DRUGSTORE OPEN.— Messrs. Johnson & Johnson will be the only drugstore open this afternoon and evening. 1707

PATROL BOAT SAILS.—The patrol boat which had been in Charlottetown for several days, after making a complete circuit of the Island, sailed on Monday morning.

IN CASUALTY LIST.— A recent casualty list contains the names of the following Islanders: Killed in action, T. B. Arsenault, Abrams Village; J. J. Currie, Cumberland.

PROPERTY SALE.—The residence of the late Mr. Martin West of School Street, offered for sale by public auction on Monday, was sold to Mr. C.W. P. Seale, of Grant & Kennedy for the sum of $1005.

STRAWBERRY FESTIVAL in aid of the Red Cross will be held 6 to 9 p. m. this evening on the grounds of Mr. Gordon McKay, East Royalty 1½ miles from town. Cars will be run from corner of Prince and Kent streets, reasonable rates. 1730.

MOTOR VEHICLES.— The first big motor truck to reach Charlottetown arrived by the Aranmore yesterday. It is for Messrs Carvell Bros. to be used in their extensive wholesale business. A splendid new motor delivery waggon for the firm of Moore & McLeod also arrived yesterday and will prove a great adjunct to their delivery business. Both vehicles were given trial yesterday and proved very satisfactory.

FOR THE ORPHANAGE.—On the evening of the 12th inst., the ladies of Hunter River and the members of Hackett I.O.L., No. 1484 held a very successful ice cream festival for the benefit of the Protestant Orphanage. The sum of $60.00 was realized and paid over to the Treasurer, Rev. D. MacLean. Great credit is due to the ladies of the community for the success of their efforts in the interest of the orphans.

350 ACRE FARM FOR SALE.— In Central Kings County, 85 acres under cultivation, 100 acres in good pasture and the rest under a heavy growth of hard and soft woods. There is a large barn, good dwelling house, large spring near center of farm, good fences, has a southern slope without hills. This is a splendid chance as the owner is going west. For further information price etc., write to C. A. M. c/o The Guardian. 1733-7-18ME11.

WEDDING BELLS.— In St. Paul's Church on Monday, June 18th, a beautiful wedding was solemnized by the Rev. John J. Ryan, P. P., the contracting parties being James H. Barnes, son of Mr and Mrs. Wm. J. Barnes, of Petersham, Mass., and Miss Veronica McCarthy, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. John McCarthy, of St. Teresas. The groom was attended by his brother, Wm. B. Barnes, while the bridesmaid was Miss Jennie Gillis, of Boston. Two little cousins of the bride, pupils of St. Patrick's Parochial School were flower girls. The ushers were Harold McTigue and Walter Cronin. Prof. George G. McConnell presided at the organ. Solos were rendered by Mrs. Park Wile and Mrs. Margaret Tooley. Mr. and Mrs. Barnes will reside at 29 Putman Ave, Cambridge, Mass.

ENJOYABLE FUNCTION.— A most successful and enjoyable ice cream social was held on the beautiful grounds of the Knights of Columbus last evening under the auspices of the ladies of the parish. The grounds were splendidly illuminated with rows of electric lights and the crowd was catered to by a bevy of winsome young ladies. A most pleasing feature of the event was the excellent music furnished by the band of the League of the Cross Society. This band, which became disorganized on account of practically all the members going overseas, made its first public appearance last evening, and its wonderful progress made by the players was the subject of much favorable comment from the large number of people assembled. The ladies, who had the affair in charge, are to be congratulated upon the success of their efforts.

NEW POTATO BUG APPEARS.

SYDNEY.— Potato planters in Cape Breton, and in other parts of Nova Scotia, The Post is informed, are gravely concerned over the havoc that is being wrought by a worm or bug which is destroying the young roots.

Yesterday afternoon A. A. McDonald, who has a garden under cultivation at his home, showed a Post representative a potato stalk that had that day been cut down in his garden. He slit up the stalks and about eight inches above the vase was found a worm or bug, somewhat smaller than a caterpillar, having a red head. The little insect had bored up through the stem and in his march had eaten up every particle of juice in the stalk. Mr. McDonald, some days ago noticed the leaves of his potato plants withering, and today he inquired of a gentleman visiting here from Halifax if the latter knew what was the trouble.

After one glance at the drooping, faded leaves and stalks the visitor told where the trouble lay, and said that many gardens in Halifax and vicinity were suffering from a like blight.

Mr. McDonald says the potato bug is a difficult proposition to cope with, but as it works on the outside of the plant it can be overcome with patience and diligence. This bug or worm, however, works in the interior and is safe from molestation, at least from the amateur gardener. If any reader knows of any means of combating this peril to the potato, he will confer a favor on Mr. McDonald and the country in general by publishing such knowledge.

Wrong Query

A near-sighted man was passing along a country road when his hat was whisked off by the wind and carried over a stone wall. He gave pursuit but each time he thought he had it, it got yet another move on. Then a woman's angry voice rang out:

"What are you doing there?" she demanded shrilly.

He explained mildly that he was only trying to retrieve his hat, whereupon the woman said: "Your hat? That is it over there under the wall—that's our little black hen you've been chasing."

LIFE STORY OF JOHN PHILIP SOUSA.

John Philip Sousa, conductor, composer and author, was born in Washington, D.C. on November 6th, 1854 his parents being Antonio and Elizabeth Sousa. His father was a Spanish exile, of Portuguese parentage, who came to America in the early forties, and located in Washington, D.C where he died. His mother was of Bavarian descent. She died at her home in Washington on August 23rd at the age of eighty-three years.

In early life Sousa took up the study of music, and at the age of eleven appeared in public as a violin soloist, and at the age of fifteen was teaching harmony. In 1876 he was one of the first violinists in the orchestra conducted by Offenbach, when the latter visited America. Later, he conducted for various theatrical and operatic companies, among them the "Church Choir Pinafore" company.

In 1880 he was appointed conductor of the band of the U. S. Marine Corps, the National Band, and served at the head of that organization under Presidents Hayes, Garfield, Arthur, Cleveland, and B. Harrison. During that time the Marine Band became famous as a musical organization, and made a successful transcontinental tour.

He resigned from the Marine Corps on August 1st, 1892, to organize the Sousa Band, which up to the present time has made seventeen semi-annual tours, including ten transcontinental and five European tours, involving considerably over 700,000 miles of travel by land and by sea, giving more than 10,000 concerts, in every city and town of importance in the United States and Canada, as well as in England, France, Australia, New Zealand, Russia, Germany, Austria, Bohemia, Belgium, Ireland, Scotland, Poland, Denmark, South Africa, China and Japan.

In 1910 he inaugurated the most gigantic undertaking ever attempted by a large instrumental body, a concert tourney around the world. The circling of the globe began at the Metropolitan Opera House, New York City on November 6, 1910, and after visiting Europe, Canary Islands, Africa, Tasmania, Australia, New Zealand, the Fiji Islands, the Hawaiian Islands, British Columbia, and the principal cities of this country from the Pacific to the Atlantic coast, the tour ended at New York Hippodrome on December 10, 1911.

As a composer, Mr. Sousa originated a style in march writing that is recognized the world over in consequence of which he has often been called the "march king." His best known and most popular productions in the march field includes "The Washington Post," "Liberty Bell," "Manhattan Beach," "The Invisible Eagle," "High School Cadets," "The Stars and Stripes for Ever," Hail to the Spirit of Liberty," "The New York Hippodome," etc.

He compiled, under the auspices of the goverment, a collection called "National Patriotic and Typical Airs of all Countries," and has written many magazine articles, miscellaneous verses, etc., besides two novels, "The Fifth String," and "Through the Years with Sousa." He has appeared with his band before King Edward at Sandringham and at Windsor, the King on the first occasion bestowing on him the Victorian Order. He received the Grand Diploma of Honor of the Academy of Hainault, Belgium and was decorated by the French Government with the Palme of the Academy, besides being made an officer of public instruction.

In the cource of his activity as bandmaster, the signal honors which have been bestowed upon Mr. Sousa in the form of diplomas, certificates, decorations and medals, coming not only from his own country, but from the nations, abroad, and in several instances officially from the Governments themselves, as might be expected, means much to him. Since through these tokens, approval and appreciation have been given tangible guise. But inestimably of more value to Mr. Sousa than these visible expressions has been that cordial regard extended to him at all times by the music-loving people of both continents, a regard that time has developed into affection both sincere and ardent.

No expression of note has seemed complete without Sousa and his band, for they have taken part in the World's Fair in 1893 in Chicago, the Cotton States Exposition of 1896, the Paris Exposition of 1900, the Pan-American Exposition, of 1901, the Scotch Exposition in 1901, in Glasgow, the St. Louis World's Fair in 1904, besides a number of expositions of more or less magnitude in various parts of the world, and the last Panama-Pacific International Exposition of 1913 at San Francisco.

His name has become a household word in every land, and his music is more universally accepted this day than ever before, and the enthusiasm for his work is still growing.

A HERO OF FLANDERS.

To a loyal home in England,
Where a dauntless mother prayed
Came the ever cheery letter
That had been so long delayed.
He would soon be home on furlough—
They had made important gains,
But he'd gladly change grim Flanders
For the bloom of Surrey's lanes.

Briefly followed explanation,
That by shrapnel he was struck;
Merely barked his crown a trifle—
"Just a bit of rotton luck."
Words of highest admiration
He expressed for "Comrade Jim",
Who, amidst the hottest shelling
Had so bravely rescued him.

Now the wound was quickly healing,
And he'd soon be feeling fit—
Have a plum duff waiting for him,
He could eat the whole of it.
But the boat that entered Dover
On that looked for day of joy.
Only brought another letter
From the mother's soldier boy.

Bravely she persued its pages
Trembling lips and eyes grown dim—
He had given up his furlough
And was substitute for Jim,
Who had just heard from his mother
Of their only little lad,
That the child was ill with fever
And was yearning for his dad.

"Jim protested— I insisted—
"You are willing that I did?
"Jim's a ripping, manly fellow,
"And just dotty on the kid."
Meanwhile there would be sufficient
To employ both hands and wits.
In a lively preparation
For a jolly go at Fritz.

To her lips she pressed the letter,
Breathing thoughts no tongue could speak;
While a deep, divine emotion
Dried the teardrops on her cheek.
Close upon that precious missive,
Sacred to the thought of him—
Came the message, "Killed in action"
As a substitute for Jim.

—McFADEN.

"How is So and So?" I inquired of a senior officer of a territorial regiment, mentioning a friend of mine who, at the age of 47, took his commission just before the war, and has been out from the first. "He is very well, and (no longer a young 'un) has 'made good' as a soldier with the best. Coolest man under fire I ever saw. Never winces or ducks, whether it's shell, shrapnel, or whizz bangs; and when the biggest thing of all, a 'Minnie,' comes over, and nearly gets him, it might be a football, for the 'wind up' he shows. But he swore himself faint because a man who shares his dug out snored."—Correspondent English Paper.
