GREAT, TENDER STORY IS TOLD IN M-G-M'S "THE HUMAN COMEDY"

—Tender and great is the story of human people as brought to the screen in the M-G-M num, "The Human Comedy." Eagerly awaited by many, the story, written by William Saroyan, is now playing at the Capitol Theatre. In it Mickey Rooney gives the outstanding dramatic performance of his long career, leaving behind him the unique characterization of Andy Hardy in the series of the same name.

"The Humane Comedy" deals with family life in a typical American small town. The Macauley family, for instance, is poor in wordly goods, but spiritually rich. Ma Macauley, portrayed by Fay Bainter, is a widow and her oldest son, Marcus played by Van Johnson, is a private in the army. Mickey Rooney is the second son. He gets a messenger's job in the local telegraph office, working after school, so that he can help out at home. His work calls for him to meet people—all sorts of people—and to get to know them. He learns much from Frank Morgan, who gives a telling account of himself as an old broken down telegrapher, and James Craig, the philosophical manager of the office.

Runs the Gamut of Emotions

There are comic moments, tragic incidents and tender love scenes, all deftly interwoven in this inspiring story. Craig handles the romantic angle effectively as Marsna, Hunt, daughter of the rich banker, plays up to him as "her man."

FIERCE ASSAULT

Gen. Sir Bernard Montgomery were too much for the Nazis, and official reports said the attack near the coast made "good progress."

In the second bridgehead opposite Archi a day of heavy see-saw fighting ended with Gen. Montgomery's warriors holding high groud on the northwest side of the river. It was disclosed that this second crossing of the flooded Sangro was first achieved four days ago by the famous 78th British division, veterans of "long stop hill" in Tunisia and fighting mates of the Canadian 1st Division in cracking the Mount Etna line in Sicily. No attempt was made to enlarge it until Gen. Montgomery sent his forces smashing forward in the darkness of Sunday morning with injunction to hit the Germans a "colossal crack."

Some 20 to 30 miles inland from the present bridgeheads, Canadian and British troops of the 8th Army's left flank in the Apennine mountains kept up active patrol operations, apparently in preparation to begin an offensive if Gen. Montgomery decides to extend his attack along the entire front.

Counter-Attacks Fail

Repeated German counter-attacks, with flame-throwing tanks in the van, failed to halt the offensive, but extremely heavy fighting continued. The possibility of the enemy rushing additional armored forces into the danger areas was seen in a report that allied airmen had strafed tanks loaded on motor transporters in areas east of Rome.

The thrust across the Sangro at Archi appeared to put the 8th Army astride a lateral road which had been used by the Nazis to supply their defensive positions behind the river.

Enemy Worried

German anxiety over the situation was reflected in the weight of the enemy's many counter-attacks against the slugging British forces, as well as in his continued heavy artillery fire against American positions on the 5th Army front. Reconnaissance showed the Nazis still were working hard on their emplacements guarding the main road to Rome from Mignano through Cassino.

West of Venafro, American troops of Lt.-Gen. Mark Clark's 5th Army gained more high ground in a limited advance and broke up determined German counter-attacks. A headquarters communique said "valuable information" was being gathered by 5th Army patrols penetrating enemy territory.

(For the first time in weeks, advices from Algiers did not tell of torrential rains and ankle-deep mud on the Italian front.)

Heavy Artillery Fire

Sunday's asault was preceded by hours of massed artillery bombardment that turned the enemy's positions into a cauldron of fire and explosions. As the attack progressed, the Allied air force shuttled across the Sangro to unload bombs on the Nazis. Fourteen large formations of British, American and South African light bombers carried the brunt of this assault.

The German air force, making its first appearance in strength over the battle lines in recent weeks, sent three formations of fighterbombers against the advancing British troops, but each group was intercepted by Spitfires, which destroyed two Messerschmitt 109's and one Focke-Wulf 190 and damaged others.

Kensington And Vicinity

An enjoyable variety concert was held in King George Hall, Kensington, Friday evening, November 26th in aid of the Kensington Carnegie Library, and $53 was realized to look after the financial obligations of that worthy institution. As this was the first variety concert that had been held in Kensington for some time, the hall was packed to its utmost capacity, and there were some late arrivals who were unable to gain admission. The opening number, Primary Songs by the Pupils of Grade I, was a particularly delightful feature of the entertainment, the tiny tots singing choruses and solos with surprising efficiency. Marion MacArthur, Jimmie McMahon, Myrna Cousins, Marion Crozier, George Brookins, Reggie Pendergast and Elizabeth Brookins, were the leading performers of this exercise. Miss Peggy McQuaid, a Grade VII pupil, gave a pleasing solo rendition of "The Shrine of St. Cecilia" and after a hearty encore, sang "I'm Getting Tired So I Can Sleep". A dialogue titles "The Elves and the Shoemaker" followed, and was a dramatic adaptation from one of the primary school readers. The pupils of Grades II and III portrayed the different characters in this old fairy tale, Kenneth Blakeney and Frances Pendergast were cast in the roles of the shoemaker and his wife, and the elves were depicted by Jimmy McQuaid, Ivan Gill and Pat McLean. Donnie Hunter accompanied the action by reading the story from his reader. The fourth number on the programme was unique. Ellwood Dunning, former Kensington school boy, who had so often appeared on the King George Hall stage to entertain Kensington concert Goers with his guitar and his melodious voice was unable to be present, being in service with His Majesty's Navy. But a phonograph record which Elwood had had made, and had sent to his mother, Mrs. Claude Dunning, on Mother's Day, was played, so once again Ellwood's voice was heard in the hall where so many of his vocal triumphs had been achieved. "Rose in the Garden of Prayer" was the title of his solo.

The pantomime, "Home, Sweet Home" was next enacted by pupils from Grade VII and VIII. Tommy Pendergast, Betty Pendleton, Rowan Profitt, Norma Humphrey, and little Gayle Darrach were the principals. This was followed by a Sketch, entitled "Did You Hear the Latest?" by Three Wagging Tongues. The three whose tongues did the wagging with devastating effect were Nora McCarvell, Ruth McNeill and Lois Macdonald. A humorous dialogue, titled "The Smith Family" was next on the program. Robert Mayhew and Eleanor McMurdo took the parts of Mr. and Mrs. Smith, while their unmanageable children were portrayed by Shirlie Monkley, Genevieve McMahon, Ronnie Kennedy and Michael Dale.

Another of the standout features of the programme came next when a Liberty Pageant was presented by the pupils of Grades IV, V and VI. Margaret Jardine as the Statue of Liberty, in a clear ringing voice introduced the several United Nations as they appeared on the stage bearing beautifully colored shields showing the flags and emblems of the countries represented. The dramatic and scenic effects were equally pleasing. The teaching staff of the Kensington School is indebted to the teachers of Kinkora School who made the beautiful shields and lent them to Kensington School for the concert. The programme was brought to a close by older pupils' singing of the closing chorus, "Ship Ahoy," after which God Save The King" was sung Mr. James Pendergast acted as chairman, and the Misses Olive Thompson and Laura McQuaid were the accompanists for the musical selections.

Miss Annie Delaney of St. John, N. B. is visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. William Delaney, Kensington.

Mrs. Jack Hepburn of Moncton is the guest of her sister, Ms. Edwin Stevenson, Kensington.

Mr. Carl Ramsay of the R. C. N. V. R. is spending a furlough at his home in Indian River.

The Misses Betty Lockhart and Mary Dart of Truro were visitors recently at the home of Betty's grandmother, Mrs. Annie Lockhart, Kensington.

The Kensington Rink Committee have decided to operate the rink again this winter, after a year's layoff.

Mrs. Lena Monkley spent an enjoyable week-end with her daughter, Wilna, who is employed with the C. N. R. in Halifax, N. S.

His many friends are glad to see Linwood Toombs of the R. C. A. F. home again after an absence of some months on duty in Labrador. Linwood expects to be home about three weeks on furlough.

Miss Phelicia Clark has accepted a position at Nellie's Restaurant, Kensington. —D.

Funeral Yesterday Of Famous Poet

TORONTO, Nov. 29—(CP)—Canada's first truly national poet, Sir Charles G. D. Roberts, took his place today in that world he has defined as:

".....That one room
"Where no guest ever lodged before."

Those words from his poem "The Vagrant of Time" sounded quietly over the gathering of Canada's most distinguished men and women of letters today at Sir Charles' funeral service, held here in the heart of the nation for which he has reserved his best expression.

Among pallbearers to the 83-year-old poet, who died Friday, were Lorne Arthur Deacon, Prof. Watson Kirkconnell, Franklin Davey McDowell, Bernard K. Sandwell, Sir Ernest MacMillan and Dr. Lorne Pierce—they accompanied Sir Charles' body to the crematorium from the service in the Church of St Stephen's.

"The Vagrant of Time" was one of four poems read by Canon J. E. Ward, assisting Rev. C. John Frank in the funeral service.

Sir Charles' ashes are to be taken for interment to the family plot at Fredericton, N.B., beside the ashes of his cousin, Bliss Carman.

Hull Discounts Peace Rumors

WASHINGTON, Nov. 29—(AP) —State secretary Cordell Hull took some of the wind out of the latest bunch of ballooning peace rumors today with a sharp warning that "most of the time" such reports are put out to impair Allied prosecution of the war.

Hull did not say specifically what sources spread the peace talk, but it seemed clear that he had Nazi proagandists in mind. The intention, he told his press conference, is to build up over-confiednce among the Allies in the hope that their vigorous attacks on Germany will be relaxed.

A short time before he spoke a news dispatch from Stockholm quoted a Svenska Dagbladet account of a story in a Swiss newspaper La Suisse to the effect that Germany had made a new peace proposal for submission to Prime Minister Churchill, President Roosevelt and Premier Stalin.

This was but one of the latest in a series of stories, originating chiefly in Europe's neutral capitals. One from Switzerland offered an unconfirmed report that Pope Pius XII had undertaken to mediate an end to the war.

Presbyterian Church At Wood Islands Burned

The Presbyterian church at Wood Islands was destroyed by fire early Sunday morning.

Residents of the district believe that the fire was started by lightning as a severe storm began there about 1 a.m. Sunday and continued for two hours.

The fire was discovered by Alex MacMillan. He said it had made considerable headway by that time.

The church building was 50 feet long and 33 feet wide. It was of wood and was built "between 80 and 100 years ago" residents of the district said.

The manse, which was unoccupied, was not burned. It was located some distance from the church

Rev. T.A.A. Duke, the minister for the Caledonia-Wood Islands charge, is unmarried and was boarding at a home in Belle River, about a mile and a half from the church

It was reported unofficially that the loss was partially covered by insurance.

What To Give Sailors For Christmas

OTTAWA, Nov. 29 — (CP) — Waterproof watches, flannel pyjamas and home-made food are Christmas gifts sure to boost the morale of men in the navy, the Royal Canadian Navy said tonight in a press release which contained a list of "ideal" presents.

Cigaret lighters, tobacco pouches and monogrammed cigaret cases are gifts which will be appreciated, the release said. Men at sea can obtain ample supplies of cigarets and tobacco but that does not apply to men ashore.

Waterproof kits for toilet articles are useful. Men at sea have a fairly plentiful supply of toilet articles but those serving in jam-packed ports ashore need all kinds of toilet goods especially razor blades. All kinds of reading material will be welcomed by men ashore. Money wallets and money belts are cherished.

Seamen can't receive too much underwear. Constant changes are necessary when men become soaked by salty sprays. Patch jackets are the pride of every man. Dress sox and dress black leather gloves are nice to wear ashore. Bedroom slippers are a luxury at sea and so are comb and brush sets.

Identification bracelets will be well received providing the sender makes sure whether the man is in the R.C.N., the R.C.N.R., or the R.C.N.V.R. Gift-senders should also make sure whether a man is an officer or a rating before sending clothes to wear with his uniform. White broadcloth shirts, hard collars and black ties are perfect gifts for confirmed Petty Officers, writers, supply assistants, sick berth attendants and cooks but are useless to a man dressed as a seaman.

Phonograph records, portable radios, flashlights and batteries, pens and pencils and monogrammed writing paper were also suggested as suitable gifts.

Chinese Still Hold Changteh

CHUNGKING, Nov. 30—(Tuesday—(AP)—The Chinese High Command announced today that two Japanese divisions, roughly 30,000 men, have been routed southwest and northwest of strategic Changteh in a bitter, three-day battle and are in full retreat.

It said that Chinese forces were in hot pursuit of the enemy troops fleeing eastward.

Easing another threat to the transport centre from which drives might be launched either against Changsha or Chungking itself, Chinese forces southeast of Changteh blunted the thrust of another Japanese column and turned it back to the north bank of the Yoan river, the announcement said.

The partly-encircled and battered city still was taking heavy punishment, however, with Japanese guns pouring incendiary and gas shells into it and subjecting it to almost incessant bombings.

Large numbers of Japanese were said to have been killed as bitter battles still raged about the city.

North of the Yangtse river, the Chinese said street fighting was continuing at Tangyang, key Japanese stronghold northeast of Ichang, and other Chinese forces pushed back invading forces counter-attacking from several strongholds northwest of Hankow.

Further Chinese successes were reported from the southern Honan front, where the Chinese said they fought their way to the city wall of the enemy base of Sinyang, on the Peiping-Hankow railway.
