MARKET WEAKNESS DUE TO FEELING THAT PEACE IS FAR OFF

NEW YORK, Dec. 16.—Henry Clewes, in his weekly financial report says: Another week of disappointment has passed over the financial district. Growing pessimism is a conspicuous fact, as is the consequent lack of buying power in existence despite the tremendous absorption of money by the government, is conceded, but it is easily offset by the persistent outpouring of stocks. Public opinion, for the time being at least, has given up hope of an early ending to the war. This explains the depression in part. Reports that the Germans are preparing for another big drive at the western front added to the prevailing discouragement; although the belief in hopeful circles was that the enemy was engaged in one of the final desperate efforts to drive the Allies back before American armies arrive in France. At the moment the war is growing in intensity rather than diminishing. Germany's activities are certainly increasing, presumably with a view of making a supreme effort. Britain's drive against Cambrai has been checked. Italy is actively resisting a tremendous attack. Spain and Portugal are both endangered by the fires raging about them, while all the neutral countries are more or less in danger of being drawn into the conflagration in the United States the war clouds are growing thicker and thicker. The storm is here, though not yet raging with the intensity of the first storm, it becomes deeper and stronger. When the casualty lists come back, we become solemn, serious and disappointed. But there should be no yielding to this discouragement, and no gloom. Victory is certain, provided we "carry on" our part with unflinching hope and courage.
