Still with a fine chance of making the playoffs Prince of Wales tackle the Army squad in tonight's City Hockey League encounter at the Forum. The game is all important to the Collegians. By a victory they can move to within one point of the Navy team who were defeated last night by the Y and word from the College last night was that the team would go all out in order to gain a victory.

• • • •

But by no means are they holding their opponents, the Army lightly.True it is that the boys in khaki have yet to break into the win column but nevertheless in each and every time out they have shown vast improvement and despite the hopelessness of their making a playoff berth they will be seeking their opening victory tonight at the expense of the surprising P.W.C. team.

• • • •

Navy were forced to swallow their firest setback of the league in last night's tilt against the fast improving Y team. The victory was in the nature of an upset but the winners were full credit for their win. Navy could do little or nothing with the forechecking tactics employed by the winners and once the Y had run up their lead they were usually behind the eight-ball.

• • • •

But the game provided a good crowd of fans with fast, rugged action all the way. The Tars were in there fighting all the way. With the score 5-0 against them they showed they still had plenty of kick left as they shot their brace of counters in the matter of six seconds and but for the sensational work of Cudmore in the Y cage plus close checking tactics by the other members of the team they could have very easily pulled the game out of the fire.

• • • •

An speaking of this young Ivo Cudmore guarding the Y draperies, this youngster, still a junior deserves all the bouquets that can be thrown his way. The kid stopped a magnificent game last night in the entire sixty minutes. Time and again he pulled off saves that had rabid Navy supporters cheering him madly and at other times it was his slight figure that meant the differnce between victory and defeat.

• • • •

And he gave a display of courage also last night that would do credit to any goalie in the business. Early in the second period he suffered a bad cut close to the eye when hit by a wicked high drive. Going to the dressing room for repairs he insisted on coming back into the game.

• • • •

Come back he did to give a great display. His left eye was rapidly closing all during the third period but the youngster continued to kick them out with stick, hands and gloves at times diving right into the middle of wild scrambles around his net and he was still holding the fort as the final whistle went to give him and his team a well deserved victory.

Each hockey season produces its major casualties and accompanies disappointments. The mishap which sends Toronto's Syl Apps to the sidelines for the rest of the winter with a broken leg is the toughest setback suffered by a club this season.

• • • •

The Leafs will miss this starry performer who has established himself as one of the greats of the modern game. A clean and polished performer, Apps is often singled out for all-time, all-star rating by seasoned hockey observers.

• • • •

Art Ross once picked him ahead of Bill Cowley, and there are some who rate him as the peer of centre players. His loss under any conditions would be irreparable. With the manpower shortage what it is today, Leafs have suffered a terrific blow.

• • • •

If it had to happen, the circumstances might have been a lot worse. Apparently it was purely an accident. Everyone, including the fans, seem to be convinced of that. Ample proof of the spectators' convictions in this regard was offered by the chorus of boos which greeted the penalty to Jackson.

• • • •

Any time that Eddie Shore, boss of the Buffalo American League hockey team, feels like sending his goalkeeper, young Gordon Bell, up to the majors, he will find plenty of takers. The youngster has proven a real wizard in the Bison nets, having several shutouts to his credit.

• • • •

Gordie did not start his hockey career as a net-minder. When he was 12 years old, he played centre on a midget team in his home town of Portage la Prairie, but during a game, the team's goalie met with an injury and Master Bell took over the twin chore. He proved so adept at stopping shots from all angles that he has been played in that position ever since.

• • • •

At the age of 12 he goal-minded his team to the Manitoba midget championship and was in the nets last year when the Portage la Prairie team won the Memorial Cup, emblematic of the Canadian junior championship. He is but 17 years of age, which means that he will have another season of hockey before being called to the army, but he may report before receiving a call.

• • • •

It looks as though he will figure on his third championship team this year, for the Bisons have more than a passing chance of winning the American League honors. He has had seven shutouts already this season and is likely to make a record

• • • •

His father, while he never reached the majors, was a hockey player and taught his sons some of the finer points of the game. Gordon's brother, Joe, was with New York Rangers for a time this season, but gave up hockey to enlist in the navy. Gordon smokes the odd cigar, but has no use for cigarettes, and an occasional glass of beer is as far as he goes in an alcoholic way. In the summer he plays baseball and, like another great goalie, Tiny Thompson, he is a catcher and a good one.

• • • •

Little had been heard of Tommy Farr, one of two men to stay 15 rounds with Joe Louis, until a few weeks ago, when he broke into print by announcing the fact that he had been married for some time, but had kept the matter secret.Many wondered why he had not entered the armed services, figuring that he must be physically fit, after having had so much experience in the ring.

• • • •

But it so happens the Tonypandy Tommy made many attempts to enlist but was turned down each time, all of which shows that all men who can fight with their fists are not in physical condition to try their hand in a much more important bout. Here is how an English paper tells of his troubles in trying to join up:

• • • •

"Although physicians were skeptical about his eyesight, Tommy was accepted for service in the Royal Air Force. While still in training he had a hemorrhage and was discharged.

• • • •

"From an operation for throat and ear trouble, he went to a famous oculist for treatment for his eyes. Later lung trouble developed and Farr began to lose weight alarmingly. After visits to specialists and nursing homes, he tried to join a Welsh regiment but was rejected.

• • • •

"A week later he volunteered for duty on a mine sweeper. He was laughed out of the office because he had no experience on mine sweepers. Going to the Wembley recruiting office, he tried to enlist, but again was rejected.

• • • •

"His health breaking down again, he underwent two operations and was hospitalized for weeks. Full recovery from the effects of the operations took months longer. Unable to get into the armed services, Farr offered to help by boxing for service men stationed in out-of-the-way camps. That is wat he is doing today." There is no getting away from the fact that it is no fault of Tommy's that he is not in uniform.

Whitlock Shares Top Spot With R. Lamontagne

Two players, Whitlock of the Navy and Lamontagne of the S.D.U. team are tied at the top of the scoring in the City Hockey League it was disclosed last night. Both players have garnered 22 points, the former with 13 goals and 9 assists and the latter with eight goals and 14 assists. Lamontagne's 14 assists gives him the leadership in that department while his brother, in third place with twenty points leads the actual goal getters, having dented the twines no less than 16 times in the five games the Saints played.

Toss Of Coin Led To Calder's Ultimate Leadership Of National League

By ROBERT CLARKE

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

The course of a man's life isn't often dependent on the flip of a coin, but it was just such a gamble that set Frank Calder's feet on the road which resulted ultimately in his leadership of the world's greatest Professional Hockey League.

For the start of the story, turn the calendar back more than two score years. The setting is an English city. And young Frank Calder, born of Scottish parents, has made up his mind to travel overseas. But should Canada be his choice? or should it be Newfoundland? young Calder tossed a coin. And set out shortly afterwards for Canada.

That, then, was the moment fate chose to start Calder along the road that led to the Presidency of the National Hockey League.

Calder liked to tell of the history of the various N.H.L. Trophies which have resting places in his Montreal office. At one time one of the Trophies disappeared for several years. No one seemed to have the slighest idea what had happened to it.

"I found it, by luck, in a Montreal bowling alley," recalled Calder. "I just happened to drop in and imagine my surprise when I saw this lost N.H.L. Trophy being used by the alley owner as a water trough for his dogs."

One year, a number of players on a team which had won the Stanley Cup were riding in an automobile, Calder once related. "The car had to make a stop and the players bundled out. Whoever was holding the Stanley Cup set it down on the sidewalk. And then, when all the players hopped back in the car and drove off, the Stanley Cup was just left where it had been placed."

Calder laughed when he reached that point in his narrative.

"Some time later the players discovered that they didn't have the Cup with them. Frantically, they retraced their steps. And they found it sitting on the sidewalk just where it had been put down."

Y.M.C.A. Team Moves Into Second Place With 5-2 Victory Over Navy

Improving with every start Y.M.C.A. hockey team last night moved into second place in the City Hockey League standings as they skated to their second victory in three nights by defeating the Navy squad 5-2 in a scheduled game played in the University rink.

Holding the high-scoring Navy line of Whitlock, Milne and Blanchard scoreless throughout the struggle and back checking like leeches the winners raced into a 3-0 lead in the first period. They increased their margin to 4-0 during the middle canto and added their fifth counter early in the third session before the "Tars" broke into the scoring with two goals that came within six seconds of each other early in the final twenty minutes of play.

Y enjoyed a definite margin on the play all through the encounter, and richly deserved their victory. Navy could do little with the close-checking Y team and once they had piled up their 3-0 lead the issue was never very greatly in doubt.

As the game got underway both teams as had been promised opened up wide and for over eleven minutes play raged up and down the ice with both goalies pulling off sensational saves as attacking players skated right into their doorstep. Finally Y got their first goal, Woolridge firing the puck home from ten feet out as Jackson and Kane opened up the scoring chance by going deep into Navy territory. For the next six minutes it was nip and tuck again but Pud Whitlock, a tower of strength on the Y team both offensively and defensively finally worked his way into the clear to pick up Stewart's pass and drive the rubber into the nets to make it 2-0. The next Y goal and the last of the period was tinged with luck. Kane racing far over the Navy blueline made a pass to Jackson in front of the net only to have the rubber carom off a Navy defenceman's skate and into the cords. There were no penalties during the session.

Play was becoming more rugged as the second period got underway and players were left sprawling from bruising checks as the Navy tried in vain to beat the defensive system being thrown up by the winners. Four players went to the bench in quick order as the game roughened up but with the teams short neither squad could score. It was only a minute and forty seconds after the session got underway that Whitlock and Cudmore teamed up again and again it was "Pud" that sent the disc whistling into the cords from five feet out for the only counter of the period.

The winners again struck early in the third as three minutes and eleven seconds from the start Squarebriggs went in on Cudmore's pass to whip the rubber home and give his team a 5-0 lead. Navy still full of fight came roaring back to take the offensive and have the Y team desperately trying to stave off the four and five man rushes. Then suddenly the Tars struck. Breezing over the Y line McDonald whistled a perfect drive behind young Ivo Cudmore who was playing sensationally despite a bad cut suffered in the second. Six seconds later the same Navy player took a pass from Thomson to again score with a perfect drive. The Navy assault was lessened somewhat as McAdam was chased but when he returned the Y were again put back on the defensive. Penalties to Squarebriggs and McDougall in quick succession left the winners two men short but they managed to hold the fort until back at full strength.

For the final ten minutes of the game it was mainly the Y repeatedly turning back their opponents although Squarebriggs on a breakaway went right into close quarters only to shoot over the net to nullify the chance.

MONTREAL, Feb. 4 —(CP)— Frank Calder, President of the National Hockey League, died in hospital here today. He was 65.

Mr. Calder, who had been stricken with a heart attack while attending an N.H.L. meeting in Toronto a few days ago, was brought to hospital here from Toronto last night.

Only yesterday, the N.H.L. had made arrangements to have Mervin Dutton take Mr. Calder's place with the help of an advisory committee in the expectation that the president would be able to resume his office in May.

Although it was known that the attack that struck him in Toronto so suddenly had been a heavy one, news of his death shocked the hockey world that had believed the complete rest that had been ordered for Mr. Calder would bring him back to his position as head of the world's greatest professional hockey league.

Death came quickly this morning so quickly that members of the family had no time to reach his bedside.

NEW YORK, Feb. 4 —(CP)— Lester Patrick, manager of New York Rangers, said today "hockey will miss Frank Calder more than any of us realize right now," and paid tribute to the National League President who died in Montreal as "a gentleman in the true sense of the word."

Paul Thompson, coach and manager of Chicago Black Hawks, said "the game will miss him very much. In my 17 years in the N.H.L. I had always found Mr. Calder willing to help the younger players along."

Rangers And Hawks Tied 1-1

NEW YORK, Feb. 4 —(AP)— Playing a stirring but strictly Minor-League brand of hockey, Chicago Black Hawks and New York Rangers struggled to a 1-1 tie tonight before 11,211 spectators. It was the Rangers' 14th consecutive National Hockey League game without a victory.

One of the high spots was a brawl in which Red Mitchell, Chicago defenceman, collected 17 minutes in penalties all at once. He drew a minor for "roughing" with the Rangers' Phil Watson as they engaged in a brief flurry of fisticuffing, a major for drawing blood with a high stick, cutting Watson over the eye, and 10 more minutes for misconduct. It didn't do much harm, as the Rangers drew a flock of minor penalties on top of it.
