CHARLOTTETOWN, P.E.I.

BRADALBANE W. I.

The January meeting of the Bradalbane Village W I. was held on Tuesday, January 8th at the home of Mrs Lorne Seaman. In the absence of both the president and vice-president, Mrs. Lorne Seaman presided and opened the meeting by singing the Ode and repeating the Creed. Roll call was answered by eight members with "The first thing I can remember."

Minutes of last meeting were read, approved and signed. Some discussion took place as to whether the Institute women should scrub the school or not and it was decided that this matter be left with the trustees. The reports of the committees were given and Mrs. Cathol MacLeod sent her thanks to the members for a message of sympathy she had received.

On motion it was decided that 10 yards of flannelette be bought and donated to the Orphanage. Plans were made to pack a box as soon as possible, also for the Orphanage, parcels to be taken to Mrs. Woodside.

The following committees were then appointed: Sick, Mrs. Kennedy and Mrs. Hickox. School, Mrs. Murray and Mrs. Matheson. Lunch, Mrs. Seaman and Mrs. Matheson.

Next meeting to be held at the home of Mrs. Graham, on February 5th. Roll call to be answered by naming one member of the Federal Cabinet at Ottawa. Meeting closed by singing the National Anthem, after which a dainty lunch was served by the hostess and committee in charge.

Prinz Eugen, Not Bismark Sank The Battleship Hood

BOSTON, Jan. 24 —(AP)—The 42,100-ton British battleship Hood was sunk midway between Greenland and Iceland in 1941 not by the German battleship Bismarck, as generally supposed, but by the cruiser Prinz Eugen, the United States Navy said upon the Eugen's arrival here.

The 19,553-ton Prinz Eugen, largest German warship afloat, came into Boston harbor yesterday as an American prize.

The cruiser, one of the enemy units divided among Britain, Russia and the United States by a tripartite naval commission, was brought here by an American-supervised German crew for what the U S. Navy described only as "tests".

"The Prinz Eugen placed a direct shot on the Hood, blowing up her magazine and thus sinking her in one of the major losses of the British sea forces," a history of the 19,553-ton cruiser said.

Arrival of the Prinz Eugen also disclosed that the German naval High Command to the end of the war never understood why the Bismarck, after the battle with the Hood, May 24, 1941, swung south toward the coast of France and into the guns of the Royal Navy.

Three days later unmanoeuvrable after a 1,750-mile running fight with three battleships, two carriers, five cruisers and seven destroyers—in which all got a shot at her—she was sunk by a torpedo from the cruiser Dorsetshire.

All but 100 of her 2,400 officers and men were lost there, 400 miles due west of Brest.

Capt. A. H Graubart, of Los Angeles, American naval commander of the Prinz Eugen for the voyage here, revealed the German puzzlement today on the strength of talks with Grand Admiral Karl Doemitz at Flensberg last summer.

"The German Admiralty expected the Bismarck to return to Norway since after the battle with the Hood her supplies value for raiding in the Atlantic was lost," Graubart said.

I talked to Doenitz about it at Flensburg For some reason the German Admiralty did not know why the Bismarck turned south and ran into the British fleet."

LONDON, Jan. 24 — (CP Cable)—The Admiralty doesn't want to start any argument with the United States Navy, but just for the record, it said today that it thought the German super-battleship Bismarck and not the heavy cruiser Prinz Eugen sank H.M.S. Hood.

BRACKLEY SCHOOL CONCERT

The Brackley pupils presented their Christmas concert. It was largely attended by parents and friends. The school was tastefully decorated by the pupils and teacher. Mr. Samuel Good capably acted as chairman and the following programme was carried out:

Recitation, When Pa Shaves, by Brenton Newson.
Dialogue, A Minister's Mistake.
Exercise, This Is G.
Star Drill, by 8 girls.
Recitation, Poor Dear Susie, Gail Prowse.
Dialogue, Christmas Cake, Thelma Newson and Shirley Prowse.
Solo, Christmas. Melvin Prowse, encored, The Old Grey Mare.
Pantomime, Silent Night.
Chorus, Christmas Bells, by School.
Intermission. Sale of Apples.
Britannia Drill, 8 girls.
Recitation. Before Christmas, Melvin Prowse.
Dialogue, Almost Trouble.
Duet, At Mail Call Today, Shirley Bernard and Irene Newell. Encored, Bell Bottom Trousers.
Recitation, My Dollie, Frances Ronahan.
Jingle Bells, 7 girls.
Dialogue, Writing to Santa.
Closing, Joyce Bernard.
Chorus, Hurry Santa the School.

At the conclusion of the programme complimentary remarks were made by several parents and replied to by the teacher, Miss Lucy Carver. Santa Claus then arrived and in his usual jovial manner distributed presents to the pupils and their teacher. A very pleasant evening was brought to a close by the singing of the National Anthem.

Hollywood Flashes

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD, Jan. 25 —(AP)—Picture of a guy who doesn't know a bodice from a chiffon trying to talk to Loretta Young about feminine fashions.

"Where are skirts going?" I asked Loretta, who is a consistent candidate on anyone's best-dressed list.

"It doesn't matter," she said. "A woman should not follow the fashion as to length of skirts; she should wear them according to how they become her. If she has thin, tooth-pick legs, she would not wear them above the knee. If she has large calves, she should not wear them long."

Next questions: "Are you introducing anything revolutionary in 'the perfect marriage'?"

"No," she said, "because I'm playing the editor of a fashion magazine. And you will find that the women who know most about fashions dress simply and are more concerned with lines than anything 'revolutionary.' The women who appear over-dressed are those who have too many details —bows, feathers, jewelry, and so forth."

Edith Head, who designed Loretta's clothes for the picture, said the only items remotely revolutionary are the nightgowns.

"I designed them so they look more like dresses than nightgowns," she said. "Too many women don't give enough attention to their nightgowns because they figure only their husbands see them. They don't think of what would happen in case of a fire."

RADIO FINGER PRINTS TO TRACK CRIMINALS

LONDON, Jan. 24 —(CP)—A new weapon against international criminals—a world radio fingerprint system—may come into being as the result of a successful attempt to radio a fingerprint from London to Melbourne, Australia.

Scotland Yard officials, who have been conducting experiments along these lines for years, expect to hold conferences shortly with police representatives from other countries in order to set up the chain.

The fingerprint was sent through Cable and Wireless facilities to Melbourne in seven minutes and enabled Melbourne to establish identification.

One print only is sent, and is accompanied by a code message indicating the finger and classification of the print.

Boy Scout Christmas toyshops across Canada provided toys for thousands of needy kiddies during the Christmas season. Among the larger shops were those at Sherbrooke, Que., which supplied 600 children, Regina 800, and Saskatoon 1,000.

As a national service, the Boy Scouts of the 2nd Reigate Troop in Great Britain picked 65 tons of plums—and that doesn't include those they ate. The record day's pick was on V-J Day, when they picked 10,500 pounds. They could have picked more but the railway could not handle more shipments that day.

Scout Gerald Farrell of North Bay, Nfld., is a King's Scout, but he differs from the average run of King's Scouts. Gerald is totally blind. He belongs to a Scout Troop at the School for the Blind and is the second member of the Troop to gain this high distinction in Scouting. The former King's Scout is now a third year student at Dalhousie University.

A former Winnipeg Scout, serving with the Canadian Forces in Italy had the unique experience of teaching experienced mountain climbers a trick he learned as a Scout. The Scout, now a Major, was mountain climbing with a number of university professors near Padua. When it was necessary to rope the members of the party together on a steep climb, the Canadian Scout mystified the Italian professors by tying a bowline around himself with one hand, a trick commonly known to Boy Scouts. He had to demonstrate his method to the party and to each subsequent party he joined in.

Frank C. Irwin, Executive Commissioner of the Boy Scouts Association in Ontario, was guest of honour at a complimentary dinner recently to mark the completion of a quarter century as Executive Commissioner for the Province. He was presented with the Silver Wolf, the highest decoration for service in Scouting. Mr. Irwin as a boy, was a Scout in Moose Jaw and later became Executive Secretary for Saskatchewan. After spending some time with the Boy Scouts of America, he returned to Canada to accept his present position. He attended the coronation of King George V with a contingent of Canadian Boy Scouts in 1911.

More Elements Are Discovered In Atomic Search

(By The Canadian Press)

MONTREAL, Jan. 26 —Disclosure that neptunium and plutonium, the two man-made elements which came into being when Allied scientists worked to produce the atomic bomb, have been supplanted as the heaviest elements in the atomic scale by two new elements was made last night by Dr. J. S. Foster, professor of physics at McGill University.

Addressing the American Institute of Electrical Engineers, Dr. Foster, internationally known for his contributions in the field of nuclear physics, described briefly the experiments which led to discovery of Elements 93 (Neptunium) and 94 (Plutonium) and said further experiments brought Elements 95 and 96, apparently not yet named, within the limits of scientific knowledge.

"Research now is going on and I don't think we will stop there," he said. "It is hard to say what number we will reach."

Before the wartime experiments on the atomic bomb, uranium—Element 92—was the heaviest known to science. It was by firing a neutron into the nucleus of uranium 238 that Elements 93 and 94 were discovered.

Dr. Foster said complete understanding between scientists and statesmen was "absolutely essential" in the interests of world peace and complete understanding between nations on atomic energy was equally essential.

"If it takes a long time, as I have no doubt it will, we needn't become impatient," he said. "Scientists and statesmen must work together, and that is all there is to it. I don't believe that there is any great need for hurry. I think myself, that when people realize what atomic energy means and is there can only be one answer—peace."

Maritimers in Montreal

The Maritime Women's Club of Montreal, Incorporated held their usual monthly meeting in Tudor Hall, on Tuesday evening, January 22nd. This meeting was arranged by the Arts and Letters Committee under the chairmanship of Miss Erma Nelson.

Gordon Leclaire B.A., F.R.S.A., Litt. D. gave a recital of modern poetry with a background of music by Edna Marie Hawkins.

Dr. Leclaire began his recital with a short talk on the appreciation of literature in general from ancient to modern times. He then read poems by contemporary American poets under group headings of "Motherhood" "Prayer" Philosophy" and "Nature." These were followed by poetic selections from Maritime Authors including G.D. Roberts, Bliss Carmen and Margaret Furness MacLeod. He also read some of his works and selections from the writing of his wife, Zita Harris.

Edna Marie Hawkins again proved her versatility and artistry in her musical arrangement for each number. She also played as a solo number "Clair de Lune."

Mrs. A. D. Ross, the President, presided at the meeting introducing the artists, who in turn were thanked by Mrs. J. Stuart Foster.

SCOTTISH RECTOR GOES ON STRIKE

GREENOCK, Scotland, Jan. 24 —(CP)—Rev. J. Noel Lyth, Rector of St. John's Episcopal church, said in a New Year letter to his congregation here that he was on strike.

"I will neither marry nor bury you nor baptize your children unless your claim in terms of church-going is good This is not just a piece of fancy writing. I am on strike," the letter said.

"I hope that what I have to say will offend a good many of you if, being offended, you are also challenged to some serious thinking about the duties and obligations of church-people."

In an interview later Mr. Lyth said, "This church, like every other, has backsliders and it is my aim to give them a good electric shock."

The Mulberry Bush

by HELEN TOPPING MILLER

How had he ever thought that there was charm in this place? It was a jail! A fancy jail, with with ornate elevators and the parrot rattle of strange languages everywhere, he went; the slow movement of dark eyes, the frankly curious stares of brown children and Indians, the service that was a little too obsequious, the food that was good food but not steak broiled under a flame — why the devil couldn't he stop thinking about things like that?

It occurred to him with a sense of shock that never before had he spent three days just — thinking. Never before had he stopped to think at all. Life had been too full of things — things he had wanted, things to do, things that delight him — as Ginny had delighted him, and before that — there it was again, round and round.

Three days — and then four. No letter from Ginny. But he hadn't written, either. He was saving what he had to say until he held her in his arms. And first of all he would utter a pronunciamento, a bull, a white paper — anyway, a definite and final statement that this secret marriage stuff was out!

There was she — and too well he knew how lovely, how desirable she was, how altogether adorable. With that hair like a fine halo, and her fair skin, and her excitingly husky voice — and the way she wore her clothes! He'd seen men turning to glance at her in hard-boiled New York. Dangerous as the devil letting a girl like that run loose without a wedding ring to warn "Hands Off." And he hadn't liked his own situation particularly, either. All these fellows making smart cracks — and not being able to sock anybody without telling them the truth first.

He'd see that announcements went out the minute he got back —that would stymie all that stuff, and if Teresa Harrison didn't like it, that was just too bad, too. And then—but beyond that his naive conjecture did not go. The future had always taken care of itself; that it might not continue to do so did not occur to him. That there could be perverse forces, hostile winds, upheavals — that he himself was a perverse force, shattering where he believed himself to be passing lightly — Mike's volatile temperament could not come to a pause long enough to consider things like that.

And then on the fifth day come Bill Foster's letter with the expense check. It was enough not extravagnntly, enough, but he could get by.

The plane, winging on jade and amethyst air above jade and amethyst water, seemed fairly to stand still in midair. Miami was a white and glaring clutter of stucco and palm trees, vulgarly ornate yachts, blazing coral sand. And once he had written a lot of burbling stuff about that place!

Then darkness, and wings carrying north again. North, to where the chill winds would be prowling, and iron winter threatening, where gusts snatched up the sea and slapped it into snaring ridges where fogs hung low over hidden ports and night was hollow and cold, rather than haunted with warm stars. But he was going north—to Ginny!

He slept deeply for the first time in days and wakened to the gray fog and rain of a November dawn. The horizon was blurred with the sour smoke of a hundred factories, the taxi driver had a cold, but what of it? This was the field. An hour or two with Bill Foster tomorrow — tomorrow was Monday — or was it? It must be Monday. He had lost count of the days. He'd file some copy and draw some money from Bill, and then he'd be off—south again! The Susquehanna — and then the Delaware and the Severn slipping underneath, gray ribbons threading the gray earth. Then, through the midst, a tall finger of silver—the monument. Then the Potomac — and up there on the bluffs she would be. One flight — two flights — Mike was insouciant again, his grin expanded.

"Get my old pipe back, too," he told himself.

CARLETON W. I.

The Carleton Women's Institute met at the home of Mrs. Reg McFarlane for the January meeting. Meeting opened by singing the Institute Ode and repeating the Creed in unison. Eight members responded to roll call; one member rejoined. The minutes of the last meeting were read and approved. It was moved that a bill of $4.08 for Christmas treats for school children be paid. It was also decided that Institute advance, for the present, the sum of $15.36 towards the purchase of pens for the returned boys.

The sick committee reported several sick calls made, and the following new sick committee was appointed: Mrs. Gordon Ross, Mrs. S. Carruthers and Mrs. Boyd Lowther. Mrs. Gordon Ross kindly invited the members to her home for the February meeting. Roll call is to be answered by each member bringing a child photo of herself.

Plans for raising funds were discussed but were left over to the next meeting.

New Red Cross work was given out by the convenor. Collection amounted to $1.05.

A delicious lunch was served by the committee in charge, and after a social hour the meeting closed with the National Anthem.

HOME AND SCHOOL ASSOCIATION, GLENALADALE SCHOOL

The regular meeting of the Glenaladale Home and School Association was held on Jan. 13th with a large attendance of members and visitors.

Mrs. Basil Macdonald presided and called upon Reverend K. C. MacPherson to open the meeting with prayer.

Rev. K. C. MacPhenson then gave a review of Father Lord's book "Some Hints for the Guidance of Parents," which was very much appreciated and enjoyed by all. He stressed principally the part parents should take in encouraging wholesome recreation in the home, by taking on active part in games and in the other amusements of their children.

A brief discussion took place re entertainment for the next meeting. It was considered fitting that a special program should be put on for the February meeting to commemorate "Founder's Day. Mrs. W. B. Fitzpatrick, Mrs. Bruce MacAulay, Mrs. James Hughes were appointed on the program committee.

After a general discussion it was unanimously decided to purchase a radio for the High School.

The meeting adjourned by singing the National Anthem.
