by boats into the sizzling sea. Japanese were unharmed who, obeying the sirens, warning of the oncoming raid, fled into shelters when twin B-29's appeared overhead.

Headful Pompeians, especially the upper classes, escaped by boats into the sizzling sea. Japanese were unharmed who, obeying the sirens, warning of the oncoming raid, fled into shelters when twin B-29's appeared overhead.

Headful Pompeians, especially the upper classes, escaped by boats into the sizzling sea. Japanese were unharmed who, obeying the sirens, warning of the oncoming raid, fled into shelters when twin B-29's appeared overhead.

Headful Pompeians, especially the upper classes, escaped by boats into the sizzling sea. Japanese were unharmed who, obeying the sirens, warning of the oncoming raid, fled into shelters when twin B-29's appeared overhead.

Headful Pompeians, especially the upper classes, escaped by boats into the sizzling sea. Japanese were unharmed who, obeying the sirens, warning of the oncoming raid, fled into shelters when twin B-29's appeared overhead.

Notes By The Way

Science will take the place of man in the role of father in years to come, says a Philadelphia physician. There seems to be no hope for women.—Exchange.

Toronto embalmers are threatening to strike for shorter working hours. An immediate reduction in deaths is demanded.—Woodstock Sentinel-Review.

Despite all the warnings of our better sense, we still can't seem to find any better remedy for the high cost of living than doing something that is bound to make it higher.—Vancouver Province.

Once again a faithful dog has died in this world. A North Boston child, lost in the making of a frightful accident, died in the making of a frightful accident.

One of the supreme joys of living is undoubtedly full appreciation of the value of leisure and the knowledge of how to use it. Persons who say they are bored because they have nothing to do are making a frightful admission of mental sterility. They have allowed their perceptions and curiosities to atrophy, with the result that they themselves are only half alive.—Galt Reporter.

Today the hunger for peace and the hatred of war is deeper and stronger than in 1919. Once more machinery for maintaining a lasting peace has been born. But, instead of the high hopes and confidence that marked the first post-war years nearly three decades ago there is world-wide fear and uncertainty as to the future. Today men know what to do to attain peace. They recognize that had they and their governments not been so busy fighting and killing and binding to conscious forces, they might have done much to avoid the great tragedy. Today men know that world co-operation, the free flow of commerce and the system of collective security, if given the sincere and undeviating support of governments, will prevent another war.—Winnipeg Free Press.

Very few people can keep their heads when the hobby of stamp-collecting is mentioned, either they espouse it or reject it, and with equal passion. The fervor of the stamp-collector is icy and intense; the man who considers a stamp as a mere means of paying for postal service is likely to be loud and hyperbolic in his mockery of the whole technique and philosophy of the philatelist. But philatelists, like numerologists and people who insist on sleeping with their heads toward the True North, are unshakable in their faith, and this winter there will be thousands of them in every part of Canada, bent over their desks during the long winter evenings, peering intently through magnifying lenses at their treasures, their darlings, their adored ones.—Kingston Whig-Standard.

The policeman of today is a man of parts. Finger-printing, the radio, civic bylaws, traffic control, pedestrian management first aid, jiu-jitsu, marksmanship and applied psychology are only a few of the things which are expected of him. There was a time when all that was demanded was the physique of a wrestler and a working knowledge of ward politics. Now Chief Knight requires a man who is not only a B.A. before they start out to pound a beat, and if this is so we might reasonably suppose that one day the chief of London will have his Ph.D. in public safety. And why not?—London Free Press.

A year ago there arrived in Canada from Perugia an ancient walled city on a hill in the interior of Italy which is well known to tourists, the bride of Bruce Matheson, a Canadian serviceman from Ripley Ontario. She knew no English and she was in very poor health, however, Mrs. Matheson has mastered English to such an extent that she is as fluent in it as in her mother tongue. As a result, she is helping her neighbor with their sewing problems. She is also learning to knit. And what is more, she has taken his place on a rural mail route and is also looking after a flock of 850 hens.—Braceville Recorder and Times.

The magazine Author and Bookman comes up with the rather disturbing report that one-third Canadian houses contain no books. Canadian households contain no books. Canadian households contain no books.

Premier Jones and Hon. Mr. Howe are in complete agreement on one subject—the continued and progressive prosperity of the nation, including this Province. Improvement in quality standards of merchandise rather than any catastrophic decline in prices will probably be an important feature of the economic readjustment expected some time next year.

Looking toward the future, the more we know about the past, the more we know about the future. The more we know about the past, the more we know about the future.

Headful Pompeians, especially the upper classes, escaped by boats into the sizzling sea. Japanese were unharmed who, obeying the sirens, warning of the oncoming raid, fled into shelters when twin B-29's appeared overhead.

Both the atomic bomb and Vesuvius can litter death widely because they attack from overhead. But neither penetrates the earth much and life-giving soil, unlike human beings, remains unharmed.

Headful Pompeians, especially the upper classes, escaped by boats into the sizzling sea. Japanese were unharmed who,