A Fashion a Day

The Guardian's Special Pattern Service

UNUSUAL LINES

Distinctive one-piece dress closing in surplice style, ending in pressed plaits, a new note of fashion, is seen in Design No. 624. Plaid transparent velvet is illustrated with lever collar and vestee of plain velvet in harmonizing tone. Two surfaces of crepe satin, wool jersey, lightweight tweed, faille crepe and wool crepe are effective and practical for all-around wear. Pattern for this jaunty dress can be had in sizes 16 years, 36, 38, 40, 42, and 44 inches bust measure. The 36-inch size required 3⅛ yeards of 40-inch material with ⅞ yard of 32-inch contrasting. Price 15 cents, in stamp or coin (coin preferred.) Wrap coin carefully.

We suggest that when you send for this pattern, you enclose 10 cents additional for a copy of our Winter Fashion Magazine, showing all the most attractive Paris styles. Also embroidery and interesting ideas for Xmas gifts you can make.

SOCIETY OF FRIENDS HOLD 109TH ANNIVERSARY

(Canadian Press.)

SPARTA, Ont., Nov. 17.—The Society of Friends having completed its 109th year, and the meeting-house making also its 68th anniversary, Dr. A. G. Dorland, of the University of Western Ontario, chose as a subject for his morning address, "My Religion," and he drew attention to the important part played by Quaker settlers in the pioneer days of Yarmouth Township, especially the Sparta district.

The fame of the plains of South Yarmouth was known abroad early in the last century, and Jonathan Doan decided to leave Phialdelphia. He pitched his tent near the spot which is now the Friends' Cemetery, just west of the Village of Sparta.

The Friends had the advantage over the other early settlers in one respect and that was in regard to marriage. They could perform their marriage ceremony at home, while others had to go either to Long Point, where an English clergyman lived, or to Port Talbot, before Colonel Talbot, who had the authority to perform marriage ceremonies.

There were some fine speakers among the Friends' Society. Sarah Wright Haight came from a family of earnest and sincere friends. Her grandfather's sister, Lydia, was whipped through the streets of Boston for professing the belief of Friends. It was Sarah Haight who preached the sermon at the funeral of Jost Doan and his friend, Perly, who was executed in London, Josh Doan was described as a splendid sample of man—fearless to a fault, open hearted, manly and kind, and there was great sorrow at his death. Sarah Haight was the mother of 12 children; still she found time to carry the gospel of good tidings from house to house, and her labors were not in vain.

Serena A. Minard was brought up a Presbyterian in the city of New York and later, largely through the ministry of Freeman Clark, joined the Friends. A friend in writing to her, says: "When she first began speaking it was with much difficulty, hardly speaking above a whisper and seldom raising her eyes from the floor, but in time she overcame this shyness and was greatly beloved by her own people and those of other denominations.

She travelled quite extensievly in the ministry and went as a delegate to the world's convention of the Women's Christian Temperance Union, held in London, England. Memory recalls the sweet face radiant with the divinity within her. Her utterances were seldom lengthy nor doctrinal, but there was something so uplifting, so beautiful, so appealing, one could but listen.

The Womens Vote

(Canadian Press.)

MONTREAL, NOV. 17.—The following open letter on the question as to when the women of the province of Quebec ceased to have the right to vote is addressed to the Hon. Ernest Lapointe, Minister of Justice, by the Canadian Alliance for Women's Vote in Quebec:

Hon. Ernest Lapointe, Minister of Justice, Ottawa:

Dear Sir,—We beg you to accept out most sincere appreciation of the address which you gave before the Provincial Suffrage Committee on October 31.

Would you kindly inform us when the right to vote formerly possessed by the women of our province was taken away from them—at what session, under which Prime Minister and on what date?

Eminent jurists who have seriously studied the question have not as yet found any document to that effect, and are, therefore, of the opinion that there is nothing in our constitution to prevent women from voting as they did in 1820 and perhaps later. An important group of women of Montreal will register on the present voters' list and will claim their provincial as well as their federal rights.

Health Services of Canadian Medical Association

So many enquiries have been made concerning the disinfection of a room or house after a case of communicable disease has occurred, that the matter is chosen for the subject of this article.

The objective of disinfection is to destroy the germs which cause disease. Disease germs grow only inside the human or animal body. They leave the body of the sick in the discharges and secretions of the body. Once outside of the body, the germs die off-most of them very quickly. Drying and sunlight are nature's methods of destroying these enemies. Dark damp corners delay nature's action.

Concurrent disinfection is the terms used to mean the disinfection that is carried on during a disease. It aims, by prompt disinfection of the body discharges and secretions, to destroy the disease germs they contain before there is any chance of their coming in contact with some well person. The eating utensils are disinfected to destroy the germs in the saliva that is left on cups, spoons, etc., by the diseased person. Concurrent disinfection is most important and must be thoroughly carried out until the patient has recovered.

Terminal disinfection is the term used to mean the disinfection after recovery of the patient. If Concurrent Disinfection has been properly observed, there is no need of Terminal Disinfection, because all the secretions will have been looked after. This is the point, which needs to be clearly understood; proper care during the disease prevents its spread. To try and kill off a few germs that may have survived in a room, after the recovery of a patient, is a matter of practically no importance compared with the need for destruction of the millions of germs given off during the course of the disease.

Terminal Disinfection has been discontinued in many cities, and all attention given to Current Disinfection.

Questions concerning health, addressed to the Canadian Medical Association, 184 College Street, Toronto, will be answered by letter. Questions as to diagnosis and treatment will not be answered.

TORONTO UNIVERSITY GREATLY EXPANDING

(Canadian Press)

TORONTO, Ont., Nov 17.—For present accomodation and future expansion, the University of Toronto has been gradually acquiring adjoining property, until now it controls the bulk of the land between Spadina and Bay, and Bloor and College. Within 25 years, at the present rate of increase, all the land within these confines will be owned by the University. Eventually it will all be built up with special buildings. Some plan for immediate developement are being made now, but none of the authorities around Varsity care to reveal them.

At present the new pathological building is taking the place of old doctors offices on College street, while the extensive additions to the Toronto General Hospital are to some extent a joint project with the University. The next needs which must be filled, the authorities say, are a new botany building, a woman's building and practical science laboratories, incorporating extensive innovations.

Apart from this material side, the University is reaching out to educate all and sundry throughout the province, whether or not they are able to attend Varsity. In 1920 there were 200 in extension courses. Last year there were 3,161, and within another four years more the department expects to have a registration exceeding the number of students at the University.

In yet another direction Toronto is starting rapid growth. That is in the field of research, which is now considered as importan as teaching. The discovery of insulin in 1922 gave a wonderful stimulus to this work. In that year the President's report mentioned 300 research problems under process of investigation. The next report will contain 800.

UNCLE RAY'S CORNER

"PLAY A CLEAN GAME, BOYS!"

This fall I have watched some of the big teams in action on the gridiron. In Yale Bowl, I saw the Bulldogs chew up the Bears. In other words, Yale beat Brown 32 to 14.

The star of the Yale team is surely Johnny Garvey, the half-back It seems that nobody can stop that man. Five or six players make special efforts to reach him, but he goes past them like water through a sieve.

Another football game which I have watched with interest this year, was between two village high school teams. There was a crowd of about 200 on the sidelines. That was nothing like the throng in the Yale Bowl; but the village people were noisy and full of "pep."

The game was close and hard-fought. During the first half, neither side made a single point. At one time in the game there was a bad moment or two. The star of the home team was tackled and someone kicked him. Most likely the kick was an accident but the player did not think of that. He struck at one of the members of the rival team.

The quarrel was patched up and the game went on. Just then I happened to be near a group of high school girls who were cheering the home team. They had watched incident and now they set up a kind of cheer.

Perhaps we should not call it a "cheer" at all, but rather a "chours of advice."

Did the girls shout "Sock 'em! Kill 'em! Chew 'em up?" No, indeed! Their chorus was:

"Play a clean game, boys, Play a clean game!"

It seems to me that the advice was just the thing for the moment, and I was happy to see that the girls took the side of clean sport.

Football is a rough-and-tumble game, too rough for girls to play. Yet girls can raise their voices in favor of the square deal and the cool head on the gridiron.
