All Tired Out Before Day Half Over

Women who should be strong and healthy become weak, run down and worn out, and are unable to attend to their household duties. They get up in the morning dreading the day's work ahead of them.

Some disease or constitutional disturbance has left its mark in the form of shattered nerves, impoverished blood, and an exhausted condition of the entire system.

Women will find in Milburn's Health and Nerve Pills the remedy they need to supply food for the exhausted nerve force, and one that will help them back to sound, perfect health again.

INTERESTING NEWS FLASHES ON PELT SHOW

C. M. Lampson And Co. Ltd., Of London, Eng. To Market First Island Show Pelts.

C. M. LAMPSON & CO. LTD. OF LONDON, ENG. TO MARKET FIRST PRINCE EDWARD ISLAND SHOW PELTS

Arrangements have been completed by the Pelt Show Committee for C. M. Lampson & Co. Ltd., of London, to market the First Show Pelts from Prince Edward Island.

C. M. Lampton & Co. Ltd., marketed the First Dalton Silver Pelts, and years later they are now marketing the First Show Pelts from the same Province, which is significant.

All Show Pelts of select quality will be stamped as such, bearing a metal tag showing the pelts to be from Prince Edward Island, Canada. The Show Tag, which will be a large linen tag, printed in red, white and blue colors, and giving the name and address of the breeder, together with the winning of the pelt in the show will be attached to the pelt and carry through to the ultimate purchaser.

In addition to the above, the Prince Edward Island Department of Agriculture shall cause a proper seal to be affixed to the nose of each pelt, which in the Department's opinion measures up to the standard of quality set by that Department. Mr. Fred Burke, the Provincial Fox Fieldman shall determine, and affix the Department's seal of extra fine quality.

All quality Show Pelts tagged and sealed as above outlined are to be hung in groups on the Auction Floor. The full silver show pelts will be hung in a group with other full silver pelts. The 3-4 silvers will be hung in a group likewise, and so on in each color phase.

Such system of tagging and grouping is certain to attract the attention of buyers looking for show pelts, and the attached tags and seals will do much to enhance the interest in bidding when such pelts are put over the auction block.

Liberals To Aid Drew's Election

TORONTO, Dec. 13 —(CP) — Announcement of the riding in which Col. George A. Drew, new provincial Conservative party leader, will seek a seat in the Ontario Legislature will be made in about 10 days, it was predicted in legislative circles.

It was believed Col. Drew would run in one of five rural ridings held by Conservatives.

Premier Hepburn, who announced Saturday the Government would not oppose Col. Drew's candidature, may co-operate in allowing the new leader to sit in the House next session by announcing the byelection date within a few days.

"I can guarantee that the entry of a third party candidate will not prevent an acclamation," said Mr. Hepburn. "I will welcome Col. Drew to the House. He is a colorful figure and a man of unusual ability. I am sure he will add to the dignity of political life in Ontario."

"BABES IN THE WOODS":—

Missing Children Found

HALIFAX, Dc. 13—(CP)—Three tired children were recovering in a Halifax hospital tonight from a night spent in the woods three miles from their home in Lakeside, N. S. Physicians said their condition was not serious and they would return home soon.

Doris White, 10, her eight-year-old brother Clyde, and Billy Gilfoy, seven, were found by a search party early today, cold, tired and wet. They were slumped against a bank near a lake.

The three children left their homes in Lakeside district, about 15 miles southwest of Halifax, to set rabbit snares late yesterday. When they did not return at dusk, a search party was organized including Royal Canadian Mounted and Halifax City Police, as well as Lucy Greek, the children's school teacher.

Rushed To Hospital

The children were carried back by their rescuers to the little frame house where the two families lived. After first aid was administered, they were rushed to hospital here. Doris' knees were numb and she could not walk. None of the children wore mittens, but coats provided some slight protection against the cold weather.

"We never kept warm, but we laid close to gether," Billie Gilfoy told his rescuers. "And Peggy (the dog which accompanied the children) stayed with us. I was so glad to see my mama, and Doris and Clyde wanted their mama too."

The children's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence White and Mrs. Edith Gilfoy, spent a sleepless night hoping for word of their children.

The children said they had seen a moose and a couple of deer while wandering about in the woods, trying to find the way out.

Newil Bates, Clarence White and Bill Clark of Halifax were in the party that came across the children near Otter Lake. They apparently had reached the lake and started northward.

"The girl just woke up when I hollered and said 'huh,'" Bates said. The two boys were sleeping. The little brown and white spaniel lay across the Gilfoy boy's knee.

"I wasn't afraid," Billy said. "Doris and Clyde cried and almost made me cry, but I wasn't afraid." Doris also emphatically declared she wasn't afraid either.

Recalls Nursery Rhyme

(C. P. by Guardian's Special Wire)

HALIFAX, Dec. 13—Three modern "babes in the woods" recovered in hospital here tonight from 15 hours of exposure in Halifax County's wild bushland—far more fortunate than two small children whose disappearance 96 years ago formed the basis of one of the world's most touching nursery rhymes.

While Doris and Clyde White and Billie Gilfoy snuggled in the warm blankets in the hospital where they were brought this morning from the Likeside district 15 miles distant, Halifax residents recalled the disappearance of Margaret and Jane Elizabeth Meagher from their home near Dartmouth, across the harbor.

The two little Meagher girls, aged four and six years, skipped down the path from their home April 11, 1842, waved goodbye to their mother and disappeared into the woods looking for spring flowers. They were never seen alive again.

The frantic mother sought neighbors' assistance in hunting them. Six days later searchers found the two, clasped in each others arms, beneath a trees and half covered with dead leaves.

Shortly after the story appeared, the poem "Babes In The Woods" was written to commemorate the event.

CHILDREN'S AID SOCIETY ELECT SLATE

Dr. J. A. MacPhee Re-elected President At Annual Meeting Last Night.

Dr. J. A. MacPhee was reelected president of the Children's Aid Society at the annual meeting held last night in the Town Hall, Summerside. Rt. Rev. Mgr. J. G. MacLellan, Vice-President, 2nd Vice-President Rev. William Verwolf, Secty-Treasurer David Lidstone. Honorary solicitor Heath Strong K. C.

Board of managment: Mrs. L. R. Allen, Mrs. Frank McNeill, Mrs. C. Stewart, Mrs. P. MacMahon, Miss E. Green, Miss Mary Mill, Miss M. Wedge, Mrs. Joseph Callaghan, Mrs. W.B. McNeill, Miss C. E. Holman, Mrs. L. A. Moore, Rev. J. B. Wilson, Rev. G. R. Harrison, Rev. John Kelly, Rev. A. B. McDiarmid, A. F. Arsenault, E. P. Foley, W. E. Currie, C. B. Jelly, C. Whalen.

Juvenile Court Committee, Miss Eleanor Green, Mrs. L. A. Moore, Rev. John Kelly, Miss C. E. Holman, Mrs. W. B. McNeill.

Dr. MacPhee in reviewing the work of the society for the past year stated that a number of children had been taken care of by the society some placed in foster homes and some in the Orphanages. Five sittings of the Juvenile Court were held during the year. Three boys were committed to St. Patricks Home, Halifax, two placed in foster homes and seven boys and one girl placed on probation.

Dr. MacPhee spoke of the splendid work of the late Judge Inman, who was Judge of the Juvenile Court since his appointment to the Prince County Bench. He also spoke highly of the work of his successor and of Stipendiary Magistrate E. H. Strong, who acted in the interim.

Speaking of the criticism which is some times expressed about the Juvenile Court, Dr. MacPhee felt that much work of a reformatory character is done in the Juvenile Court. In many cases children have reformed after being before the Judge. Delinquent children are as a rule subnormal and need different methods than those of the ordinary courts. Dr. MacPhee was of the opinion that criticism of the Juvenile Court was unjustified. With regard to the work of the Children's Aid Society since its organization in 1922 there is much good work to its credit, especially with regard looking after delinquent children. The active work however is done by a few and the Society is not getting the cooperation that it should. There is a great necessity for an industrial school in the province and also an institution to take care of subnormal chidren. Economic conditions in the home are often one of the causes of delinquency, among the young and better economic conditions would help to lessen delinquency.

In closing Dr. MacPhee stressed the need for a larger membership, and expressed his thanks to the officers of the Society, the Clergy and the Press for their support. A resolution of condolence was placed in the minutes expressing sympathy to Mr. Heath Strong on the death of his mother, Mrs. C. Edward Strong and also extending sympathy on the death of his uncle the late Dr. E. E. Sinclair.

The agents report and secretary-treasurer's report were read and passed.

BEST COUGH MEDICINE CAN NOW BE MADE AT HOME

COSTS BUT FEW CENTS
CHILDREN WILL LOVE IT

Mothers do this—make a syrup by dissolving 2 tablespoons of sugar in half a teacupful of warm water. Add the contents of one small bottle of Buckley's Cough Mixture and mix well. This will make 3 bottles of the most effective creamy white alkaline cough remedy and you save money. Take a dessert spoonful every half-hour. It's really wonderful to see how quickly it relieves stubborn coughs and colds. Right away that tight ness loosens up—phlegm is expelled—bronchial passages cleared—breathing becomes easier—you sleep soundly.

Get a bottle of Buckley's Mixture today and make 3 bottles—enough to last the family all through the bad weather. Learn for yourself why we say the best cough medicine is made at home with Buckley's Mixture. All druggists sell Buckley's Mixture. 1.E

that assigned to Gottfried Aschmann, head of the German Foreign Office press department, whom Chancellor Hitler had sent to London to hear the address. Other German guests were to have included members of the Embassy staff and journalists.

Make Announcement

Shortly before the dinner the German Embassy announced:—

"The German Ambassador and members of the Embassy staff and German Journalists sincerely regret that because of certain sentences in the Prime Minister's speech they should not attend the Foreign Press Association's dinner in London tonight."

Dr. Stefan Litauer, president of the Association, said the German objections resulted from Mr. Chamberlain's criticism of the Nazi press.

Nearly 500 other guests attended the dinner, including the Italian Ambassador, Count Dino Grandi, the Ambassadors of France, Belgium, Brazil, Poland and the Soviet union.

Mr. Chamberlain, speaking on the air, told a world-wide audience he would "never leave off trying" to reach a goal toward which "my aim has never wavered." That goal was "a prolonged and determined effort to eradicate possible causes of war and to try out methods of personal discussion, while at the same time proceeding steadily with such armament as was necessary to secure the power of defence which we had voluntarily abandoned for a period of many years."

Recounts Successes

He recounted successes of the past year —the agreement with Eire, the agreement with Italy, the Munich agreement, the no-war declaration signed with Chancellor Hitler with its complementary French -German declaration, and the Anglo-American trade agreement. He continued:—

"Here, then, in something less than a 12month, are five major international agreements, three of which were concluded between democratic and authoritarian states. Surely that is an achievement which calls for satisfaction rather than pressimism, and one which should encourage us to persist in the policy which has given such remarkable results."

His policy of working in harmony with Germany and Italy did not mean he favored Nazism or Fascism for Great Britain, he said.

Announcing Britain's rearmament policy had progressed to a state where the country could fulfil its obligations to the people at home and in the Empire, and to countries to which it was bound by treaties, he paid tribute to France.

"In my own lifetime we were within an ace of war with France," he said. "Today such a catastrophe seems as remote as a war with America. In fact our relations with France are so close that they go far beyond mere legal obligations, since they are founded on identity of interest."

In this quotation Mr. Chamberlain made another minor change in emphasis from his prepared text which had stated: "Our relations with France are so close as to pass beyond mere legal obligations."

French observers quickly pointed to the strong terms as an answer by the Prime Minister to Italian assertions that his statement in the House of Commons on Monday that Britain had no formal obligations to aid France in case of aggression by Italy was a warning to France.

Historical Lessons

The Prime Minister emphasized that history taught two lessons—that "attempts at domination were never long successful and have never added to the happiness of the nations which have attempted it," and that forms of government are ephemeral and changeable.

He had faced two alternatives when relations of Great Britain with Germany and Italy were reteriorating rapidly. One was to make up his mind that war was inevitable and throw the whole energies of the nation into preparation for it.

The other was the one that he said he had constantly pursued. He had never expected to reach his goal in a twinkling of an eye or without checks and disappointments. There had been reverses but "I am neither disheartened nor deterred by these passing phases."

The Prime Minister said he was convinced that despite the Nazi Press attitude, the German people agreed with the British people that they never again could go to war with one another, but that differences should be settled by consultation.

With reference to the other end of the Rome-Berlin Axis Mr. Chamberlain said he and Lord Halifax would discuss with Premier Mussolini and members of his Government next month "all matters of common interest and concern."

"It may be that some will once again be speculating upon who is the winner and who is the loser in these talks," he said. "That is not the spirit in which we propose to undertake the journey. Rather has it been our hope that we might find an atmosphere in which it would be possible, by a personal interchange, better to understand each other's viewpoint, and by establishing greater confidence to cooperate one way or another in further steps towards a general sense of stability and security."

Mr. Chamberlain said the absence of peace of mind today weighed upon the world and "in its turn, by destroying confidence, prevents us from reaping the material advantages to which human progress, mastering the forces of nature, should entitle us."

Concludes With Appeal

"I would conclude," he said, "by appealing through you to all the nations you represent to realize that our aim should be the happiness of all our people and that that happiness can only be attained if we are willing to lay aside suspicion and prejudice, ceasing to look for points of differences and to search instead for points of agreement."

The Prime Minister only learned of the German refusal to attend when he was halfway through dinner —getting down to his "Peche de Plambee at Munich" on the elaborate menu.

Dr. Litauer said ousting of the German Journalists from the Foreign Press Association would be considered at its next meeting.

Talking to a distinguished audience of international newspapermen, Mr. Chamberlain opened with jocular criticism.

He would "face all the dictators of the world with less apprehension than I do this nameless power which we call the press, and which conveys our words to every corner of the globe with unimpeachable accuracy but yet with such variation in effect that no two reports seem to be alike."

He "frankly" admitted that "we who carry the responsibility of State Administration can no more dispense with your services than you can dispense with ours, who furnish you with so much of your daily food."

Dr. Stefan Litauer, president of the Association, proposed the toast to the King and read a telegram sent by the Association to George VI assuring him of the desire of the members of the Association "to continue to work in this country for the maintaining of peace in the world and friendship among nations."

The King replied: "I am well aware of the efforts of the Association in the past to promote peace and understanding among the nations of the world and I wish them every success in the future."

Dr. Litauer said the divergence of international views had not affected the Association.

"We are a brotherhood of the pen and we desire to remain a brotherhood," he said.

"We are aware how fortunate we are to be able to pursue this task in Great Britain. For 50 years our brotherhood has enjoyed the hospitality of this country, hospitality which during the war was interrupted for some, though strengthened for others. During these 50 years our work has no parallel anywhere else."

Alluding to the Prime Minister's appeasement policies Dr. Litauer concluded: "In your efforts to promote peace and justice and fair play we shall all be your accomplices."

In addition to the Prime Minister, guests of honor included Lord Halifax, Leslie Hore-Belisha, Lord Stanhope and Oliver Stanley, members of the cabinet.

Will Discuss Mine Safety Measures

WASHINGTON, Dec. 13—(AP)—Representatives of the United States coal mining industry will meet in Washington Friday and Saturday to discuss means of promoting safety in the mines.

Interior secretary Ickes said the meeting was arranged at the direction of President Roosevelt, responding to a resolution of the United Mine workers, who asked a conference to correct "a significant increase" in coal mine disasters since 1934.

The secretary said representatives of coal mine operators, employees, mining engineers, state mine inspection departments, the interior department and the public would attend the conference.

COMBAT RHEUMATISM

Rheumatism is often caused by uric acid in the blood. This blood impurity should be extracted by the kidneys. If kidneys fail, and excess uric acid remains, it irritates the muscles and joints causing excruciating pains. Plan to help prevent rheumatism by keeping your kidneys in good condition.
