Killed In Action

The following letters which have been received by Mrs. Sarah J. Burke speak for themselves:

France, 20-11-17

Dear Mrs. Burke:—It is with feelings of great sorrow and deep sympathy that I write to tell you of the death of your son No. 2099831 Pte. H. J. Burke. Possibly before this reaches you, you will have the official notification that he was killed in action on the 8-11-17. It was practically his first serious action although he had been with the Battalion for two months and had done very good work in the front line. He was in the same trench with me and was only about ten yards away when a shell hit the trench and your son was instantly killed.

His personal effects have been handed in to Battalion Headquarters and will be forwarded to you in due course.

You will also be notified of the location of his grave.

If I can give you any further particulars Mrs. Burke please let me know.

Yours very sincerely,
G. W. ANDERSON, Capt.
O.C. "D" Coy. 25th Can. Batt.

25th Can. Batt., B.E.F.,
France, Nov. 27, 1917.

My Dear Mrs. Burke:—

Feeling sure you would desire it I am writing to give you what information I can regarding the death of your son 2099831 Pte. H. J. Burke, who was killed in action on Nov. 8th, 1917, near Passchendale Ridge, Map Ref. D6 d 60.30—and his grave was marked and will be cared for so far as is possible.

Death came to your boy while he was doing his duty for a great cause. I pray that God may strengthen and comfort you and sanctify to you your great sacrifice and his.

Yours in deep sympathy,
E. E. PUGSLEY (Capt.)
Chaplain 25th Can. Batt

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

JESUS BEGINS HIS WORK

January 13, 1918

Mark 1:12-20

"The time is fulfilled and the Kingdom of God is at hand; Repent ye, and believe the Gospel.—Mark 1:15. —Golden Text.

On the first day of the coming of the deputation of priests and scribes to John the Baptist he proclaimed Jesus the Messiah. On the second day he pointed him out as the Lamb of God. Then Jesus, after his baptism, was led up into the wilderness, to be tempted. At the end of the forty days and nights spent there he came to Galilee, the northern province of Palestine, and there began his work of preaching the Gospel of the Kingdom of God. He began his ministry by proclaiming that the time of waiting and expectancy for the Messiah was over and the Kingdom for which the Jews had been waiting was at hand. Not a Kingdom of pomp and power exceeding all others in its glory and strength, such as the Jews were longing for, but the reign of Christ in men's hearts.

The early home of Simon Peter, Andrew and their brother Philip was at Bethsaida, on the northwestern coast of the Sea of Galilee.

Andrew is known at Peter's brother from the beginning of the Gospel record. We read very little about him, and much about Peter, who was the most active of all the disciples, and their spokesmen.

"Come ye after Me." The keynote of Christ's ministry and teaching is contained in these words—the invitation to follow, to learn, to imitate and sacrifice. This invitation came often in Peter's life, as it comes to us all.

COME YE AFTER ME

Follow me. This is the word Jesus repeats again and again, under different circumstances, with added explanations to the same men, until you feel that he meant it to stand out as the great invitation to his disciples. It seems to mean different things at different times; that is to say, it grew in its significance.

About a year after that "Follow Me" had a new meaning to Peter and some others (Mt. 4:11-22, with Lk. 5:1-11.) Then the great draught of fishes after the fishless night made Peter feel the Master' power. The sense of Jesus' power and with it a sense of purity—interesting how the power made him feel the purity—this brought him to his knees at our Lord's feet with the confession of his own sinfulness. Peter was greatly moved that morning, greatly shaken. A new experience of tremendous power had come to him. And out of it came a new life, a radical change, as he left the old occupation, fishing boats, father, means of livelihood, and entered upon the new life. "Follow Me" meant a radical change of life, constant companionship with Jesus, sharing his life, going to school, getting ready for leadership and service; yes, and for suffering too.

It was some months after this that another meaning grew into the words "Follow Me," and grew out of them. The words are not spoken this time, but acted. Out of the group of disciples that he had gathered about him our Lord prayerfully chose out Peter and the others to be sent out as his messengers to others (Mt. 10:1-5, Mk. 3:14-19; Lk. 6:12-17.) Part of the schooling was to begin.

He called them apostles, sent-ones, missionaries. "Follow Me" now meant going to others. It meant more—power, power to do for the men all the Master himself had done. First, power felt that early morning by the lake, now power given. That was a great advance in training. Power had to be felt before it could be received. And it has to be felt before it can be used.

But there was a special session of the "Follow Me" school one day, a very serious session (Mt. 16:13-28). The very setting of the words gives the new meaning to them. John the Herald had felt the keen edge of Herod's axe-blade, and was now in the Upper Presence. Jesus was in the far northern part because of the growing danger threatening him by the leaders.

It is the turning point, where our Lord Jesus begins to tell them that he was to suffer. Their ears could not take in the words. Suffer? Their dazed eyes show that they think they could not have heard aright—he to suffer? What could this mean? Then to Peter's foolish, foolhardy daring, came words spken with a new intense quietness that made the words quiver: If any man would come after me let him deny himself and take up his cross, and follow me."

"Follow Me" means sacrifice. It means a going down as well as a going up. And it proves to mean that that one can go up in power and service only as far as he has gone down in the obedience that include sacrifice.

That betrayal night a few short months after, when the actual cross was almost in actual sight, he "followed him afar off" (Mt. 26-58). Without knowing it, that was as far as he had ever really followed thus far. He wanted to keep as "far off" from that cross as possible. He always had. He balked at its first mention; balked tremendously. Yet he "followed." Poor Peter! He was in a terrible strait betwixt two—this wondrous Master whom he really loved and this threatening cross of nails and things and thorns, it was a stiff struggle between heart and flesh and between the longing of his heart and the shrinking from pain and hardship and shame.

Six months or so after, there came another "Follow Me" to Peter. No, it wasn't another; it was the same one, this one he hadn't accepted. Peter was to have another opportunity at the same place where he fell so badly How patient our Lord Jesus was—and is!

It was one morning just after breakfast—a rare breakfast—on the edge of the lake, after as poor a night's fishing as that other time (Jn. 21:15-19). Again the touch of power revealed the Master's presence. Again Peter has a special word with the Master while the others are hauling in the fish. Now breakfast is over, and the seven are grouped about the One, listening. The Lord's quiet, skilled hand touches the heart-meaning of "Follow Me." Its real meaning is a love meaning. Do you love? Then "Follow Me." "Lovest thou me?" Then you must follow; your love draws you after, even though the path be rough and broken.

Here is the meaning of "Follow Me" as it worked out in Peter's experience—acquaintance, a new life, schooling, service, a sight of sacrifice, and a balking, then—a sight of Jesus on the cross! and then a willingness to go on, even though it meant the sorest sacrifice.

In the thick of our present life, in the noise and din of the street of modern life, comes as of old the quiet clear, insistent call, "Follow Me."—Condensed from "Quiet Talks on Follow Me," by S. D. Gordon.

All seekers may become finders in the spiritual realm: "Come and see," said Jesus. Seeking leads first to investigation, communion. Communion with Jesus leads to comprehension, belief, acceptance of him as the Saviour, following him and serving him as Lord and Master.

All finders ma become seekers of others. They who have found the Christ should feel constrained to make him known to their friends. To call attention to Jesus is a very simple thing to do, some one has said, and is also the most genuine tribute and the most effective service one can offer him. To defend him is not so necessary as to declare him; to explain his is not so important as to reveal him.

Have you sought and found Christ? Are you doing and recruiting for him? Are you doing it by your words. Are you doing it by your lives?

To the Electors of the City of Charlottetown

Ladies and Gentlemen:

At the request of a large number of my fellow citizens I have consented to place myself in nomination for the Mayoralty at the coming civic election.

I have always taken a deep interest in the welfare of this my native city, having watched its growth and development from a comparatively small sized town to its present prosperous and leading position as the Capital of this Province.

At this period, as never before in our history a wise administration of our civic affairs is absolutely necessary and if you should do me the honor of electing me I will conscientiously endeavor to meet any problem that may arise in these unsettled days.

I will also give my best thought and attention to the financial condition of the city so that, as far as possible the outlay shall not exceed the income in each year and a careful and judicious expenditure of the public moneys shall at all times be made. If you see fit to elect me it will be my highest aim at all times to promote the best interests of Charlottetown in the matter of good civic Government and of all needed city reforms.

It will not be possible for me to make a personal canvass of the electors and I take this opportunity of soliciting your support at the forthcoming election.

I have hte honor to be,
Your obedienut servant.
HENRY SMITH.

THE CASE OF P.E. ISLAND

The Sydney Daily Post says:—There is a small-sized agitation in Prince Edward Island to have Premier Arsenault of that province given a place in the Union Cabinet. Premier Arsenault is a good man, and would make a splendid Cabinet minister. It would also be a splendid thing for Prince Edward Island to have Cabinet representation at Ottawa. Every other province has such representation, and, it is asked why not Prince Edward Island as well?

Those who ask such a question should have no difficulty in finding the answer. It is contained in the election returns: Prince Edward Island enjoys the odious distinction of being the only province of the Confederation to vote solidly against the Union Government. Prince Edward Island, with its large farming population, has profited more to the square inch from the war than any other part of Canada, but when the showdown came between those who were willing to help in the patriotic movement for a national, non-partizan, war administration, the Island, swayed by partizanship, parochial jealousies, sectionarism and dread of military service, elected to join hands with the recalcitrants of Quebec.

In the circumstances nothing could be more wildly grotesque than a request from such a community for representation in Canada's Union, Win-the-War government.

Prince Edward Island's case is immeasurably worse than that of Quebec, for Prince Edward Island is an English-speaking province, with scant British traditions, excellent schools, a well-informed newspaper press, and every influence that should make for an intelligent public opinion; but it has voted in precisely the same way as the terrified, untaught, misguided habitants of the back sections of Quebec, who howled down and hurled sticks and stones at the public men who sought to instruct them on the issues of the election.

Prince Edward Island has made its bed, and must be content to lie therein. Had the Quebec propaganda succeeded, the Island might fittingly have asked for and received Cabinet representation in the Lost-the-War administration that would then have been formed. But in the Union Government it has no more claim to representation than Kitchener, or Provencher, or Quebec East.

SERIOUS FIRE AT WOMAN'S COLLEGE

BOSTON, Jan. 9.—Fire has destroyed Williston Hall, including the department of science and many valuable scientific papers, at Mount Holyoke Women's College, South Hadley. The students were absent on their Christmas vacation and no person was injured. The financial loss is estimated at $200,000.

Canadidate for Water Commissioner

At the earnest solicitation of a large number of citizens, Mr. Angus DesRoche has consented to run for Water Commissioner. Mr. Desloche has been very prominent in city affairs for a long time and there is no doubt but he would make a successful Water Commissioner.
