PROHIBITION FOR NEW BRUNSWICK.

A strong delegation from the Temperance Federation came over by special train from St. John and addressed the Government and members of the Legislature on the question of prohibition for New Brunswick. The speakers were accompanied by a large number of ladies who came to St. John in special cars. The speakers were all in favor of the Government bill, which provides for a vote of the people on the question of prohibition. The Government bill has the support of the Opposition and the Telegraph which argues that the Opposition have others measures dealing with the traffic. The Sun contends that the Government should be allowed to carry its measure without embarrassment from the Opposition, and that if it is successful it should be given every assistance. The matter is now before the House.

The Telegraph says the average intelligent New Brunswicker is in favor of the temperance reform, and that the Government will probably provide the opportunity for the people to express their views. The Telegraph concludes that temperance men in New Brunswick are in a much better position than they were a few years ago, when the most politicians, even those who were nominally for the Scott Act, were in the habit of telling the Temperance people that the Scott Act was not the question of the day, and that it was better to let it alone. The Telegraph says that the Scott Act was not a temperance measure, but was a measure for the protection of the liquor traffic. The Scott Act was a compromise between the friends of the liquor traffic and the temperance people, and it was the most unfortunate piece of legislation that could be passed. It was a compromise which satisfied no one. It was a measure which was smashed every time it was tested in the courts, and it was a measure which was never enforced in any city or town in the Province. The Scott Act was a measure which was never enforced in any city or town in the Province. The Scott Act was a measure which was never enforced in any city or town in the Province. The Scott Act
