Reputation Of Gen. Speidel Vindicated In British Court

reputation of West German General Hans Speidel, commander of NATO land forces in Central Europe, has been vindicted in the high court here.

Mr. Justice John Megaw declared that "exceptionally grave allegations" against him in a film called Operation Teutonic Sword were without any foundation.

Before the judge were two libel actions brought by Speidel against Plato Films Limited, two directors of the company and Unity Theatre Society Limited.

Speidel's counsel said the complaint was that Speide, had been depicted as having been a party to the assassinations of King Alexander of Yugoslavia and French Foreign Minister Louis Barthou in 1934 and as having betrayed Field Marshal Erwin Rommel to the Nazis after July 20. 1944.

The defendants said they recognized there was no foundation for the allegations and offered their regrets at having ever given currency to them. They agreed to pay Speidel's costs and undertook not to show the film again and to surrender copies in their possession.

Speidel's counsel said it had never been the general's desire to make capital out of the publications but he had been obliged to clear his reputation. Now tha his reputation has been publicly vindicated he did not wish to press for damages, the counsel said.

One letter simply stands for another. In this sample A is used for the three L's, X for the two O's, etc. Single letters, apostrophies, the length and formation of the words are all hints. Each day the code letters are different.

Opening lead — four of clubs.

The Dizzy Dozen were having their regular Friday night duplicate game. They had asked me over, not to play, but to show me how bridge is played in their league.

I got my money's worth on the first board I watched. You couldn't ask for anything more.

East opened two clubs with her respectable hand. The bidding went as shown, with South ending at six spades doubled.

West led a club and East made her ace of spades, but no more. So North-South scored 1,660 points as a result of making six spades doubled.

Of course, East was disappointed by the result, but to add to her woes, West, related by marriage to East, excoriated his better half for failing to have two defensive tricks when she doubled a slam!

When the hand was over, out of curiosity I moved to the next table to see what would happen when the deal was played again. Here, it turned out, the final contract was six clubs, played by East. South led the king of spades and East had a momentary thrill when she saw the dummy and the opening lead. Thirteen tricks looked easy.

However, when East led the ace of clubs, and South showed out, her hopes went glimmering. In an effort to make the hand, she cashed another trump and led the ace of diamonds, hoping North had all the missing diamonds. But when North ruffed the first diamond and cashed two hearts, East found herself down two.

At the third table, West, after a lengthy series of complicated bids, became declarer at six diamonds. North decided to lead a spade and West had no trouble making thirteen tricks.

So a slam was made at one table with the North - South cards, and another one at a different table with the East-West cards.

Maybe the bridge played by the Dizzy Dozen isn't entirely up to snuff, but it sure is exciting.
