PLUMBING AND HEATING

Now is the time to have your house heated and plumbed, for in the fall it will be too late, as everybody will be in a rush then and it will cost you a great deal more. So if you are contemplating having any of the above work done, we are prepared to give satisfaction in all its branches at a very low figure. Remember we do all our own work, and can afford to do it cheaper than any others in the business. We thoroughly understand every detail of our business. Jobbing done at short notice. Lawnmowers and other machinery repaired. We also handle the National Dish Washer. Washes, rinses and dries the dishes perfectly of either large or small family in from one to five minutes. No labour, no mess, no slop, no wetting of hands or spoiling of clothes; no broken or chipped dishes, no wiping necessary. Will produce a finer polish than can be done by hand. It is well and durably made of sheet steel, galvanized making it strong and substantial. Best of references.

SKATES MADE OF GLASS.

They Are Said to Have Many Advantages Over Those Made of Steel.

"I believe the death-knell of wooden and metal skates has been rung," said one of the largest skate manufacturers to an English reporter. "Several practical inventors have been experimenting on these articles for years past, and the latest result is a skate made of glass, hardened by a recently discovered process to the consistency of steel. The entire skate is of this substance, the upper part resembling a slipper, open behind with a split leather 'lace-up' heel-cap.

"Among several advantages stated are, that they are much faster than steel blades and so extremely slippery that they will run almost equally well over rough, snow covered ice as upon smooth, and also glide easily over inequalities, broken twigs and other obstructions. They are made very sharp, and, owing to their extreme hardness, it is impossible to blunt them; and, unlike steel skates, they never want grinding and cannot rust.

"The crystal skates are really beautiful in appearance, being nearly transparent; the substance has, also, while in the liquid state, been variously colored. They have already been privately tested. A famous skating champion recently tried a pair at the Niagara Ice Rink, using mahogany-colored ones, to avoid attracting notice, the time being hardly ripe for exhibition. A private trial has also been made in Paris at an ice rink exclusively hired for the occasion, several ladies—among them a celebrated lady continental skater—taking part; their skates were colored blue, crimson, brown, etc., to match their costumes."—Baltimore American.

ADDRESS AND PRESENTATION

On Thursday, the 2nd inst., a farewell service was held in the York Church on the eve of the departure of their pastor, Rev. Silas James, when he was presented by the members of the choir with a gold-headed cane and the following address:

DEAR PASTOR,—As your are about to sever your connection with this circuit, we, the members of York choir, cannot allow you to leave us without giving some expression of our regard for you. During your four years of labor among us we have recognized in you an advocate and supporter of everything that had for its object the welfare of the community.

Your gentlemanly manner and Christian spirit has won for you the highest regard and esteem of of all with whom you have come in contact. During you pastorate you have been instrumental in placing in this church an organ, thereby placing the musical part of the service on a much better footing, perhaps, than ever before. In your labor you have been ably and faithfully seconded by Mrs. James, to whom we extend the same feelings of regret at having to lose from our midst one who was ever ready and willing to lend a helping hand in time of need, and who in the social circle has deservedly won the affection and esteem of the whole congregation. We would ask you to accept this gift as a small token of the deep appreciation we feel for your labor in our behalf, and rest assured that in after days it will be with pleasant recollections that we shall revert to the memories of your sojourn amongst us.

Signed in behalf of choir,
ABRAM BROWN,
GEO. CROCKETT.

In reply Mr. James said:

MY DEAR FRIENDS,—You have this evening taken me somewhat by surprise in presenting me with this address and also with a tangible expression of your kindness. I can assure you I have only done my duty in making any effort towards the placing of an organ in this church. Further there are two sides to this movement; for I am persuaded that no pastor could have done it alone. But being surrounded by willing hands the task has been an easy one.

I need not inform you of my appreciation of the part you have taken in divine worship; nothing can take the place of good singing. Since the formation of the choir your ready help and cheerful acquiescence in seeking to further the highest interests of the church have ever cheered me. I trust you may still strive to be united in your assistance to your new pastor, always keeping in view the worship of Almighty God. If, during my ministry, some have been led to Christ and others strengthened, I rejoice that God has made me the honored instrument. I can assure you that Mrs. James unites with me in thanks for kindly expressions in reference to her. She has always felt a deep interest in the cause of Christ on all our circuits, and has been a true helpmate. Much, if any, success which has attended my ministry has been due to her timely and prayerful counsel. We would again assure you of our interest in your welfare, and trust that great spiritual prosperity may attend you. If you do not always see eye to eye in some minor matters, we feel confident that your higher aims to assist the worship of God will always guide you to do whatever you are assured will be for His glory.

Trusting that we may all be permitted to sing the "Song of Moses and the Lamb," I again thank you for your expression of kindness.

HOW TO CRACK A PECAN NUT.

Soak Them in Water First—Professionals in the Business.

Did the gentle reader ever attempt to crack a pecan nut?

It is safe to say that the gentle reader has made the attempt. It is just as safe to add that the attempt was a failure. The implements used may have been a regulation nut-cracker, or a hammer, or a boot heel, or a piece of bric-a-brac, or the combination of floor and chair rocker so much favored by bachelors who have never had the chance to learn the sacredness of carpets and floor polish. But whatever were the tools used the result was the same, one and inevitable. The operator, instead of enjoying the whole sweet kernel, as he had fondly expected, gathered up mangled fragments from the floor and his knees and other surrounding objects capable of furnishing a resting place and tried to imagine that he was really enjoying these tiny and unsatisfactory bits in spite of the fact that they lost themselves in his teeth and came to naught.

Then perhaps he went forth onto the street and passed fruit stands innumerable, on each of which he saw the pecan nut kernels in glasses heaped high and overflowing, each and every piece a full half of the nut's contents. Never a broken piece, never a fragment. If his heart was not filled with envy and with the desire of enquiry he was more than human.

They call science to their aid.

There are in Chicago a considerable number of men and women, mostly Italians, who make a fair living by cracking pecan nuts. It is a recognized trade. They take orders regularly from the fruit stands and stores and supply them with cracked nuts. So far as possible they keep their methods in shadow—in shadow as dark as the inside of a cow. They crack them with hammers, but they get no such disheartening result as the amateur who essays the first attempt. They have no little pieces to pick up, but every kernel comes out in neat, unbroken halves. That is because they know the pecan nut from Alpha and Omega. Tradition and the instruction of their elders have taught the certain things in nature which escape the average man, and they take advantage of the knowledge.

They soak the nuts over night in soft water.

The result is surprising—it must surprise even the nut itself. From a crabbed, uncertain thin thing, likely to fly off the handle at no provocation whatever and go all to pieces over a rebuff scarcely worth mentioning, it is changed into a perfect model of generosity, willing to give up all it has in the world for the pleasure of the first cover. Try it. Let the man who would serve nuts on his table, or regale his friends with them before an open fire, go and do as those who have studied the matter are accustomed to do. Let him gather up the rain that falls from heaven to crack nuts with, not attempt to soften them with profanity, as is usually done. It it better for his friends, his carpets, his fingers, and his eternal record. Besides, it is the right way.

WOMEN'S DRESS IN ICELAND.

The Kiss is the Universal Form of Salutation in That Country.

The common working dress of the Icelandic women, without distinction as to social equality or wealth, consists of an undergarment of wadmel, in one piece, extending from the shoulder to the heel, fastened at the neck with a button or clasp, with petticoat of white or blue wadmel, and a blue cap, the top of which hangs down on one side and terminates in a tassel. On Sundays and festivals occasions their dress is singular. Then they wear, in addition, a bodice and two or three blue petticoats, called "fat" and in front an apron, bordered with a material resembling black velvet, which is a domestic manufacture. The petticoats are fastened immediately beneath the bodice by a girdle of this black velvet, embroidered and studded with such silver or gilt ornaments as they may possess.

The bodice is also ornamented and fastened in front with large clasps, generally gilt, and rendered more conspicuous by being fixed upon a broad border of black velvet, bound with red. Over the bodice is a jacket, called "treja," fitting close to the shape, and made of black wadmel or velvet. The stockings are of dark blue or red worsted, and the shoes which are of seal, shark or sheep skin, are made tight to the foot and fastened about the ankles and insteps with leather laces. On their fingers the women generally have many rings of gold, silver or brass, according to their means; and be it known, no present is so acceptable to an Icelandic girl as a ring. The most singular and at the same time the most beautiful part of the female costume is the head-dress, called "faldur," which is made of white linen, stiffly starched, kept in shape with an immense number of pins, and from 15 to 20 inches in height. This is the holiday and Sunday head covering.

When you visit a family in Iceland you must kiss each member according to their age or rank, beginning with the highest and descending to the lowest, not even excepting the servants. On taking leave the order is reversed: you must kiss the servants, then the children, and lastly the master and mistress. Both at meeting and parting and affectionate kiss on the mouth, without distinction of rank, age or sex, is the only mode of salutation known in Iceland.—New York Times.

A New Wrinkle in Photography.

It has often happened that the only picture remaining of a friend who has passed away is the result of a random "snap shot" out of doors, which was anything but satisfactory. Such a photograph can now be developed into a fine picture by a new process. The usual method when the negative proved available has been to print a glass positive by superposition, or in contact with the negative, and from the resultant positive, which, of course, is the size of the original negative, make an enlarged negative through a camera. Although this method was generally recognized even in the large London carbon establishments, it had the radical fault of enlarging and reproducing the grain, the retouching, and all the striae of the glass. This operation is now reversed by first making a full time positive, the exact size desired for the enlarged negative. The amendments, improvements and changes that can be made at this stage are remarkable. Upon the perfection of this positive, and the work thereon, depends success in the final result. Let the positive be very carefully retouched and improved, as suggested. Then place it in a printing frame, of course, with the glass side out, and in perfect contact with a dry plate. Back the plate with black cloth of felt, to prevent halation, and expose it at the distance of say, 4 feet, from a 6-foot burner two or three seconds, depending on the vigor and strength of the positive. It is a good plan to expose and develop a small (4x5) plate as a test of the proper time. If all this is carefully done, the resulting negative will compare favorably with a negative made from life.—Denver Republican.

Sipping Liquids at Meals.

The matter of drinking is important in indigestion. Do not get into the habit of constantly sipping liquids during the course of a meal. Drink as little as possible until the meal is concluded, or, better still, drink nothing at all until half an hour or so later, and then only pure, hot water.

Never eat between meals, and let those be as regular as possible. One fruitful source of indigestion may be found in the fact that people who are subject to it often sit down to a meal immediately after coming in from a long walk or other fatiguing exercise. Rest a little while before beginning to eat, if you are very tired. And, if you are subject to indigestion, rest again for a short while when the meal is over.

Burnt Almond Caramels.

Blanch almonds, then shred them and place them in the oven to take a dark brown color. Have the irons arranged on the marble; spread the burnt almonds evenly on the marble; pour on them a boiling made same as for vanilla caramels. Arrange the bars to give a sheet a little under half an inch in thickness. When cold enough mark and cut up the same as for ordinary caramels. If you prefer to put the almonds in the boiling, do so just before removing it from the fire.—Good Housekeeping.

Ruling Passion.

The reporter lay on his eiderdown couch, slowly breathing his life away. It was evident that the end was very near.

Suddenly the luxuriously furnished room was filled with a phosphorescent light, and a pale shade appeared, standing at the bedside, grim and inscrutable.

"I am the messenger of death!" he said.

"One moment, please!" gasped the reporter, reaching feebly for his notebook and pencil. "How do you like America?"

GREAT SALES prove the great merit of Hood's Sarsaparilla. Hood's Sarsaparilla sells because it accomplishes GREAT CURES.

Things are getting warm in Constantinople. Two Pachas have been dismissed, and will lose their salaries, if they ever get any. The Societe de Navigation has refused to transport Turkish troops unless the money is paid down first. Otherwise, like some English workmen who repaired the Sultan's palace a week ago, they might be left in the lurch. The Sublime Porte appears to be completely bankrupt, both in fortune and reputation.

Mothers

Anxiously watch declining health of their daughters. So many are cut off by consumption in early years that there is real cause for anxiety. In the early stages, when not beyond the reach of medicine, Hood's Sarsaparilla will restore the quality and quantity of the blood and thus give good health. Read the following letter:

"It is but just to write about my daughter Cora, aged 19. She was completely run down, declining, had that tired feeling, and friends said she would not live over three months. She had a bad and nothing seemed to do her any good. I happened to read about Hood's Sarsaparilla and had her give it a trial. From the very first dose she began to get better. After taking a few bottles she was completely cured and her health has been the best ever since." MRS. ADDIE PECK, 12 Railroad Place, Amsterdam, N. Y.

"I will say that my mother has not stated my case in as strong words as I would have done. Hood's Sarsaparilla has truly cured me and I am now well." CORA PECK, Amsterdam, N. Y.
