Briefs From Britain

DONCASTER, England — (CP) —Nearly 2,000 boys helped harvest a record potato crop in the Doncaster area this year.

LONDON —(CP)— Basic English is "dwarfed, club-footed and boneless", said Miss Rose Macauley British novelist and author.

EDINBURGH, — (CP) — Fifty three doctors have graduated from the Polish medical school here since its establishment in 1941.

STROUD, England —(CP)— Sir Guy Granet, 75, former chairman of the London, Midland and Scottish railway, died at his Gloucestershire home near here.

HOYLAND, England —(CP) — "Pray to God and keep hammering" was the advice Lord Winster gave Yorkshire miners whom he met at a "Coal Sunday" meeting here.

LONDON —(CP)— The "Squander Bug" which the National Savings advertises to good effect, has been flown, in model form, to the United States where it will be used in savings campaigns.

MAIDENCOMBE, England —(CP)— Percy Salvage, 64, former superintendent of Scotland Yard and one of Britain's most famous detectives, died in this Devonshire village. He was known as "Savage of the Yard."

CANTERBURY, England —(CP) —Dr. Hewlett Johnson, Dean of Canterbury does the "wash-up" on his maid's day off, he told a meeting. She is the only servant left in the six in the household before the war.

LONDON —(CP)— Sir John Anderson's first speech as Chancellor of the Exchequer was in French and it was his first public address in that language. He spoke at the opening of a French exhibition.

PEWSEY, England —(CP)— The district council of this Wiltshire area has limited residents to not more than one dog and one cat because several dogs, cats and rabbits have strayed through neighboring houses looking for food.

CASTLETOWN, Isle of Man — (CP)— Because it was considered a danger to shipping, a 35-foot whale found dead off the Isle of Man was blown to bits by gunfire from a naval vessel.

Portsmouth, England —(CP)— Guy Forester Bell stipulated in his will that enough money should be set aside after his death to buy a round of "double-whiskies" for all patrons of his local pub in Portsmouth.

SALISBURY —(CP)— Britain's oldest clergyman is believed to be Rev. Arthur Sewell of Salisbury, who at 102 still follows the war news, goes for two short walks every day and occasionally goes shopping.

DRESSMAKER SUIT ALL DAY

NEW YORK —Many will be depending on the dressmaker suit to see them through the day and a gala evening as well. This is made possible by unpretentious jackets with high closings which give no hint of the possibilities for lavish loveliness of the blouse beneath. Remove the jacket and flash! Enough glamor for anybody.

One of the expert exponents of this type fo suit is Fox Brownie, though often as not hers are quite as gay with the jacket on as with it off. This, because of her fondness for strong, bright colors, particularly in wool fabrics. Drawing on many pure Chinese colors throughout her collection is stimulating, to say the least.

A Chinese red dressmaker suit, made with a shrunken waistline, contrasts with a startling lining of turquoise. With this is worn a turquoise blue blouse decorated with a Chinese motif which repeats the red of the suit and is fastened with delicate silver buttons. Two colored linings, pockets in skirts beneath Russian blouse jackets, plastrons of fur used against vivid wool in snugly fitted dressmaker suit jacket are some of the Fox Brownie ideas expressed in this type of costume.

She also handles delicate Chinese porcelain shades, such as Kaolin, or cayl tan, and Chin Teh Chen blue, and makes effective use too, of stronger Russian colors — Baku brown, Mazurka green, or Droshka brown. Her detachable baboushkas, made of mink Persian lamb of fox, are a touch of practical flattery. Evolved from the scarves of Russian peasants they not only keep you warm but are also exceedingly attractive, whether worn over the head or as a scarf lightly decorative over the shoulders.

CLASSIC OXFORD AMERICAN FAVORITE

NEW YORK—Most notable shoe in American today is the stout classic oxford, inspired by the officials footwear of the military services. Supple, study these unlined calfskin shoes, streamlined for hard wear, become handsomer with use and polish. Women wear too, with ease the unlined calfskin ghillie — a natural with tweeds; and like as well the one-strap buckle pump with a built-up leather heel. Made with a wall last, the latter give great comfort and excellent service, which is the great thing in shoes today. For use with tailored clothes, there is a strong leaning towards attractive baby lizards which are to be had in the important fall colors —red, blue, wine and green.

At the other extremes definitely dressy shoes cut on slender feminine lines are in demand. These are important factors in the success of the short dinner dress, which continues to increase in popularity. These doubleduty shoes go from afternoon through the evening with complete assurance. In this group are found suedes in sandals or pumps, accented with fine dressmaker detail in faille or satin Delman's fall shoes collection highlights suedes of the flattering D'Orsay line with finely cut jet in various geometrical shapes and sizes combined with faille or satin pleatings or ruchings. In satin or suede, this designer uses the D'Orsay mode in his American Beauty rose pump, which has a matching or contrasting rose where ordinarily you would expect a buckle.
