DONATIONS BEARING LIFE INTEREST SCHEME

WHAT IT IS: It is a scheme by which the British and Foreign Bible Society in Canada and Newfoundland accepts a sum of money from any donor as an absolute gift, the Society agreeing to pay a definite income during life, at times to be mutually arranged.

FOR WHOM IT IS INTENDED:

Many desire to give considerable sums of money to the Bible Society during their life time but have to defer these gifts because they require the income on their money in the meantime. The Donations Bearing Life Interest Scheme in draws up specially to meet such conditions and gives an opportunity to anyone to make a gift in this way to the Society.

ELLEN DIARY

(Continued from Page 2) slivering it in a bewitching trail which led along the sparkling water towards the dim horizon—a magic road leading many a one from the Island to seek fortune in distant but I suspect never more lovely pastures. But neither James nor I—James alone in the wide old bed, or wherever he may be taken up happily each waking moment with the concerns and delights of his occupation. Herein alone is one able to find the true "Reward of Service" of which Elizabeth Barrett Browning wrote in the following lines:

"The sweetest lives are those to duty wed, Whose deeds both great and small, Are close-knit strands of an unbroken thread, Where love ennobles all. The world may sound no trumpets ring no bells, The Book of Life the slurring record tell."

They love shall chant its own beauties, After its own like working. A child's kiss, Set on their singing lips shall make thee glad; A poor man served by thee shall make thee rich; A sick man helped by thee shall make thee strong; Thou shalt be served thyself by every sense Of service which thou renderest. Until Monday—Diary—Good-night.

Literature And Life

By Bookman

WHEN THE END IS A BEGINNING

The colleges and universities have been closing and the college halls and grounds are quiet. The young "Barbarians"—the jolly students—have gone here and there—some to their homes and others to positions where they may earn something to help them when another college term calls them together. Each institution had a graduation, when the class left with the benediction of the "alma mater," and to those going away for good, as we say, the college will be but a memory and an inspiration. The schools have been closing too, some pupils completing their education, at least their school life, while others will be looking forward to university.

These closing exercises have specific names attached to them. One is "graduation," but that does not mean that the "end" has come in school life, for we will know the word "graduation" has as its root the word for "step," so that graduation is just a step into a new period. It is a case where the end is but the beginning. Or take the term of which our American friends are fond "commencement." They very appropriately speak of graduation as but the commencement. This word is very suggestive, for here too the end is but the beginning.

A college course is not an inevitable prediction of what a student will be in after life. Have we not read of students who made a brilliant record at college, and in later years never fulfilled the promises which their friends had for them? On the other hand we have known students whose record was anything but brilliant who later in life climbed dizzy heights in the world.

Henry Drummond, we are told, never got his degree of M. A. at Edinburgh university, and when later he studied theology he hid the Hebrew Bible under a coat of books and a teacher of the subject in the university. Besides, he declined an offer to become principal of McGill university. Montreal.

Are we not told that Mr. Churchill was not a brilliant student in his earlier days, but we know what a great phrase-maker he became, and some of his speeches will doubtless be found in anthologies of that kind in later years, while his famous phrase about "blood, toil, sweat and tears" will take its place with words of Caesar and Lincoln. Is there not a story about Sir Walter Scott being no wonderful lad at learning; but he kept on and became the great novelist.

Let a college does not mean a student to keep on reading and thinking, and give him a taste for great literature—the "literature of power" what has it done? The carpenter learns his trade, but all the experience has done is that it has shown him how to go to work and build houses. A scholar may have his breast covered with medals won at the university, but down the street they may be worth nothing unless he is able to show that he knows how to use what he learned.

A college course should open a door to the student, showing the way into an interesting world, or should, to change the figure slightly, start him on a road that leads somewhere. It should create an appetite, and at the same time show him where there is real food for the mind.

Here's hoping that the jolly young crowd that has been "cap-

Scout News and Notices

Attention all Cubs and leaders who are interested in Cub camp! Applications have been received from Cubs of the Basildon, St. Peter's, Kirk, Zion and Trinity Packs. If you are planning on going to Cub Camp, please send in your application immediately. If you have no Application Form, just get in touch with Boy Scout Headquarters, phone 1100 or 577, and your needs will be met.

According to "Policy, Organization and Rules," the minimum age for Cubs going to Camp is 10 years.

A Cub Camp is different from any other Boy's Camp in that no attempt is made to cram 10 days or two weeks of Camping down a ten year old's throat, that is why the long week-end has been deemed sufficient for all Cubs.

We hope you won't miss this opportunity of getting to Cub Camp. It will put you in good shape to enjoy Old Home Week which follows immediately after Cub Camp.

A meeting of the Akela, Baloo and Bagheera will be called next week to OK the Program for Cub Camp.

A few members of the Club ended up on a winter road Thursday evening in all the thunder, rain and lightning. Other Scouters ended elsewhere.

red" in our various colleges and universities, and now face the world, may have something of the spirit of the "Grammarian" that Browning describes. His students are carrying his body to a fitting place of burial. His motto had been: "Let me know all." "He (soul-hydroptic with a sacred thirst) sucked at the flagon." They carry him reverently and tenderly to a mountain top, where "mascots show a clouded form; lightning are loosened, stars come and go." Let the others who are "tethered" to a dull life be buried in a place suitable to the life they lived, but not he. On the tombstone of John Richard Green are these words "He died learning." For such a one the end was but the beginning.

Tuberculosis is an infectious disease and some people who were healthy when last examined have TB now. It is of urgent importance that every such case be found and treated before the disease becomes advanced. We cannot hope to stamp out Tuberculosis until we can find every case immediately after the infection develops. Everybody is urged to co-operate in the drive to abolish this disease by being X-rayed at the nearest centre. PRINCE EDWARD ISLAND TUBERCULOSIS LEAGUE

Dorothy Dix Says

It is not to be denied that every successful marriage has to be founded on love, but it is just as easy for a girl to fall in love with the right sort of man as it is with the wrong sort. And it is the mother's business to know the lads with whom her daughters go, and to tactfully eliminate the undesirable before matters get serious.

Any mother who lets a boy who is a drunkard or just plain no-account have the run of her house is responsible for her daughter's wrecked life if she marries a dolt who drags her down to poverty and misery and breaks her heart with his failure to be all that she wanted in a husband.

Many mothers wonder why their daughters, who are pretty, intelligent, and well-educated and well-placed socially, are no-date girls or one-date girls. The explanation is nearly always because they get no co-operation from their mothers. Instead, mothers cramp their style by treating every boy who comes to the house as if he had come to steal the silver, or by never letting Sally have a date until she is so old and stiff she doesn't know how to act.

Or Mother drives away any prospective date by sitting up and waiting for Mamie to come home and meeting her with reproaches for having kept her up at night, or by never letting Mary go anywhere with a boy unless she is trailed by little brothers and sisters, or by not having any place in which the car can receive her company with any privacy and not have the family eavesdrop every word that is said. Few boys have the courage to pay a return date to a girl whose mother is a demon chaperon.

It is the mothers who have welcome on the doormat and who make their homes a pleasant place for the young man to come and make a shy boy feel at ease and set a diffident one to talking, and whose soft drinks and cakes never run out whose daughters always have plenty of dates, and eventually make good marriages because a managing mother has been on her job.
