force was to be despatched for the protection of the fisheries. You are aware of the very efficient manner in which that service was performed. And I am happy to bear testimony to the discretion and forbearance of the officer in command, Vice Admiral Sir George Seymour entrusted so delicate and difficult a duty. And I believe that the wise, necessary and well timed course adopted by the British Government will avert serious disputes and future collisions with the subjects of a friendly power, and otherwise lead to happy consequences.

After the close of the fishery season, Her Majesty's Government and the Colonial Ministers were about to enter into "a Negotiation upon the broadest basis of reciprocal and equivalent concessions in Trade," and it was my duty (indeed I was instructed,) to furnish a statement of the several points affecting the interests of this Island, proper to be considered in such negotiations. You may be assured that those interests will not be neglected.

You will therefore, I hope, concur with me that it would be desirable, at present, to abstain from taking any active measures on the subject of the Fisheries or of Trade, which might by any possibility embarrass or impede the proceedings of the respective Governments, in bringing these negotiations to a successful and amicable termination; an event which I am sure would be hailed by you and the people of Prince Edward Island with the greatest satisfaction,—for you will remember the excitement which prevailed in the United States in the early part of last summer on the Fishery Question, which partly arose from statements promulgated in the Colonies, without that due caution, the want of which was foreseen by the Minister who held the Colonial seals in 1845, when he alluded "to the danger which cannot fail to arise from an overstrained assumption of the power of excluding the fishermen of the United States from the waters in which they have the right to follow their pursuits." On the other hand, the American Press, at the time I refer to, seemed entirely to overlook the flagrant breaches of the Treaty which were daily committed by American subjects, within limits which their abler Statesmen admit their countrymen have neither right nor title to trespass. By the Convention of 1818, United States fishermen have liberty in common with Her Majesty's subjects to take fish of every kind in those waters which are defined in the Treaty, and they have liberty "to dry and cure fish in any of the unsettled bays, harbors and creeks on the southern part of Newfoundland and of the coast of Labrador."

Should the American Government therefore agree to make such equivalent concessions as may make it advisable to accord to the United States privileges which are enjoyed by Her Majesty's subjects here, the Fishery Question, in so far as Prince Edward Island is concerned, admits of easy solution; for the colony is in possession of numerous reserves, abutting on its sea shores, bays, harbors and creeks, where the tides ebb and flow, expressly granted and secured for fishery purposes by His late Majesty King George the Third. With the advice of the Executive, I have forwarded to the Queen's Government a Map delineating the localities of these reserves, distinguishing the tenures by which they are held, and copies of that Map will be laid before you.

I cannot conclude, without alluding to the advantages which must accrue to the inhabitants of this Colony from the Electric Telegraph, which, notwithstanding their insular position, will enable them not only to interchange intelligence with their neighbours in the adjoining Provinces, but also with those in the remote corner of the vast American Continent, in the shortest space of time. Man's intellect, the gift of his Creator, graciously bestowed to carry out His beneficent purpose for the good of the human race, cannot be more wonderfully exemplified than by the discovery that an Electric Cable "in the deep bosom of the ocean buried," may convey to the shores of Europe, within one hundred and forty miles distant, in a very few minutes, the words I am now addressing to you. Such will be the result when this great undertaking is completed: and to the enterprising gentlemen who have embarked their capital to accomplish it, this Colony is much indebted,—and I hope they will meet with that support and success which they so well deserve.

I shall be happy at all times, and on all subjects, to communicate with you, to expedite public business, and to promote the welfare of the people.

After His Excellency's Speech had been read by John M'Neill, Esq., the Senior Clerk of the House, the House proceeded to the appointment of the usual Standing Committees.

Messrs. Clark, Davies, Mooney, Laird, Fraser, Montgomery, and the Hon. Mr. Pope, were appointed a Committee to prepare the Draft of an Address in answer to His Excellency's Speech.

MR. FREE EDUCATION ACT.

Hon. Mr. COLES introduced a Bill to rectify an omission in the Free Education Act, which had accidentally occurred, through an oversight, on the part of the Committee who examined the engrossed copy of the Bill last Session. It was intended, that Assessors for the Assessment of the inhabitants of Charlottetown and Common, and of Georgetown and Common should be appointed by the Government: the error is the omission of "Charlottetown and Common" in the clause authorizing the appointment.

OPPOSITION PARTY IN PARLIAMENT.

On its being proposed that MR. LONGWORTH, should be a member of the Committee to prepare the Draft of an Address in answer to His Excellency's Speech,—

MR. HAVILAND rose and said, that he did not know whether Mr. Longworth was a member of the opposition party or not; but if he was, it was highly improper, in his (Mr. H's.) opinion, to appoint him a member of the Committee to prepare an Address, in answer to His Excellency's Speech. This Committee, under the responsible System, which, it was said, was now fully established, ought to consist wholly of members taken from the ministerial majority in the House, according to the long established usage of the British House of Commons; it would be absurd to call upon the opposition to assist in carrying out views to which they were opposed, and to aid the Government in the framing of their measures.

Hon. MR. COLES replied that, if such was the view which the opposition took of their duties in the House, he would advise them to give notice to their constituents that they would decline taking an active share in the business of the House, and that they would object to being appointed members of any of its Committees.

MR. HAVILAND rejoined, that the use of an opposition in Parliament was to keep watch over the proceedings of the ministerial party, to check any attempts at encroachments upon the liberties and rights of the people; and that, provided they vigilantly discharged their duty in that respect, and, by means of their opposition, put the people on their guard against designs, adverse to their true interests, they would discharge the most important of their duties to their constituents, although they should never lend a helping hand for the furtherance of any one ministerial measure.

Hon. Mr. COLES finally observed, that no member of a Committee was expected to do violence to his conscience, or to subscribe sentiments of which he disapproved. It would always be easy for a member so circumstanced, to express his dissent, in his place, by the whole or any part of a Report made by a Committee of which he was a member.

After a few very brief observations from the Hon. Mr. Pope, Mr. Mooney, and the Hon. Mr. Haviland, the matter dropped, and the Committee was appointed as above.

BLACKWOOD'S MAGAZINE for JANUARY Just received,

PROSPECTUS

OF THE

Charlottetown Gas Company.

PROVISIONAL COMMITTEE:

Hon. DANIEL BRENAN, Chairman;
Hon. Charles Young, Hon. W. W. Lord,
Hon. Charles Binney, Hon. Joseph Pope,
Francis Longworth, Esq., James Walkinshaw, Esq.,
Mr. James Anderson, Henry Haszard, Esq.,
Hon. George Birnie, Hon. Peter Byrne,
James D. Haszard, Esq., George DeBlois, Esq.

THE superiority and advantages of Gas over every other method yet discovered for lighting Towns are so universally and so generally acknowledged, that it would be superfluous to dilate on the subject; and it is only surprising that, while every Town and considerable Village in Great Britain, as also many Towns in adjacent Colonies, are lighted by Gas, this, the Capital of Prince Edward Island should be still in darkness.

To supply this desideratum, it is now proposed to form a Joint Stock Company—to be Incorporated by an Act of the Legislature—with a subscribed Capital of £6000, in 1200 Shares, of £5 each, to be managed by a body of Directors, annually chosen by the Shareholders.

As many of the inhabitants of Charlottetown may be conversant with Gas Companies, and with the practical results of Gas Companies, it may be proper to observe, that a Joint Stock Company for the purpose of lighting the Town with Gas, can hardly be called a speculation; because it is established, by reference to the annual Reports and Dividends of the Gas Companies of Great Britain, and some of the neighbouring Colonies, that when these Works have been managed with ordinary prudence and economy, they have yielded a certain and steady return of annual interest on the capital invested.

Previous to bringing the scheme before the public, the Provisional Committee had been in correspondence with competent parties, both in the neighboring Provinces and in Great Britain, and from the information thus obtained, and the estimates they have received, they are of opinion that the Land, Buildings, Apparatus, Machinery and Pipes requisite to enable the Company to go fully into operation, may be acquired and completed for and with the proposed capital.

To enable the Company to commence operations at once, and on the most advantageous terms, it has been resolved that a deposit of £1 5s. per share be paid on the subscribed Shares, and that no further call be made, till the Act of Incorporation be obtained; and that such further calls shall be payable by such instalments, and at such intervals, as the Directors may deem most convenient for the Shareholders and the requirements of the Company.

Although certain spirited individuals were prepared to subscribe the whole of the requisite Capital, it is deemed but fair to give the public an opportunity of participating in the advantages of the undertaking; and the Provisional Committee Lists will remain open at the Office of Mr. Lawson, Interim Secretary to the Committee,—more than one-half of the Shares being already subscribed.

JOHN MORRISON, In. Secretary.

☞ Office—Des Brisay's Buildings, Queen-street, same door as the Clerk of Commissioners of Small Debts—UP STAIRS.

In addition to its greater economy, Gas Light may also be pronounced safer than any other ordinary Light. It produces no sparks—it cannot be carelessly placed in contact with bed curtains, or substances easily ignited; it requires scarcely any attention. It may be turned down in an instant to the most minute speck of flame, ready to be restored to full brilliancy when necessary, by the simple turning of the stop cock; and even when it escapes by the carelessness of an attendant, or a defect in the fittings, it at once indicates the accident to the whole household, by the disagreeable smell which it occasions.

From the large quantity which must be mixed with atmospheric air to form an explosive compound, it is scarcely possible that this accident should occur, in any ordinary apartment, even if the Gas were allowed to escape for the purpose. And as its smell so instantly indicates its presence, accidents, or other confined situations, where it may have escaped in quantity from the accidental breaking, or leakage of a pipe, it is only by the greatest carelessness, or ignorance, that a light will be approached to it, before it has been allowed to escape by the free admission of air. There is no such thing as the bursting of a pipe, or the blowing up of a Gasometer.

RELATIVE EXPENSE.—The relative cost of Gas has been generally estimated at rather more than one-third to one-half the cost of tallow candles.
