ALLIES WERE DECEIVED.

LONDON, July 21.—According to the military attaché of a neutral power who has just arrived from Berlin, where he spent several years in his official capacity, the effort which the Germans are making on the eastern front is expected there to prove the supreme deciding factor of the war.

The German plan of campaign on the eastern front is admitted by the British military experts to be on a vaster front than anything yet attempted in the war.

Incidentally, it may be mentioned that were the United States forced to belligerent action, as, according to some theorists is Germany's yet, the reasons for making peace proposals which might be satisfactory to some of the Allies would be all the stronger from the German point of view.

In this connection a noteworthy suggestion was contained in a communication from the military correspondent of the Manchester Guardian, who after discussing the change in the plans of the German staff, whose orthodox principle at the beginning of the war was that France must be dealt with first and Russia, second, always with the idea that, if things went ill, a treaty could be patched up with Russia, says:

"The arguments for making Russia the chief object of attack were strengthened by the Austrian defeat by the uncertainty as to what the Balkan States would do, and by the beginning of the operations in the Danubian, which threatened Germany on a side which in a military sense is the most vulnerable side—Austria—and on which politically she is most sensitive. No doubt there is a strong party in Germany to the annexation of Belgium, but nothing can reconcile Germany to the fall of Constantinople."

DROP SHELLS ON RAILWAY STATIONS

(Special to The Guardian) PARIS, July 23.—The following official statement was issued tonight. Today was quiet on the whole front. In Artois the usual artillery action prevailed.

One of our flying squadrons dropped 250 shells on the railway station and forced two German aeroplanes to Alighn in their lines.

W. M. S. CONVENTION

The Summerside District of the Methodist Church held their Annual Convention at Freetown, Tuesday, July 20th. The weather was ideal, and a lovelier place for a meeting, than this pretty little church in the grove could not be thought of.

At the public meeting in the evening, Rev. G. M. Young delivered an eloquent address on the true present and the probable outcome of the great war.

GERMANS WOULD LIKE THE CONFLICT TO END AT ONCE.

BERLIN, July 20.—(Staff Correspondence) New York Times.—There are many indications that Germany is fast ripening toward "peace with honor and safety"—on her own terms—although one would probably never suspect it if he confined himself to reading the German papers, unless he read very carefully between the lines of certain inspired articles and semi-official statements.

These spontaneous opinions and questions about the probable duration of the war I encounter chiefly in talking with working men and women, small shop keepers, employees, etc. They are asked the question: "When are we going to have peace?"

"How long is it going to last? Often the hopes of an early peace are voiced in the volunteered remark: 'It can't last a long while yet.'"

Most Germans with whom I talk display a hard common sense in thoroughly realizing the great odds against them and that Germany can not hope to give the "knockout blow" to all her enemies.

Notwithstanding that the sub-surface peace talk, there is not the slightest evidence that Germany is willing to quit either now or in the immediate future. I have never met a German in the past seven months who has hinted at the possibility of quitting the war, even if he were offered even fervently trying to live up to the home "Hinderbergian motto to 'hold out' until the strongest nerves win and Germany can dictate the much-desired peace either wholly or in large part.

To repeat that all Germans with whom I have talked never doubt that Germany will win in the end is a work of supererogation, but there are some interesting and significant differences of opinion as to the completeness of the victory and the time, when and way in which this will come about.

Many non-fighters consider that Germany has already won the war, that it is merely a matter of hanging on to what they already have in order to "cash in" at the peace negotiations "which must come some time."

The hope is frequently expressed that France will soon see "the helplessness of her fight," and another favorite thought uppermost in the minds of many Germans is that England will "come to her senses." An interesting variant of this thought which I have heard expressed is that "England's business instinct will sooner or later

ISLAND SOLDIERS

Sir.—With reference to the magnificent recruiting meeting held in Moral Hall this evening so ably conducted by Rev. Dr. Fullerton we think it only fair to state that there is on the honor roll of St. Peter's and Marie Presbyterian Congregation nine names of young men at the front or on the way. The two young heroes who offered their services at the meeting were also from this Congregation making a total of eleven. This is in addition to Peter M. Grant of the Church of Scotland, Bangor, Lot 40, now recovering from wounds in Germany, who was in the 16th Batt. Vancouver Highlanders who covered themselves with glory in the heroic battle of the Marston. From Bangor also there is at the front, or on the way, Peter McDougall, son of Colin McDougall Esq. and Mr. Compton, son of Mrs. John Compton. The names of C. Leeland Coffin, son of Henry Coffin of Morrell and now in the hospital at Sheffield England recovering from wounds received when in the famous fighting tent and Mr. D. A. Shins of Carleton Place, Ontario, who it was not stated that Mr. Shins has another brother at the battle front who has been in many of the hardest battles of the campaign. All honour to the brave lads who are now doing their bit as well as those who are yet to go.

I am Sir etc. Morell, July 26, 1915.

lead her to find a way out of an expensive and losing game." A banker of international note in discussing the involved and delicate question of launching the "peace that must come" was particularly interested in inquiring what one man in America possessed the requisite tact to start the ball rolling toward an armistice when the time was ripe.

There are interesting shades and divergences of opinion as to when and how the deadlock will be broken, and some of the wisest and most marked trends and undercurrents of public opinion. Thus I find almost unanimous agreement that "the war won't last over another winter. On the other hand, some one 'close to Hindenberg' told some one else—and so on down the line—that the war would not be over before Christmas.

CAN'T LAND A KNOCKOUT

Most Germans with whom I talk display a hard common sense in thoroughly realizing the great odds against them and that Germany can not hope to give the "knockout blow" to all her enemies.

Talk of peace is always automatically coupled with victory. It is always well to bear this in mind if you want to understand the Germans. There is no trace of any tired feeling; in fact, not since the fall of Antwerp have I found them so confident of ultimate victory.
