War's Outcome May Hinge on Neutrals

Spain's neutrality is a serious blow to Nazi hopes. Gibraltar, Britain's guardian gate to the Mediterranean, is free from the threat of hostile Spanish forces behind it and those in Spanish Morocco in front of it.

By GEORGE FIELDING ELIOT
(Written for NEA Service)

LONDON, Sept. — Europe's neutrals loom large as factors for defeat or victory in the German campaign.

Spain's neutrality is a serious blow to Nazi hopes, as Spanish bases were essential to German submarine and surface operations against British trade routes and the Mediterranean and Atlantic sea routes between France and her African colonies.

A hostile Spain also would force Frances to guard the Pyrenes border against an expert and war-hardened Spanish army.

With Britain's Gibraltar free from Spanish threat and a neutral Spanish Morocco removing any threat against French North Africa, times and resources would not be wasted in cleaning up these outlying positions.

BELGIUM STRONGER TODAY THAN IN '14

NEUTRAL Belgium is much more formidably armed than in 1914 with strong fortifications along Albert canal and the Meuse river. It has a capable air force which includes only planes for defensive fighting and few bombers.

For Germany to attack Belgium would add considerably to forces opposing Hitler in the West without markedly improving the Nazi strategical position. On the other hand Belgium would be of little help in the launching of a French attack against Germany since the Belgian frontier with Germany is very short, and German western fortifications cover Belgium and Luxembourg as well as the French border.

Neutral Netherlands is another matter. It is much more exposed to German attack, although provisions for inundation between fortifications might prove a formidable obstacle, at least delaying any German onslaught.

The Dutch army is trained on a short service basis and is neither as strong nor as well equipped as the Belgian military. But Holland does offer an advantageous geographical position to the allies from its position on the right bank of the Rhine.

On the other hand, the Belgian-Dutch neutrality, from the point of view of air attacks probably offers a greater advantage to Germany than to Britain as it protects Germany to some extent from direct attack from English bases.

"It is likely that any attempt to violate Swiss neutrality would cost the aggressor more than the results would warrant." Above, an artillery crew on guard in a Siwss mountain pass, backgrounded by the towering crags that make the terrain a military hazard.

SWITZERLAND IN KEY POSITION

HISTORICALLY neutral Switzerland occupies a key position between Germany, France and Italy. Its army also is trained on a short-term basis.

The Swiss terrain is most difficult, the mountain passes are well fortified and the people are determined to defend desperately their traditional neutrality. It is likely that any attempt to violate this neutrality would cost the aggressor more than the results would warrant.

Strategically important Denmark, commanding the entrance to the Baltic Sea, is in an extremely exposed position, with a very small and poorly equipped army and a navy that could not resist seriously a Greman thrust.

Norway, less exposed geographically, is somewhat better armed than Denmark.

Sweden is very important to Germany because of its supply of high grade iron ore, and its munition works. But Sweden, by far the most formidable, in a military sense, of the Scandinavian countries, has a good army, equipped to the teeth, and an excellent although small navy, including small battleships, cruisers, destroyers and submarines.

Finland is in a bad position because of her long frontier with Soviet Russia, always an uncertain neighbor. The Baltic states could not long resist attack neither from Germany or Russia. If forced to choose, they would prefer Germans to Russians any day.

PORTUGAL IS STRATEGIC

PORTUGAL has declared her neutrality, though asserting fidelity to the British alliance. She is not important while Spain remains neutral but would be a vitally important British fleet base if Spain made Gibraltar untenable.

There remains then only the neutrals of southern Europe and the Balkans which will be discussed in a succeding dispatch.

It is important to remember that because of the major character of this crisis these small neutrals may join or be forced to join sides in the war and may have a decisive influence on the outcome.

The propaganda" war continues unabated and will be intensified as the war proceeds and each side seeks to win neutrals to its cause.

ROPER-ARCHIBALD WEDDING

A pretty wedding was solemnized at the home of the bride, at Beech Hill Farm, Princeport, Nova Scotia, on Saturday afternoon, September 9th, when Miss Nadine Roper, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James F. Roper, formerly of Charlottetown Royalty, was united in marriage to Mr. Orison Archibald, son of the late T. C. Archibald and Mrs. Archibald of Truro.

The ceremony took place on the lawn, where the bride and groom stood under an arch decorated with flowers.

The Rev. M. H. Manuel, pastor of the United Church of Valley, was the officiating celrgyman, and Miss Pauline Good played the wedding march.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a dress of dusky pink with wine accessories, and carried an arm bouquet of wine galdioli and sweetpeas.

The Misses Carol and Kathryn Roper, nieces of the bride, were very chaming as flower girls in white organdy dresses trimmed with peasant embroidery. They carried nosegays of sweetpeas.

Mrs. Roper, mother of the bride was attired in black lace with a corsage of gladioli. The groom's mother, Mrs. Archibald, wore a gown of flowered crepe and her corsage consisted of white carnations.

Following the ceremony a reception was held at which Mrs. J. K. Fraser and Mrs. Reuben Macdonald poured tea.

Among these who assisted were, Mrs. King, Miss Agnes Seaman, Miss Hazel Higgins, Miss Marjorie Daley, Miss Jean MacCullough, Miss Edna Jamieson, and Miss Helen MacCabe of Truro; Mrs. Frame, Princeport, and the Misses Jean and Doris Macdonald and Miss Helen Roper of Charlottetown.

After the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Archibald left on a honeymoon trip to Prince Edward Island.

The bride's going away costume consisted of a turquoise wool dress with wine accessories.

Previous to her marriage, Mrs. Archibald was a member of the office staff of the Nova Scotia Agricultural College at Truro. Her numerous wedding gifts included a valuable set of flat silver from her fellow members of the staff. She had also been tendered several showers.

The out-of-town guests included Mrs. Juden, Miss Barbara Juden, Mr. Victor Fraser, of Halifax, Miss Edith Knock, Lunenburg, Mr. Keith Fraser, Montague, P. E. I., Miss Helen Roper, Mr. and Mrs. Reuben Macdonald and the Misses Jean and Doris Macdonald of Charlottetown.

MRS. LEWIS C. PARSONS

The death occurred at St. James Hospital, McMinnville, Oregon, on Aug. 16th of Mrs. Lewis C. Parsons, formerly A. Clemmie Murphy, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Philip Murphy of Sturgeon. Deceased left her Island home about twenty-three years ago for Western Canada where she entered the teaching profession. She later moved to Oregon where her death took place. Although in failing health for several months her death was unexpected and was a great shock to her relatives and friends. She is survived by two sons, Eugene and Gerald, her parents, two sisters, Mrs. F.L. Coyle and Miss Mary Murphy, one brother Nicholas, all of this Province.

During her illness she was attended by her pastor Rev. Fr. Mahr, and died strongly fortified by the last rites of the Catholic Church of which she was a faithful member.

Her funeral to St. James Church was largely attended, the sermon being delivered by Father Mahr. Her remains rest in St. James Cemetery, McMinville, Oregon. R.I.P.
