—BASKET SOCIAL.—Mont Carmel Hall was the scene of more than usual activity when on Thursday evening, Nov. 25th, a basket social took place in aid of Mont Carmel Church. The social was organized by the men and young ladies of the parish. On account of the bad condition of the roads very few of the neighbouring parishes were present. In spite of this inconvenience the sum of about $65 net was realized, arising from the sale of twenty-one handsome baskets, together with the proceeds of the admission fee and the saloon, which was provided with all refreshments desired. The Mont Carmel Church choir, with the assistance of the young ladies of the parish had a few weeks before organized a vocal production, which was rendered with melody at the outset of the entertainment. It consisted of a violin solo by Mr. John J. Gallant, a song in parts, "When You Were a Tulip," a song by P. P. Arsenault, song by choir, "Let My Name be Kindly Spoken"; song, "Brise des Nuits"; song, "Au Parson"; song, "Some Day I'll Wander Back"; and a song, "La Fleur du Souvenir," admirably rendered by three little girls from Mont Carmel School, and "We'll Never Let the Old Flag Fall." At the close of the choruses the sale of the baskets took place, after which the young people proceeded to enjoy themselves in the usual way: by dancing until late in the night. Quadrilles and Lancers were crowned with success. The music was rendered on the fiddle by the Messrs. John J. Gallant and John J. Richards, whilst the accompaniment was rendered in the organ by Miss Rosella Arsenault and others.—R.

—WEDDING BELLS.—A happy event took place on Wednesday, Nov. 24, at St. James Church, Freetown, when Miss Margaret C. Deigan, and Mr. Alphonsus McCarvel, two of Emevale's most popular young people, were united in the holy bonds of matrimony. Rev. Mgr. Gillis performed the marriage ceremony in the presence of a large number of relatives and friends. The bride looked charming in a suit of ivory satin, with shadow lace trimming, and large picture hat, carried a beautiful white prayerbook. The bridesmaid, Miss Ella McCarty, wore a suit of grey, with pale green sash with hat to match. The groom was ably supported by Mr. Bennett Deigan of Emerald. The wedding march was played by Mr. Peter Deigan, in his usual good style and during the mass, Miss Margaret Mulligan, of Summerside, cousin of the bride, sang a hymn appropriate to the occasion. The bridal party drove to Summerside and after partaking of dinner at the Queen Hotel, returned in the evening to the home of the brides father, Mr. Wm. Deigan, where a sumptuous supper was served to which all present did ample justice. Worthy of note was the arrival of the chaperons, who announced their coming by blowing horns, firing guns, and ringing bells. On arriving at the home they were invited in and kindly treated by the good host and hostess, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Deigan. They then departed with three ringing cheers for the happy bride and groom. Singing music and dancing were indulged in till the wee sma hours, when all departed to their homes, wishing Mr. and Mrs. Deigan a long, happy and prosperous journey through life.

—FAIRY GODMOTHERS "How long will the war last, monsieur?" asked the hotelkeeper. Two hundred soldiers were passing along the street on their way to the station, singing the "Marseillaise" of two hundred fellows, their furlough finished, returning to the front. "This war will last until Germany is beaten," I said. "The God send it may be soon," replied the woman, as she bent down to kiss her son. "I need to ask if she had someone at the front." "I have seen a lot of these furlough men (writes H. J. Greenwall in the Daily Express) the last few days. I came here on a train with several hundred of them, and all day today I have seen them in the street with their wives and children, enjoying in full their short leave. It is in Paris, however, where the normal life is less ruffled than in the provinces, that one sees the furlough men at their best. Any evening one can stand in the Rue d'Amsterdam, where a little wooden bridge leads from the St. Lazare Station into the street and see them trooping home from war. Their bronzed faces aglow, their uniforms faded from exposure to winds and rain, these gallant lads come home to their beloved Paris.

Smiles and Tears

"There he is; there's Gaston!" shouts a little woman excitedly; and Gaston is enveloped in an embrace that holds him tight, tight. "Eh, bien here I am," he smiles; but the little woman can only smile tears, roll down her face. Gaston tucks her arm beneath his and hugs and pats his cheek, while tears, happy ones off to the tube station and home. Another little group attracts attention. A pretty young woman is standing staring anxiously at the men that cluster across the gangway. A small boy tugs a baby. Suddenly a smile illuminates her face; she has seen "him." He pushes his way towards her, kisses her on either cheek, and in a moment his daughter is in his arm for the first time. A happy meeting; they all talk together, except the baby, who slumbers in her father's arms as they, too, hurry homeward.

FROCKS FOR THE AUTUMN WEAR

As usual a majority of the frock frocks for autumn wear are in dark blue, though there is a rumor that dark blue materials may be scarce for on. As usual, too, dark blue serge is first favorite, with gabardine a close second and taffeta, frilled soft silk and gros de Londres featured among silks. A new woolen material of the gabardine family called Gota cloth is considerably used, too, but the casual observer will class it as gabardine. Many combinations of material appear in these first general utility frocks; but as a rule the materials match in color if not in weave, one effect being the rule. A good deal is being done with light brown lovely shades with pretty tones or ranging into fawn and beige coloring. The modish browns shade on down through
