The Romance Of The Grocery

NO. 2.

On the top of a showcase, just inside our door, you will see some little round gray crockery jars which come to us from China.

There is a touch of Orient-al fatalism in the drab colouring of these containers, a hint of the Eastern ideal of service in their solidity. The contents, ginger preserved in syrup, has an elusive, haunting flavor that has escaped the western manufacturer of the spice.

Can people say that the grocery business is humdrum, when a glimpse of little things like these can carry us to a country where the wheel and progress has not appreciably moved in 60 centuries?

American Officers Accused Of Shooting Soldiers

WASHINGTON, D. C., Jan. 12.—Complete records in the cases of United States soldiers hanged after court martial in France were cabled immediately to the War Department, Colonel Walter A. Bethel, Assistant Judge Advocate General in the army, testified today before a Senate Committee Investigating charges that soldiers were put to death without trial. Names of men hanged were not given to the press out of consideration for relatives, the witness said. Questioned by Chairman Brandegee, Col. Bethel declared notices of executions was published overseas in general court martial orders and were sent to all organizations with the expeditionary forces.

"Probably most of the enlisted men did not know about the cases," Col. Bethel added, "but the army endeavored to have everybody informed about executions."

"Was any effort made to keep hanging news from being sent to this country?"

"Not at all."

Charles F. Fox, of Richmond, Va., testified that he saw Major Jerome L. Opie, of Staunton, Va., shoot a soldier in the back north of Verddun in 1918.

The man shot was wearing an American uniform said Fox. "I was 150 feet away. As the boy was shot he threw up his hands in the air and toppled over. I do not know if the man died."

Fox declared to soldier was within six feet of the major when the shooting took place, that he had approached the office and was moving off. He was positive it was Major Opie.

Stonewall Jackson Albin of Kerrstown, Va., declared he saw Major Opie shoot an American soldier in cold blood. "The runner, who was shot, was running toward the major," said Albin. "I saw him hand the major a piece of paper, which the major glanced at. Then to runner turned his back and started to walk away, when Major Opie shot him. Opie gazed at the fallen man for a few minutes, and then moved on."

Albin declared a hundred or more persons could have seen the shooting.

Another witness, James Carlton of Richmond, Va., testified that he saw Major Opie shoot a soldier on October 9, 1918.

"I saw Major Opie seize a rifle and order him to stop," said Carlton. "He shot and a man fell."

Carlton said he was out of a job and was receiving no compensation from the government, not having been wounded.

Epidemic Of Murders In Montreal

MONTREAL, Jan. 11—Commencing Wednesday night last an epidemic of murders broke over this city and there is as yet little or no clue to the murderers. Two of the victims were men in prominent positions in this city, one of them a University of Ottawa student in his graduation year and the other a well-known debt collector. The third appears to have been a New York Italian gunman whose mission in Montreal was the murder of Gonzague Savard, former members of the Montreal police force and now superintendent of a private detective agency, whose activities in cleaning up the city's underworld had it is supposed caused deep resentment, Savard being responsible for the hanging of no fewer than nine murderers during his career. Payment for his murder was to have been in the sum of $20,000 half payable before and the balance after his death.

Mysterious Murder of New York Italian.

Vincenzo Trecoli, the New York Italian, was found dead in a restaurant at 196 Demontigny Street East, shot through the head, on Wednesday night. It developed at the inquest on Saturday, however, that Savard had be n told of his death on the same evening and had not notified the local police, a fact which called from the strictures of the Coroner. S[illegible] then stated that Trecoli had been hired to kill him for the sum of $20,000 but that he had apparently quarrelled with big gang and had been shot by one of them. In the meantime the aid of the New York police is being enlisted in an effort to locate the gang, the inquest being adjourned until next Friday.

The second case was that of Frederick Edwin Winterson, who died as the result of a murderous assault thought to have been perpetrated while he was alone in his residence at 2189 Waverly Street in the north end of the city on Thursday night. Medical testimony at the inquest Saturday was to the effect that his intestines had been burst and doctors held to the opinion that such injuries could not have been self-inflicted.

Stanley Winterson the victim's son gave evidence to the effect that his father said that if he lived "he would tell the rest." He thought his father had had trouble with one of the many debtors on his books and said that it was to his knowledge that such trouble had occurred in the past. The inquest was adjourned until Thursday next.

Murder of University Student

The third case to which there is also so far no clue was the murder on Friday night of Raoul Delorme, half-brother of Rev. Father J. A. Delorme, of 190 St. Hubert Street and a student of the University of Ottawa. He was shot twice through the head which was enveloped in napkins to prevent bleeding and carried on an automobile to Notre Dame de Grace where his body was left in a shanty. It was found frozen stiff on Saturday morning. Robery is given as the motive of the crime, not a cent being found on the body and a watch and chain being missing. Father Delorme states that as far as he knew his brother had about $30 on his person, but in addition carried a large "roll" of imitation bills used in college for practice in commercial and financial classes. These wese doubtless the cause of the murder for the robbers thinking he had a large sum of money cried, it is thought, to take it from him. Delorme probably put up a fight in the course of which he was shot. An inquest will be held in this case tomorrow.

Suspect Arrested

MONTREAL, Jan. 11 Detectives arrested here today Fred Carelli, 30, of New York, in connection with the Trescoli murder. The man is being held as a material witness for the inquest next Friday. It is understood that he was arrested on a telegram stating that a certain job was done and asking that $50 be sent at once. Carelli made no resistance to arrest although he was armed.

Shooting Affray Aboard Schooner

MULGRAVE, Jan. 10.—Report of trouble on board and American schooner at this port today caused somewhat of a sensation about the waterfront. The facts were more or less secluded by rumors, but so far as could be ascertained before the schooner sailed were of the following effect:

The steward of the schooner had been recently married and took his wife aboard the vessel. The mate upon at voyage seems to have encountered a storm almost immediately. This third party to the triangle decided that a little revolver practice would perhaps be a potent factor in the restoration of the conjugal relations and the report is that he shot the bride in the ankle and the groom in the arm. No arrests were made, and the story as heard in town was such as the bride a well known colored resident of Hawkesbury, had told it. The schooner left port with all the parties to the affair aboard, and the sequel may be told when the schooner arrives at Halifax.

GIRL IMPERSONATES SAVIOUR ON STAGE

LONDON, Jan. 11 An impersonation of Christ has been permitted for the first time on an English stage in the production of Strindberg's symbolic play 'Advent.' A 14 year old girl appeared as the Redeemer.

Dramatic critics are inclined to take view that the English stage censorship is broadening in regard to religious plays, probably owing to the fact that representations of Christ have appeared often in the films.

In the past several years plays have been refused licenses because they included Christ as one of the characters. Others received permission on condition that no character should appear reminiscent of the conventional conception of divinity in human form.

DON'T SPOIL YOUR HAIR BY WASHING IT

When you wash your hair, be careful what you use. Don't use prepared shampoos or anything else that contains too much alkali for this is very injurious, as it dries the scalp then makes the hair brittle.

The best thing to use to just plain Mulsified cocoanut oil shampoo, for this is pure and entirely greaseless. It's very cheap and beats anything else all to pieces. You can get Mulsified at any drug store, and a few ounces will last the whole family for months.

Simply moisten the hair with water and rub it in, about a teaspoon of Mulsified is all that is required. It makes an abundance of rich, creamy lather, cleanses thoroughly, and rinses out easily. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and is soft, fresh looking, bright fluffy, wavy and easy to handle. Besides, it loosens and takes out every particle of dust, dirt and dandruff. Be sure you get Mulsified. Beware of imitations. Look for the name Watkins on the package.

Fur Farming Industry And Its Importance

Mr. W. C. S. McLure Urges the Need of Greater Federal and Local Government Support for the Industry and Advocates an Experimental Fox Farming Station.

"Fur Farming is the BEST industry we have in Prince Edward Island," declared Mr. W. Chester S. McLure in an address before the Rotary Club at the Davies Hotel yesterday. "Some may question this, which they are perfectly at liberty of doing, nevertheless that will not disqualify the truth of the statement I have made," he continued. "We all know that this season business conditions have been greatly depressed; agricultural products have been difficult to sell, even at greatly reduced prices. Yet this year shows as far as estimates can be made, that the fur value of the product on the Fur Farms was over $1,500,000, all of which was marketable for spot cash right at the source of production. I do not mean to say it was all marketed, yet, at the same time there were sufficient buyers here to buy the entire output. Live animals were sold to the amount of over $500,000, making a total of over $2,000,000 revenue to the people of this Province and for the progress of business in general throughout the Island.

"Fur Farming is also one of the largest—if not the largest—net revenue producers to the government of this Province, because all taxes received from this industry are practically net, only the small amount of support of less than $1,000 being given to assist Fur Farming by our provincial government. Prince Edward Island was fortunate this year in having this industry, for if it had not been so our business conditions would be suffering like all business in other provinces.

"The Fur Farming industry in this province has been the outcome of a great idea of Sir Chas. Dalton and the late Robt. Oulton. It has flourished, boomed, waned, and is now steady, with conditions facing us that is going to mean very much to the people of Prince Edward Island.

"Fur Farming has not been supported by scientific research and organization work such as is given to other industries of far less importance. However, we are thankful for the support the Dominion Government has given our industry by the placing here of Dr. J. A. Allen, who has simply done wonders in his work. But he has not the equipment at his command to do what I know he is capable of doing.

"Now if we believe in Fur Farming why do we not insist that it be recognized by both local and Federal governments, and that something more than bleeding the industry for taxes be done?

We all know what effort is being put forth at the present time for the hen, cow, sheep, pig and horse. Why; if a hen cackles in a farmer's barnyard, two government agricultural officials arrive immediately after—one of these assists the farmer to market that egg while the other assists him to make that hen lay another and another egg. This attention given to agricultural industry and to live stock is of course an excellent thing. We have no objection to offer to it, nor to the fact that last year when discoloration occurred in our lobster pack, thousands and thousands of dollars was spent to see what could be done to overcome this and to find out the cause. But the valuable Silver Fox and Fur Farming—no matter what troubles it may encounter—has to work out its own future.

"This neglect on the part of both local and federal governments is caused largely by a lack of support given to our industry by the organizations that are supposed to lend a little service to the betterment of our Province. However, these conditions and the lack of recognition by our governments, cannot go on. Something has got to be done, and that something at an early stage—for if not we will only be a second rate producer of fine furs. Our product, Silver Fox, must be produced better and of a finer quality. I know and you all know, that we have been producing the finest skins in the world, but now we are meeting with competition and I regret to say we are not producing enough of these and skins simply because we do not all know scientifically how to feed and produce furs. Only a few fur farmers are producing a higher percentage of fur quality than last year; in fact the majority of Fur farmers are showing deterioration in their fur value produced.

"The remedy for this must be some recognized plan of scientific research that will tell a fur farmer how to feed for production and for fur quality—how to eliminate disease, and show scientific sanitary conditions for the betterment of the raising of these animals.

"I believe the time is here when we are facing the destiny of fur farming. We cannot stand still now, and we are either going to climb to greater heights or are we going to roll back to the valley. We want the people of this province to urge our governments, both local and Federal, to do something—and do it NOW. Our Boards of Trade take up all the big questions with regard to the welfare of the province, and even the greatest question they take up sinks into insignificance as compared to the great industry of fox farming. It is a remarkable thing that even in the speeches from the throne of our local government, and the replies to this speech, everything is mentioned on land and sea, in the air, and under the sea; but did you ever hear of fur farming being mentioned? What we must do now is ask from these organizations that exist to open their speaking tubes and megaphone into the very ear of our government representatives—both local and Federal—that fox farming needs assistance.

Some few years ago the Mathieson government was asked for a grant to assist in placing our furs on the great American market. They saw the possibilities of the industry and granted the request, and this gave our product one big boost on the American market. In 1920 the Fox Breeders' Association asked the Bell government for a grant for Exhibition purposes, which helped to assist in holding an exhibition in Montreal; but of late the difficulty has arisen of getting any material support.

I believe the business men of this Province, who have benefited more by fox farming than anyone else, should interest themselves in the welfare and future of the industry. Their influence is necessary and should be used to assist this great industry and the Province. We might urge upon the government both federal and local, to foster this industry. It should come under the Department of Agriculture instead of under the Tax Department. We must know what to feed, and when to feed, and why to feed for fur quality.

The greatest boon to Prince Edward Island would be if the Experimental Station at Charlottetown had annexed to it a fine Experimental Fox Farming Station. Dr. Ennis Smith is experimenting now at Mountain Road, near Ottawa, with a small ranch and some foxes provided by a few farmers of Prince County. But this is far too slow. We must have immediate action. We are producing quantity enough of furs this year that if the quality was anywhere near what it should be, their value to the province would be over $5,000,000.

There always seems to be a doubt with a great many of our people about the future markets for our furs. On this I do not believe we should have any worries, for we can turn back to 25 years ago and find then on Auction Sales held in London over 2,000 skins being offered at one time. If we will produce a good article, the market will absorb it.

Different ideas and methods of marketing have been tried. The co-operative idea of marketing and the co-operative ideas of advertising our industry all have been tried out and have more or less failed. We do not favor in this province or throughout Canada co-operative ideas. Individualism is the advance slogan of all our people today, and until such time as man can be educated into co-operative principle of doing business, which to me looks as if it is in the far distant future, let us turn our energies into the channels whereby we can produce a fine article,—the finer the better,—and the market will take care of our product.

My main object in saying a few words to you is simply in the hope that perhaps we can be aroused to think of this industry as you should think of it, in the light to day that it is our greatest industry. Think of what it has done for the people of this Province this very year. Give it the credit it deserves, and above all, give it your support that you owe to the industry in return for what it has given you. Use your influence so that the public men of this Province will be forced to recognize it as a leading industry. If you will do this every dollar put into it will yield ten fold. However, the expansion of this industry is going on, and whether we keep pace with it here in this Province or not, the great country to the South of us is leaving nothing undone by the way of practical experiments and scientific research, and if we do not begin our work soon we will meet competition that will leave us in an adverse condition. The standing of our industry, or rather our product on the fur markets, has been such as to recognize this Province as the source of the industry and the source of supply. However, if we do not give it our part we cannot expect the industry to hold its own. I therefore hope that everyone of you of this organization will give the industry your support we cannot expect the industry to hold its own. I therefore hope govenments.
