Read, Jr. The road was icy and when rounding a curve at James River about seven miles from Antigonish, his Chev Coupe left the road and went down an embankment rolling over twice and landing on its side at the bottom. Mrs. Embree received a shoulder injury nad the little boy got a slight cut on the back of his head. Mr. Burch escaped with some minor bruises. The only glass broken in the car was the windshield but the top of the car and the fenders received considerable damage. The Cape Traverse Women's Missionary Society met at the home of Mrs. Ernest Harper on Thursday H Moore of Scotch Lake, N.B.

I have had the privilege of knowing him for over twenty years and ours has been the close fellowship of kindred minds in the study of nature, more particularly the birds, insects, and Indian archaeology of New Brunswick and we have spent many happy days in the wilds and in the home in the pursuit of our hobbies.

A visit to his home at Scotch Lake was a delight. He built himself a camp (or museum) on the verge of a beautiful little brook just a few steps from his farm home. He named his camp "The Rendezvous" and such it was for anyone interested in nature study." His collection of birds, mounted by himself, was unique. He gave this fine collection to the Provincial Normal School in Fredericton quite recently.

He is now in the evening of his life but he still knows well the bird life of his province. He reminds me much of the great Scottish geologist, Hugh Miller, by his making the most of a merger education and improving it at every opportunity.

I was particularly happy to note your mention of the Fredericton Science Club, having been a member of the Club almost from the day of its inception by the late Professor Loring W. Bailey of U.N.B., Fredericton, about 25 years ago and I have the honor of being a Past-President.

The Club consists of ladies and gentlemen who have an interest in Knowledge, and during the winter months it meets in the home of one or other of its members. We have had the rare privilege of hearing addresses and lectures by many men who are leaders in their own branch of knowledge. The meetings are always followed by an informal discussion and then the ladies serve refreshments. The "transactions" are kept in the form of minutes.

I have often known my friend Mr. Moore to load up a farm sled with friends and neighbors to make the eighteen miles journey to Fredericton, in the depth of winter, just to attend a meeting of the club. For my own part, it has been the means of many lasting friendships; and I believe if you were to institute such a club here, you would find that there are many people who are eloquent on the subject that appeals to them, when they met with those who are "like-minded." Your's very truly, Wm. M. Kesson."

I hope to supplement Mr. Kesson's kind letter in a future "Note."

Island Pilot Receives wings At Ottawa

OTTAWA, Nov. 21—(CP)—The largest group of airmen to receive pilots' wings here was graduated today at No. 2 Service Flying Training School.

Wing Cmdr. F. C. Seavill of the Royal Air Force a native of New Zealand, presented the wings to the graduates, most of them members of the Royal New Zealand Air Force.

"You are evidence of the great part being played by New Zealand with its comparatively small population of 1,500,000, he told the New Zealanders.

LAC. L. R. Stuchberry of Nelson, N.Z., graduated with highest honors in the class which included airmen of five countries—Canada, United States, England, New Zealand and Australia. Included in the group was a full-blooded Maori, LAC. H. E. Mete-Kingi of Wanganui, N.Z.

Canadian graduates included W. J. Higgins, Kensington, P.E.I., the only Maritimer.

CALLS TO

ly that it must work, for there is no alternative except disaster.

"This is your part in the war. In every home in Canada there now is a fighting part to play. I believe you can and will save yourselves and your country in this crisis."

Mr. Gordon's statement of policy earlier in the day was straight from the shoulder— a warning that the board he heads does not intend to go halfway in application of the general price ceiling over commodities and services.

Tonight in his radio broadcast he re-emphasized this point.

"The statement of objective contains no equivocation," he said. "At no time has the government even suggested that some price increase may be permitted, or that some later date may be selected for the basic level (not established on the period Sept. 15-Oct. 11.)

"There is no place in this plan for pussyfooting or halfway measures. There will be by this board no pussyfooting or halfway measures.

"We are resolved to stop price increases; we are going to hew to that line without deviation."

Mr. Gordon spoke over a National network of the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation, the broadcast being repeated later in the evening over the western network. Yves Lamontagne, a French-speaking member of the board, spoke on the French network.

War Demands Paramount

Mr. Gordon's statement of policy, in reference to supplies of commodities in Canada, said "the demands of war are paramount, and only what is left over can be used for civilian goods." But while the board had complete power over supply of goods and services, it would not impose any system of rationing consumers unless this became "absolutely necessary."

In the interests of the consumer he said, the board will use if necessary its powers to overcome threatened interruptions in the flow of goods or abnormal diversions of purchase orders from one supplier to another, or of the sales from one trade customer to another.

Along with his statement of the board's powers, Mr. Gordon set forth that the price control success depends in large measure on loyal and intelligent co-operation of producers, distributors and consumers. He reiterated that the fundamental duty of the board was to see that prices rose no higher than their maxima during the four weeks from Sept. 15 to Oct. 11 and that "in particular, retail prices, the prices paid by consumers of goods and services, must not rise."

Hardships May Arise

Some maladjustments and genuine hardships might arise in the administration of price control and the board would seek to see such difficulties were overcome fairly. It was determined "to treat everyone considerately and justly with due regard for the practical difficulties involved."

The board would not deprive those engaged in the work of maintaining the flow of goods and services of "reasonable remuneration," but "business as usual" had disappeared.

"Profits will undoubtedly be reduced and those who are in the best position to do so will have to make the greatest sacrifices in the general interest," his statement said.

Prices changed by wholesalers and manufacturers would, in a number of cases, have to be reduced, voluntarily or by order of the board, so retailers might continue to operate without disproportionate hardship.

However, he said "the board has no intention of allowing any essential enterprise to be forced to the wall by the imposition of price control."

The intention is that if there is a "squeeze" between the cost of raw materials or imported semi-finished materials, and the retailer's selling price of the finished article, everybody in the industry, from retailer back to manufacturer or importer should bear his fair share of the burden. Mr. Gordon said.

"If the total burden is too great, in fairness to the industry as a whole, the board will investigate and if it is found necessary, will recommend that the government representing the people as a whole, should also take a share of the burden by way of a subsidy, or controlling the price of raw materials, or reducing import duties, or in some other appropriate way."

Each branch of the trade or industry, including the retailer, was expected to bear its own losses, if any, with respect to stocks on hand as at the close of business on Nov. 30.

Wherever it is necessary to enforce standard practices throughout an industry, the board would issue the necessary orders.

In his radio address, Mr. Gordon said the board is convinced that any method of price-fixing other than the general ceiling is not even worth trying in attempting to control runaway inflation.

"We have examined proposals which have been made," said Mr. Gordon. "One such proposal— made with undoubted sincerity and good intention—has been that we apply the brakes gradually and allow retail prices to rise because, as we well realize, the cost of replacing goods on retailers' shelves has risen considerably over the past few months.

"This proposal has been thoroughly examined and I wish to emphasize and underline, as strongly as I can, that such an approach has been completely rejected by both the government and the board. It has been rejected because we know that it would mean losing the battle before it has even started."

Keeping close tab on his men and machines in this manner, he would return and restudy his maps.

Fast little scout cars called "dingoes" fussed around the big British formations like sheepdogs to keep them on the move.

The deployment of the United States made medium tanks, called "our honeys" by their British pilots and gunners, and the long lines of following supply trucks and artillery, was an unforgettable sight. Hollywood could not have done better.

Indian troops had labored to widen Egyptian coastal roads for this big volume of traffic. The Royal Air Force had moved its airdromes and supply dumps far ahead. Mobile field workshops and tank recovery units were rushed into desert hideaways.

We learned later of the rainstorm, one of the heaviest ever known in the desert, which swept the Axis coastal regions to the north the night before and played havoc with Axis aerial defences.

The rain pouring into the dry sands turned the Axis coastal airports into mud seas, but the storm had spent its fury by the time it swept on eastward to the Egyptian border where the British forces were on the move.

This phenomenal storm defeated the German air force in Libya decisively on this first day. It was a great stroke of luck for Britain.

The motors of German dive bombers roared angrily, but could not lift the planes out of the mud. British aerial scouts reported this unusual development.

This apparently accounted for the little aerial opposition encountered by the force I accompanied, because by nightfall we were 70 miles inside Libya and still going strong.

German Force

rived. They were rounded up before they knew what was going on, it was stated.

Bent grimly on utter annihilation of the Axis armored weapons, the eighth army under Gen. Sir Alan Gordon Cunningham swept into action Thursday against parts of two German divisions—both in the sands near Rezegh and at a point eastward toward the Egyptian border town of Sidi Omar. In both cases, the British command said, the Germans fell back, their armored striking power battered and shredded.

187 Axis Tanks Smashed

Added to the 57 tanks which the Italian Ariete division now is said to have lost in another and preliminary engagement Tuesday and Wednesday, the total of Axis tanks specifically reported smashed in three days of fighting has reached 187. In addition, the Germans were said to have lost 33 armored cars Thursday.

(According to the best available information, an Axis armored desert division has about 350 tanks. Thus the two German and one Italian divisions on the scene appear to have taken about an 18-per cent loss.)

"The battle in Cirenaica was joined in earnest Thursday afternoon," said the communique.

Story of Battle

In brief, this was the story it told:—

The hot fight at Rezegh, some 15 miles south of Tobruk, resulted in the loss of 70 German tanks and the 33 armored cars, and the Germans left several hundred prisoners in British hands as they withdrew.

Between this sector and Sidi Omar, another British armored force clashed with panzers coming from the coast near Bardia and Gambut. Here the Germans on the first day of the battle, Wednesday, lost 26 tanks and the British forces lost 20; Thursday morning action again was closed and the Germans fled back toward the northeast after losing 34 more tanks.

Dispatches from the field indicated that this German force consisted originally of at least 100 tanks which tried to drive a wedge between two British armored forces, one of which is composed largely of American tanks.

That the United States-built machines in their first test came up to all expectations was attested by the official story of the battle.

The Italians first encountered by British cruiser tanks at Bir El Gobi, south of Rezegh and about 50 miles inside Libya, appeared to have fallen well back and the communique said the division "apparently has exerted no influence" on the action farther north.

"It was remembered," said the communique, "that this Italian division was attacked and severely handled by British armored forces Nov. 18 during their initial advance toward Rezegh."

In the stretch between the coast at "Hellfire Pass" and Sidi Omar along the Egyptian border, entrenched Axis forces again were being pressed frontally while a British tank column behind the Germans' backs was reported making steady progress northward, drawing the lines of a trap.

Elsewhere on the 140-mile front, tonight's announcement said, there were deep penetrations by British armored and mechanized forces in a number of directions—every one of them a menace to the main Axis communication lines.

Bombers Get Credit

The communique gave British bombers particular credit for support of the armored units in the Rezegh battle and reported "great success" in a raid on a German dive bomber base.

The main central force of the grand British offensive into Libya was driving on tonight past Tobruk, over the high plateau just to the south, military headquarters announced, and a lethal arm thus apparently was stretching out to envelop all the Axis forces between there and the Egyptian frontier.

Lesser Imperial columns swinging off to the north from the main line of the advance were at the same time reported making or about to make a junction with Tobruk itself, which since April had been under Axis siege, to complete a second and local entrapment of the German and Italian troops which so long had kept the garrison at bay.

The Tobruk defenders were coming out fighting to help lift the siege and it was taken for granted that the erstwhile besiegers shortly would be cleaned out. There was a belief in some quarters that this had in fact already been about accomplished.

Still farther to the south, Sir Alan's left, which had sprung initially from the far southern end of the British line around Giarabub, was beating forward through the desert silences, swinging out in vast loops across the wastelands.

R. A. F. Ranges Far

Ahead of the British ground forces, which in the nature of the terrain appeared to be moving with extraordinary rapidity, the Royal Air Force ranged far to assault westward Axis positions, and offshore in the Mediterranean Admiral Sir Andrew Browne Cunningham's fleet was in running action along the right flank of his brother's forces.

The R. A. F. meeting the Germans and Italians with equal or greater power and again reporting the destruction of Axis aircraft aground—an indication that the Axis high commander Gen. Edwin Rommel is having a hard time keeping his air arm based—loosed its bomb loads all the way to the extreme west of Libya. Hit, among other Axis points, were Derna, Bardia, Bangasi and Tripoli.

Correspondents in the field reported that the softness of much of the ground and the almost endless British bombing action were giving the Germans great difficulty and that there were indications that Rommel was desperately attempting to bring in air reinforcements from Crete.

All arms of the British offensive were moving for a quick decision, where equal or superior British armament would be the controlling factor, and to prevent Rommel from drawing back in a long-continued retreat that could put strain upon British communications.

New women's Commandant Is disciplinarian

(By Patricia Connolley)
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

OTTAWA, Nov. 21—(CP)—If girls who enlist in the Canadian women's army corps are looking for frills and thrills they're going to have to get them through strict attention to soldierly duties. This is the view of their new commandant, Mrs. Norman R. Kennedy of Victoria.

Defence Minister Ralston, in announcing her appointment as head of the women's army formation today, gave her the title of "senior commander."

It will be the job of this slender 37 year old army women from Victoria to see that the C. W. A. C. fulfills its purpose of taking care of the less arduous tasks of the army and thereby relieving men fit for combat duty to take more active posts.

"Any woman who goes into this with the idea of finding glamor and adventure is entirely misled, she said. "Her job will probably be pounding a typewriter, scrubbing floors, cooking or something equally commonplace—but necessary."

Mrs. Kennedy, a woman of sparkling personality, held a press conference after her appointment had been announced and after having conferred with various officials responsible for the organization of her corps.

She was the first staff-officer to be appointed to the C. W. A. C. and was officer in charge of military district No. 11 (Victoria) since August. With her in Ottawa today were various C. W. A. C. district commanders who took part in conferences on organization.

Mrs. Kennedy was born in Middlesex, Eng., and was educated in English and Canadian schools.

Islanders to be Trained for air Force in N. B.

Under the Dominion Provincial Youth Training Plan arrangements have been made by the local Air Force Recruiting Officer to accept young men from P.E.I. for special training prior to their entry into the R.C.A.F. Classes will be conducted in Fredericton as follows:—Starting immediately special instructions will be given in Mathematics, Physics and English to enable men with grade ten or better education to have sufficient knowledge of these subjects to permit of their enlistment for the Pilot or Observer Courses.

A number of young men from the Island already have applied for this Course and have been notified to report to the Charlottetown Recruiting Centre this coming Monday for final instructions.

In addition men between the ages of eighteen and thirty-five with Grade eight or better education are required to take the Courses for Aero Engine Mechanics and Airframe Mechanics and also men with Grade nine education or better who are desirous of becoming Wireless Operators for Ground Duties will be instructed in this trade.

The men who take advantage of these opportunities will be given free transportation and in addition will be paid a living allowance of $9 a week for single men, and $12 a week for those that are married.

As many men should be interested in this dual chance to serve as well as to learn a trade the Air Force Recruiting Officer states that his Centre is expecting to receive numerous enquiries and applications.

Recruiting train Is touring India

LAHORE, India, Nov. 21 — (CP)—Services train, the first of its kind seen in India, has started a tour that will take it to every section of the country. More than a thousand feet long, the train is made up of sections representing air force, army and navy. India's medical services, munitions industry and other branches of the war effort. Among demonstrators are officers and men of the armed forces. The train carries a pipe band and a recruiting officer.

Interpreting The War

under the most skilful and experienced Nazi panzer general were met and dealt with, the rest would be relatively simple.

In the British view, Italian resistance throughout Libya is apt to collapse even more quickly than it did before Wavell's army if German tank units can be crushed. Time is of the essence for the British however. They must deliver a crushing blow swiftly, so that much of their army can be transferred at need to the Iran gateway to the Caucasus.

The road to Russian oil must be barred to Hitler at all cost. There is every indication that the British expect to clean up in Libya and stand ready to turn east again too swiftly for the Germans to have gained headway against the Russians across the 750-mile mountain studded and water buttressed route that still separates them from that Caspian oil field.

This desert, a waste of trackless loose lying sand below sea level, protects the British advance on its left flank as the British fleet protects the coastal right flank. Only cart tracks and caravan trails cross the harder ground north of the desert along which the British seem moving westward.

That also is a direct route between the Gulf of Sollum and Gulf of Sidra, 400 miles west. A flying British advance would cut Axis forces in the whole rugged Libyan hump-off from their Tripoli supply base.

day afternoon, November 6th with fifteen members and six visitors present. The vice-president presided and used the theme "We Live By Faith In Jesus Christ" for the worship service. The meeting opened with a call to Worship and the hymn "All Hail The Power Of Jesus Name," followed by a responsive litany of praise for Jesus Christ. The scripture was read in unison from Te Daum Daudamus, after which there was a period of meditation and dedication with silent prayer. The minutes of the previous meeting were read and approved and business was discussed. Mrs. Haslam then gave a reading on the work in China after which Mrs. Harper and Miss Mary Muttart sang a lovely duet, "There Will Dawn A Golden Morrow". Collection was taken and the meeting closed by singing "Fight The Good Fight", followed by the Benediction. A social hour was much enjoyed and Mrs. Harper assisted by Mrs. Allison Harper served a delicious lunch. An interesting letter from Miss Elma Inman, Missionary in Trinidad, was read by Mrs. Gordon Harvey.

QUEEN'S CANADIAN FUND DONATIONS

Repeated bombing raids on British port areas and the industrial midlands has attracted fresh attention to the frightful suffering of the many thousands of civilians in Great Britain who are harried from shelter to shelter and finally driven into the open country by successive raids. Eventually places are found for them all places of relative security, but their belongings of all kinds are destroyed. The task of emergency feeding alone is difficult. The task of setting them up once more with some quantity of clothing and bedding is much more difficult.

To meet these enormous needs, funds have been started in various parts of the world. Her Majesty use of her name in connection with the Dominion campaign, which is officially known as "The Queen's Canadian Fund for Air Raid Victims."

Every dollar contributed to the Queen's Canadian Fund goes without deduction to the Lord Mayor of London for distribution to the homeless and needy.

Contributions from this Province should be forwarded to the Royal Trust Company, Charlottetown, which reports the following receipts to date:
