"JUNGLE BOOK" SCENES PROVIDE BIG THRILLS

—A small boy perches on a high tree trunk over a sluggish river. At a signal from a whistle he hurtles into the water and starts swimming with all his might for the opposite bank. Suddenly out of a cove appears a giant crocodile speedily pursuing the tawny-skinned boy. Watchers on both banks hold their breath as the race continues. At first, it seems as though the lad is outswimming the huge crocodile by only a few feet. But after breathless moments the boy wins the race.

The heroic boy is Sabu and the exciting moment is a scene in Alexander Korda's Technicolor production of Rudyard Kipling's "Jungle Road," the current attraction at the Capitol Theatre. The setting is the great man-made jungle which was constructed in Sherwood Forest, transformed to look like the woody, rockbound terrain of India.

Zoltan Korda directed "Jungle Book," and in the supporting cast are Patricia O'Rourke, Rosemary De Camp, Frank Puglia and John Qualen.

Bishop Kelly Presents His Library of 5,000 Books To St. Dunstan's University

The Oklahoma City Times of Aug. 24 carries a front - page story about a distinguished Prince Edward Islander, The Most Rev. Francis Clement Kelly, Bishop of Oklahoma City and Tulsa. Marking the occasion of the 50th anniversary of his ordination, Bishop Kelly gave away all his personal possessions, including his library which he is presenting to St. Dunstan's University. The paper quotes Bishop Kelly as follows:

"First of all, my library of more than 5,000 volumes, has been presented to the little college, St. Dunstan's in Charlottetown, Prince Edward Island, Canada, where I did my preparatory work for the priesthood. How I wished for books in those days! Then there's about $20,000 in cash which will help build the library in which the books will be housed."

Bishop Kelly was born on the Island and his mother and father lie buried there with other members of the family.

The grandson of an Irish political exile has come a long way since those days when he began his studies, to become the founder and head of the Catholic extension society, a member of the diplomatic corps of the Vatican, a friend of popes, kings and prime ministers.

At Versailles Peace Conference

Bishop Kelly was present at the Versailles peace conference. He was a friend of Premier Orlando of Italy, who last week emerged from obscurity under Mussolini to take the air over Rome's radio. He early brought Orlando and the Pope together to discuss and establish an accord to end the Pope's self - imposed imprisonment and establish a papal state. He worked with the oppressed in Mexico and negotiated with England in the name of the Vatican.

Tuesday he contemplated the state of the world.

"Would Pope Pius XII consider a seat at the peace table if invited?"

The bishop's answer was, "Primarily of course, that is a question which only the Pope himself can answer Recognition at the peace conference might prove embarrassing, but as the head of a European state, it is probable that he would think it his duty to accept."

The bishop feels that the way to world amity does not lie through arms. For him the way lies through prayer.

"It is most regrettable, for the sake of the world, that religion was left out of consideration at Versailles," he said. "It is still regrettable today that we are trying to do with secular arms what we can never do without spiritual arms. I am convinced that if we do not come back to prayer and the practice of religion in the world, that none of our other efforts will be worthwhile."

The bishop defines prayer as "closeness to God."

"You can't put it into words," he said. "No more than you can define the Presence, Religion must be accepted as something too great for our temporal mind's definition. If it were not, the Presence would be less than God, or we more than men."

This had been a lonely year, Bishop Kelly said A world torn by conflict, peoples who have neglected prayer, talks of another peace without God invited into the conferences.

The nights are long for a sick man whose heart beats perceptibly slower and slower but whose mind races ahead to tomorow. He lies awake long hours propped up for comfort, remembering the clear day 50 years ago, when, by special dispensation, he became a priest when just 22 years old; recalling how his mother slipped away to her own room to cry for joy when he came home to sing his first mass 50 years ago next Sunday; planning not all for days ahead but meeting each minute now as it arrives.

"I'll say a mass sometime today" he said, "whenever my doctor says I may. My friends and my priests will be arcund me to assist me and to step in if I should falter. If I am given more time to serve I shall go ahead each day just as I always have, doing that day's work If I had to do over again, I would not change one experience. Just living is enough."

(Bishop Kelly is a brother of Mrs.
