"Bedtime Story" Is Delightful

—"Bedtime Story", which opened yesterday at the Capitol Theatre with Frederic March and Loretta Young co-starred, is a broad and unrestrained example of gay and giddy romance, of kicks combined with kisses, of a guy who tells bedtime stores about other women, and a girl who kisses and tells . . . another man to look her up in Reno. It's the love-and-laugh battle of the season, with March appearing as a man who won't take "no" for an answer, even when his wife says "yes" to some one else, with Miss Young appearing as a glamorous Broadway star who insists upon retiring into domesticity, even to the extent of a divorce and a re-marriage, only to discover her ex-husband, a playwright, has staged her own honeymoon so that what started out to be a romance ends up in a riot!

CANADA IS

been asked by Mr. Graydon.

He had not been invited to be present for what he thought "the best of reasons." His position was the same as that of the leaders of Australia, New Zealand, South Africa and some other countries. There were some 27 United Nations and if one leader were invited, all others might well expect to be invited.

"Am I expected to make a situation more difficult than it is or am I going to be as reasonable as possible and try to make it easier? he asked.

If he so desired, he could protest that he was not invited, said Mr. King, but "how far would I be helping the war effort of this country with a protest of that kind."

The proper course was to have confidence in Prime Minister Churchill and President Roosevelt and let the world know that they enjoyed such confidence. Another course would lead to disaster.

It was wrong to assume that because Canada was not represented at Casablanca the Dominion had no part in the decisions reached there. No officer enjoyed more fully the confidence of the British General staff than Canada's overseas army commander, Lt.-Gen. A. G.L. McNaughton, Mr. King said.

Decisions reached by Mr. Churchill and Mr. Roosevelt were not suddenly arrived at during the conferences. They were the result of long planning and consultation among the chiefs of staff and other technical advisers.

When the House met today Mr. King tabled copies of an exchange of notes with the United States providing a formula for the post-war liquidation of United States-constructed defence projects in Canada.

In a subsequent question, John R. MacNicol, (Prog. Con. Toronto Davenport) revealed that a new highway from Notekwin in northern Alberta, to Providence, N.W.T., a distance of about 300 miles, is being constructed by the United States.

Mr. MacNicol asked if this road, in addition to the Alaska highway, would be covered by the exchange of notes and Mr. King replied that all such projects were covered.

Mr. King said Mr. Graydon had devoted too much time in his address to references to the Winnipeg National Convention of the Progressive Conservative party.

"I believe the country is still much more interested in the war, and the effective prosecution of the war and parliament devoting its time mainly to those considerations that are vital as respects the war, than it is in the platform which was drawn up by my honorable friend and his friends at Winnipeg, and his presentation in the House," said Mr. King.

The Prime Minister defended the work of wartime boards set up by the government, although he said unsuitable men should be "let out of the administration as rapidly as possible."

It would be hard to find a body of men rendering finer service than those now assisting the government.

Because of the successes which had attended allied arms, Mr. King said, he thinks that in the mind of "a great many people" there is the belief that this year would see the end of the war.

"It is not for me to try to discourage optimism in the mind of anyone; I think we need all we can get in the way of support for our continued efforts.

But there could be no greater mistake in the world than to believe that we have advanced any further than this, that the allied and the Axis powers are a little more evenly matched than they have been at any time heretofore."

"The power of Germany remains greater, I believe, than anyone in this chamber can begin to comprehend, and that power has to be destroyed before anything in the nature of the liberation of the countries that have been oppressed can commence. . .

"This war may be and probably will be much longer than any one of us begin to comprehend; and unless we direct our energies primarily to seeing to it that first and foremost we do those things necessary to bring it speedily to a conclusion, we are not going to help ourselves or any of the Allied powers."
