

"But personally I think the best way to get carbohydrates and proteins is in a lip-smacking bowlful of Grape-Nuts Flakes." "You said a mouthful, Professor! What a mouthful of tongue-tickling flavor and good nourishment!" "Yes, my little chibakades, and not only do Grape-Nuts Flakes supply carbohydrates and proteins, but also useful quantities of iron and phosphorus and other food essentials. Not forgetting their malty-rich, sweet-as-a-nut taste." "I guess all that comes from being made of two grains—wheat and malted barley—and being blended, baked and toasted for grand taste and easy digestion. I must pick up a package at the grocer's."

D-Day meant no shave for Pte. C. L. Jewell, New Glasgow, N. S. — and he hasn't shaved since. He has a regular Frenchman's beard by now and seems happy about it as he totes a can of petrol for his Jeep. Killed In Action

LIEUTENANT RONALD J. MacDONALD, R.C.A.

The news that Lieut. Ronald J. MacDonald, R.C.A., of Peakes was killed overseas came as a great shock to his relatives and many friends throughout the Island. It is only when the ruthless hand of war touches those whom we know and love that the real significance of its cruelty is brought home to us and we realize in a greater measure the sacrifices that our boys are making daily on the battle fronts of the world. And so, as we hear that another of our gallant Island sons has made the supreme sacrifice of his life on behalf of that freedom which we all hold so dear, it is fitting that we pause to pay tribute to him who so freely died that we might live and enjoy that kind of life for which he and other Canadian sons fought so bravely. Nothing that can be said will add to his glory. He gave his all; what more could mortal do? "Greater love than this no man hath, that he lay down his life..."

Ronald, the only son of Mr. and Mrs. Donald MacDonald, was born at Peakes, Prince Edward Island, November 16, 1913. He received his early education there, matriculating in 1930 to Prince of Wales College where he received a teacher's license of the first class. He taught school for three years at Bristol and Morell, P. E. I. To satisfy an early ambition he entered St. Dunstan's University as a Freshman in 1937, and was graduated with a Bachelor of Arts degree in 1941. The year 1940 saw the organization of a unit of C.O.T.C. at St. Dunstan's and Ronald became one of its first lieutenants. In this capacity as well as in all the tasks he undertook he showed untiring zeal and a desire to do his part.

Whatever may have been his plans for the future, he set them aside when his country called for men, and immediately after graduation he enlisted in the Royal Canadian Artillery. He was sent to Brockville, Ontario, as an officer cadet and at the close of the course received his commission. For some months he was stationed at Petawawa, Ontario as an instructor, but was sent to England with reinforcements early in 1943. He must have been among the first soldiers who landed in France in the recent invasion since, according to the official report, he was killed on June ninth. No further particulars of his death have been received. During his stay in England he wrote regularly to his friends. In all his letters he expressed eagerness for the invasion day to come, and seemed prepared to meet whatever fate might have in store for him.

The manner in which the sad news of his death was received here bears testimony to the regard in which he was held by all who knew him. He was certainly deserving of the highest esteem, for he was a young man of exemplary character and possessed of definite sound principles. It seems to be part of the irony of war that the most fit and promising of our young men should be called upon to die. Ronald was a youth from whom great things could be expected, for he was certainly well equipped with Catholic education and good Christian philosophy to face the battles of life. But for him the war is over, the troubles of this world have ceased, and he can now reap the reward which is his due. While he will be mourned greatly by his immediate relatives, he will long be remembered by his many friends, especially by those with whom he was associated during his course at St. Dunstan's.

To the honour roll of his College is added the name of another alumnus who died for the honor and glory of God in an effort to restore peace among nations. Let us pray that his sacrifice will not have been in vain, that soon a lasting peace will be effected, and that with the end of hostilities we shall see the dawning of a new and better life in the world. Since he thought enough of us to die for our cause, let us remember him in our prayers. Requiescat in pace. Besides his parents, there remain five sisters to mourn his death. They are Mary, a nursing sister in Halifax; Sister St. Elaine Congregation de Notre Dame, St. Joseph's Convent, Charlottetown; Marcelle, a nursing sister in Italy; Bernadette in the Civil Service, Ottawa; and Isabel at home. His family have the sympathy of the entire community in their sad bereavement, home in Charlottetown.

Canol
WAS BORN IN 1920

SINCE THE ICE AGE Canada's vast Northland lay wrapped in timeless slumber... Then, in 1914, a little group of prospectors approached the Arctic frontiers in search of petroleum.

By 1919 Imperial Oil geologists had narrowed down this Northern quest to an area along the Mackenzie River near the tip-top of Canada's map. In 1920, near Fort Norman, the drill struck oil!

As the North opened up, a small refinery was built to serve the pioneer airplanes, mines and river craft.

Then came Pearl Harbor! Shipping on the Pacific seaboard was menaced. Could another supply of oil for coastal defence, for the protection of Alaska and for attack through the Aleutians be developed? Imperial Oil was asked by the U.S. army to get the answer to that vital question.

Thus Canol developed; and while Imperial geologists and drillers sought and found more oil, the enormous program of waterway, road and air transport, of pipe line and refinery construction, went on apace.

Today the Canol project is completed. A supply of oil for military needs has been secured; there is hope for further discovery, and the territory is open to all oil seekers who care to stake their knowledge and capital.

Imperial Oil has undertaken to risk large amounts of capital in an effort to "prove up" enough oil to warrant the enormous expenditure needed for a pipe line before the oil can be brought to commercial markets.

It is a job that calls for time, patience and perseverance, but it is no more fantastic than the Canol of today would have seemed to the men driving the first drilling bit down to Norman's oil sands twenty-four years ago.
