TWO SYSTEMS OF PARLIAMENTARY GOVERNMENT.

It is somewhat difficult for Canadians, trained under the British system of parliamentary government, to understand the troubles that arise from time to time under the republican system of our neighbors. We read occasionally of successive Speakers of the House of Representatives at Washington being denounced as czars or tyrants. With us, under the British system, whether it be in the Imperial Parliament at Westminster, in the Canadian Parliament at Ottawa, or in any one of the Provincial Legislatures, such complaints are almost unknown. Our Speakers are impartial, judicial, and command the respect and honor of members on both sides of the House. It is the difference in the two governmental and legislative systems which causes this difference in the attitude and status of the Speaker in the two great English-speaking countries.

Czarism, or the tyranny of a Reed or a Cannon, is practically out of the question under the British system. We have at the head of the Empire, or the Dominion, or the Province, a King, or a Governor-General or a Lieutenant Governor who is the head of the Governmental unit, who is of no party, but above all parties, who "can do no wrong," because his ministers must take the responsibility for his acts. These ministers in turn must sit in Parliament and must hold the confidence of the people's representatives. The medium of communication between them and the Head of the State is the Prime Minister. The Speaker holds a quasi judicial position. He is the head of the entire House and not of a party. His duty is to preside impartially, keep order and see that the business is carried on in accordance with the rules of the House.

Under the American system the procedure is entirely different. The President, who is the choice of one party, is entrusted with more arbitrary power than our King. His advisers are the heads of departments, chosen by himself and responsible only to him. They do not sit in Congress and are not in close touch as our ministers are with the people's representatives. Hence it falls out that the Speaker of the House of Representatives is not expected to be a judicial head of the House, but a partisan and a party leader. As such, and for many years past as a member of the Committee on rules, appointed by himself, and with full control over the procedure, it was quite practicable for the Speaker to block any legislation that was not to his liking. He could "recognise" whom he would among those who rose to speak, and only the favored ones could catch his eye at the critical moment to make a motion or to address the House.

The system lead naturally to czardom, the use and abuse of arbitrary power with the natural result of producing a revolt in the end. It is the system that is at fault, and from the top downward. No Canadian would for a moment entertain the motion of a change from our system to theirs. We like our own system of an Executive above party influence or control of Ministers sitting in Parliament and liable to be called to account and voted out any day, and a Speaker who is an impartial and honored presiding officer, knowing no party in the discharge of his official duties. We think this system tends to order, decorum and dignity. We have no fault to find with our neighbors for adopting another and widely different plan. If it suits them we have nothing further to say. When people like that sort of thing that is the sort of thing they like.

A NOTABLE GOLF CHAMPIONSHIP CONTEST.

There are golf matches and golf matches, between rival clubs, representing rival cities, provinces, states and nations. One of the most notable of these in the future will be the trial of skill between His Excellency, President Taft of the United States and His Excellency, Earl Grey, the Governor General of Canada. President Taft is the challenger. The challenge grew out of the recent happy meeting of the two dignitaries at Albany. The prize is to be the High Executive Golf Championship of North America. The memorable contest will take place on the links of the Myopia Club, near Beverly, N.Y., on a date to be agreed upon after Congress shall have adjourned.

President Taft in giving the challenge warned his eminent competitor that this course is the hardest in the United States and also boasted that he had made the eighteen holes in less than one hundred. Earl Grey was nothing daunted at this and accepted the challenge forthwith. A condition of the contest is that no newspaper men shall be permitteed to be present. This is a rather extraordinary precaution, but it will be an extraordinary game, and the distinguished contestants declare that they are going to fight out the eighteen holes, without interference of any sort and decide the Executive Championship of North America. We fancy, however, that whether the great competitors are to be their own reporters or otherwise, the newspapers will some way find out, and print the result. May the best man win!

HON. GEORGE E. HUGHES AND HIS GRIEVANCES.

In a conversation by telephone with Hon. George E. Hughes on Thursday last, he informed The Guardian that he did refer to this journal when he spoke of the press refusing to print resolutions dealing with the Charlottetown Steam Navigation Company. Further questioned as to particulars, Mr. Hughes complained that certain proceedings in the Board of Trade referring to that company had not been printed as fully as he thought they should have been, and that once, three or four years ago he had introduced a bill in the Legislature to compel the Steam Navigation Company to make a yearly report under oath of their receipts and expenditures, and had personally asked the editor of The Guardian to take the matter up, which the editor had then declined to do; that he (Mr. Hughes) had moved for leave to introduce the bill referred to in the Legislature, and had made a speech an hour or more in length in support of it, but was unable to secure a seconder, and that no report of his performance had appeared in The Guardian.

To which heavy charges The Guardian begs modestly to reply:

That as to proceedings in the Board of Trade, whose meetings are mostly held in the evening, The Guardian has given such publicity as time, space and the pressure of other news of equal or greater importance would permit at the time;

That The Guardian has never through fear or favor, of or toward the Steam Navigation Company, either published or refrained from publishing anything in regard thereto, but has not felt in any way bound to take up the personal grievances of Mr. Hughes or any one else unless the public interest could be served thereby;

That in regard to Mr. Hughes' alleged grievance against The Guardian for not printing his speech and bill of four years ago, he seems to have "slept upon his rights;" that the proper time to air his grievance was when the fault, if such it was, was committed, and not now, and that The Guardian has not in all these years heard a single complaint from man, woman or child on the subject save that now made by Mr. Hughes himself.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

The annual budget of Newfoundland shows an estimated revenue for the year ending with June next of $3,250,000 and an expenditure af $3,000,000. This will leave a surplus of $250,000. The current year is said to be the most prosperous in the entire history of Newfoundland.

Reginald V. Harris of Halifax is announced as the winner of The Standard of Empire's 100 guinea prize for the best essay on "the Governance of the Empire." The judges were the Earl of Jersey, Lord Northcote, Sir Charles Tupper, and two editors of great British newspapers, each of whom passed judgment separately. The competitors were very numerous and wrote from practically every country in which the English language is spoken. Mr. Harris was awarded 66 points out of a possible 70. The honor and celebrity gained by the winner are altogether notable. The Guardian heartily congratulates Mr. Harris on his ability and success. He has been at various times a contributor to these columns on Maritime Union and other topics of public interest.

AN ACTRESS' DAY.

Plenty of Work and Very Little Play, Says Miss Edith Warren of the Colonial Stock Company.

The other day, during rehearsal, Miss Warren, leading woman of the Colonial Stock Company, was called up on the 'phone by a prominent St. John lady, who asked her to dine at her home with some friends next Thursday. Of course, the temptation was very strong, but after weighing the matter in her mind she thanked the lady for her invitation and begged to be excused.

In speaking of her reason for declining what could not have failed to be a pleasant little dinner party, Miss Warren said: One cannot imagine what a strenuous life I lead. I rise at seven, bathe and make ready for breakfast by eight. From breakfast until ten I go to my rooms and study. From ten until twelve there is rehearsal. From twelve till one, I make the rounds of the shops, buying odds and ends that are necessary. At one, it is lunch and then hurry upstairs to meet my dressmaker, except on Wednesdays and Saturdays when matinees take up my afternoons.

After I have talked over new ideas for gowns with my dressmaker, and have tried on several, I find that the clock is usually striking four. Then comes an hour which I allow myself for exercise in the open air. From five until six I read the newspapers that I may keep in touch with the current events. After dinner it is back to the theatre again, seldom leaving it until eleven or later.

After a light supper, I shut myself up for another period of study, which usually continues until the chimes of Trinity tell me that it is two in the morning.

To deny myself social pleasures was at first no easy task; duty said work first and play afterwards. So work it is during the greater part of the twenty-four hours. But it is only by work like this that my associates and I are able to give the performances that have pleased our many friends. 'I love my work and wouldn't give it up for the world.
