EARTH'S CHANGES.

BY MRS. SIGOURNEY.

As waves the grass upon the field to-day,
Which soon the wasting scythe shall sweep away,
As smiles the flow'ret in the morning dew,
Which eve's chill blast upon the winds may strew,
Thus in brief glory boast the sons of clay,
They bloom awhile, then wither and decay.

Dust tends to dust,—with ashes, ashes blend,
The unseasoned turf covers the cloven friend:
A few may sigh upon the grave's dark brink,
A few salt tears the broken soul may drink,
A few sad hearts in lonely anguish bleed,
And pay that tribute which they soon must need.

I saw the infant in its robes of white,
Its dimpled mother's ever dear delight,
It clapp'd its hands when tones of mirth went by,
And nature's gladness glistened in its eye:
Again I came! an empty cradle there,
A little coffin, and a funeral prayer.

I saw a ruddy boy of vigour bold,
Who feared not summer's heat nor winter's cold,
With dexterous heel he skimm'd the frozen pool,
His laugh ran loudest 'mid his mates at school:—
Again I sought him, but his name was found
On the low stone that marks you churchyard mound.

Oh! boasted joys of earth! how swift ye fly,
Rent from the hand, or hidden from the eye;
So through the web the weaver's shuttle glides,
So speeds the vessel o'er the billowy tides,
So cleaves the bird the liquid fields of light
And leaves no traces of its trackless flight.

But we, frail beings, shrinking from the storm,
We love those skies that gathering clouds deform;
Though wounded oft, as oft renew our toil,
To rear our fabric on this sand-swept soil;
And still we strive, forgetful of the grave,
To fix our anchor on the tossing wave.

Yet He, who marks us in our vain career,
Oh shows how frail is what we hold most dear,
Spreads o'er some face below'd the deathful gloom,
Or hides a parent in the lonely tomb;
Arrests the thoughtless, bids the worldling feel,
Wounds to admonish, and afflicts to heal.

Look to that world where every pain shall cease,
Grief turn to joy, and labour end in peace.
Oh! seek that world, by penitence and prayer;
Sow the seed here, and reap the fruitage there,
Where shadowy joys no longer cheat the soul,
But one unclouded year in changeless light shall roll.

Varieties.

THE FARMER'S DAUGHTER.

There is a world of beauty flourishing in the shades of the country. Farm houses are dangerous places. As you are thinking only of sheep or of curds, you may be shot through by a pair of bright eyes, and melted away in a bewitching smile you never dreamed of, until the mischief is done. In towns and theatres, and thronged assemblies of the titled fair, you are on your guard, you know so well how you are exposed to, and put on your breast-plate, pass through the most terrible onslaught of beauty, safe and sound. But in those sylvan retreats, dreaming of nightingales, and hearing only the lowing of oxen, you are taken by surprise. Out steps a fair creature—crosses a glade—leaps a stile. You start—you stand lost in wonder and admiration! You take out your tablets to write a sonnet on the return of the Nymphs and Dryads to earth, when up comes John Tompkins, and says:—"It's only a Farmer's daughter." "What have farmers got daughters now-a-days." These farm houses are dangerous places. Let no man with a poetical imagination, which is only another name for a very tender heart, flatter himself with the fancies of the rural delights of the country; with the serene idea of sitting with the farmer in his old-fashioned chimney corner, and hear him talk of corn and mutton; of joining him in the pensive pleasures of a pipe, and jug of brown October; of listening to the gossip of the comfortable farmer's wife, of the parson and his family; of his sermons and his pig, over a fragrant cup of young hyson, or wrapped in the delicious luxuries of young custards and whipped cream. Yet, alas! alas! a fairy vision of wondrous witchery, and a smile of winning and mysterious magic, and takes her seat just opposite. It is the farmer's daughter, a living creature of eighteen; fair as the lily, sweet as a posy of violets and clove gillivers, modest as early morn, and nimble as your own imagination of Desdemona or Gertrude of Wyoming. You're lost. It's all over with you. And that comes of going into the country, out of the way of vanity and temptation, and fancying farm houses to be the quiet old-fashioned places of old-established contentment.—Exchange paper.

HIGH LIFE IN THE FIFTEENTH CENTURY.

We give the following glimpse of the manners of the upper classes in England, four hundred years ago, from the journal of Elizabeth Woodville, subsequently Lady Grey, and finally Queen of Edward IV. Royalty in petto seemes to have taken, with a most refreshing cordiality, to the avocations of baking and brewing, pig tending, poultry feeding, and pony catching:

"Monday morning.—Rose at 4 o'clock, and helped Catharine to milk the cows. Rachel, the dairy maid having scalded her hand in so bad a manner the night before; made a poultice, and gave Robin a pony to get something from the apothecary.

"6 o'clock.—The buttock of beef much boiled, and beer a little stale; (mem) to talk to the cook about the first fault, and to mend the other myself by tapping a fresh barrel immediately.

"7 o'clock.—Went to walk with the lady my mother in the court yard; fed 25 men and women; chid Roger severely for expressing some ill will at attending us with some broken meat.

"8 o'clock.—Went into the paddock behind the house with my maid Dorothy; caught Thump, the little pony myself; rode a matter of ten miles without bridle or saddle.

"10 o'clock.—Went to dinner. John Grey, a most comely youth; but what is that to me? A virtuous maid should be entirely under the direction of her parents. John ate but little, and stole a great many tender glances at me. Said women could never be handsome in his eyes. who were not good tempered. I hope my temper is not intolerable; nobody finds fault with it but Roger, and he is the most disorderly youth in our house. John Grey likes white teeth; my teeth are a pretty good color. I think my hair is as black as jet—though I say it; and John Grey, if I mistake not, is of the same opinion.

"11 o'clock.—Rose from the table—the company all desirous of walking in the field. John Grey lifted me over every stile, and twice squeezed my hand with much vehemence. I cannot say I would have much objection, for he plays at prison bar as well as any of the country gentlemen; he is remarkably dutiful to his parents, my lord and lady, and never misses church on Sunday.

"3 o'clock.—Poor Farmer Robinson's house burnt down by accidental fire. John Grey proposed a subscription among the company for the relief of the farmer, and gave no less than four pounds with this benevolent intent. (Mem) never saw him look so comely as at this moment.

"4 o'clock.—Went to prayers.

"6 o'clock.—Fed hogs and poultry.

Wise and good men are indeed precious gifts, with which heaven blesses the earth, and their wisdom is seldom justly appreciated, till after their decease.

"When two pairs of affectionate lips are placed together, to the intent of osculation, they seise on something that resembles—pepper-tel and then the sound tapers off so soft and so musical, that no letters can do it justice."

THE FIRMAMENT.—The Almighty's book whose hieroglyphical characters are the unnumbered stars, sun and moon, written on the large volumes of the firmament.

The exports of tea from China shows an increase of 1,800,000 lbs. compared with last year; of silk, the decrease is equal to about 300 bales.

HERE IS YOUR REMEDY!

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT.

A MOST MIRACULOUS CURE OF BAD LEG, AFTER 43 YEARS' SUFFERING.

Extract of a Letter from Mr. William Galpin, of 70, Saint Mary's Street, Weymouth, dated May 15, 1851.

To Professor HOLLOWAY.

SIR,—At the age of 18 my wife (who is now 61) caught a violent cold, which settled in her legs, and ever since that time they have been more or less sore, and greatly inflamed. Her agonies were distracting, and for months together she was deprived entirely of rest and sleep. Every remedy that medical men advised was tried, but without effect; her health suffered severely, and the state of her legs was terrible. I had often read your Advertisements, and advised her to try your Pills and Ointment; and, as a last resource, after every other remedy had proved useless, she consented to do so. She commenced six weeks ago, and, strange to relate, is now in good health. Her legs are painless, without seam or scar, and her sleep sound and undisturbed. Could you have witnessed the sufferings of my wife during the last 43 years, and contrasted them with her present enjoyment of health, you would indeed feel delighted in having been the means of so greatly alleviating the sufferings of a fellow creature.

(Signed) WILLIAM GALPIN.

A PERSON 70 YEARS OF AGE CURED OF A BAD LEG, OF THIRTY YEARS' STANDING.

Copy of a Letter from Mr. Wm. Abbs, Builder of Gas Ovens, of Rushcliffe, near Huddersfield, dated May 31, 1851.

To Professor HOLLOWAY.

SIR,—I suffered for a period of thirty years from a bad leg, the result of two or three different accidents at Gas Works; accompanied by scorbutic symptoms. I had recourse to a number of medical advisers, without deriving any benefit, and was even told that the leg must be amputated; yet, in opposition to that opinion, your Pills and Ointment have effected a complete cure in no short a time, than few who had not witnessed it would credit the fact.

(Signed) WILLIAM ABBS.

The truth of this statement can be verified by Mr. W. P. England, Chemist, 13, Market Street, Huddersfield.

A DREADFUL BREAST CURED IN ONE MONTH.

Extract of a Letter from Mr. Frederick Turner, of Penshurst, Kent, dated December 13, 1850.

To Professor HOLLOWAY.

DEAR SIR,—My wife had suffered from Bad Breasts for more than six months, and during the whole period had the best medical attendance, but all to no use. Having seen your advertisement, I determined to try them, and in less than a month, I was completely cured. What is more remarkable I was engaged twelve hours a day in the Hay Harvest, and although I have followed no labor-to exertion throughout the winter, I have had no return whatever of my complaint.

(Signed) JOHN FORFAR.

AN INFLAMMATION IN THE SIDE PERFECTLY CURED.

Copy of a Letter from Mr. Francis Arnot, of Breahouse, Lothian Road, Edinbro', dated April 29th, 1851.

To Professor HOLLOWAY.

SIR,—For more than twenty years my wife has been subject, from time to time to attacks of inflammation in the side, for which she was bled and blistered to a great extent; still the pain could not be removed. About four years ago, she saw in the papers, the wonderful cures effected by your Pills and Ointment, and thought she would give them a trial. To her great astonishment and delight, she got immediate relief from their use, and after persevering for three weeks, the pain in her side was completely cured, and she has enjoyed the best of health for the last four years.

(Signed) FRANCIS ARNOT.
