GLADYS TAKES A HAND

Chapter 19

Dora found her aunt in the farmhouse kitchen tying an apron over the black cloth dress she always wore on Sunday (Aunt Maude had come to feel, as she grew older, that black broadcloth of a certain quality, and prosperous respectability, went hand in hand. When one dress wore sufficiently to descend to second best, another took its place, made as much like the forme as possible. The result was a certain type—and Dora never ceased to dislike anything made of black broadcloth all through her life.)

"We'll all be here for supper so I want you to help," she explained. "Heaven only known why Gladys took it into her head to come out to the farm today, but she insisted just as Jessie came to call. What have you cooked?"

Dora began searching closets. She had made another dainty supper for her father, her guest and herself but there was not enough for the three unexpected arrivals. Aunt Maude followed, looking over her shoulder.

"Hum—so you made a cake," she exclaimed. "Well, we'll have that. My land, what a rich one! You must have used all the eggs in the house. My land whipped cream! You do treat yourself well out here, I must say. Now I know why the milk money was so small this week."

Dora turned dead white.

"Aunt Maude, I never use any—only today, because Morton was to come"—her voice stuck half-way in her throat from sudden nervousness so she could not finish the sentence.

Aunt Maude finished it for her. The lady had a habit of doing this with everyone, as soon as she knew or thought she knew, what the other person was about to say.

"Morton coming—oh, so he's here? Does he come often?"

"Last Sunday," Dora confessed, as though she were confessing a crime committed then and concealed all week.

"Hum!"

Nothing more was said. Nothing more could be after a single syllable uttered in such a tone. Aunt Maude really didn't mean to be cross, she was somewhat annoyed at Gladys' unexpected behaviour; she saw no earthly reason why she had to be dragged away from a warm house for a damp drive through muddy roads. She couldn't understand Gladys lately at all.

But Dora lived always under real or imagined disapproval. She worked hurriedly and nervously now, and wondered whether she would be lectured for not getting more of the farm house cleaned.

At dusk Gladys arrived, one arm through Jesse's one linked with Morton who looked slightly uncomfortable. Gladys was in great spirits.

"When are you moving out this year?" Jim asked during the meal.

"Not for ages. I hope," Gladys replied.

Nevertheless, the following Saturday the big family carriage drove up toward dinner time. Gladys was in it, with Grandma White rolled in shawls and rugs, and three great trunks strapped on behind.

"Mother wants you to take the light wagon in at once, Uncle Jim," Gladys said cheerfully. "And bring her and a lot of boxes."

PPeter appeared.

"Hello! Why, you weren't even thinking of this when I left," he exclaimed. "How about that party tomorrow afternoon?"

"I'm tired of parties," Gladys answered briefly. "I thought it would be nice to come out in the country. It's so hard for you father to drive out and back every day father."

"Well—" Peters tones were doubtful. But he began to be pleased at once. "Well, that's a good girl. Now help Grandma down."

"Good girl—she'll have me dead of pneumonia in this damp house," the old lady croaked from somewhere inside her pile of blankets. "I know why she's so anxious to get out here."

But if she knew she refused to tell. Gladys was apparently blissfully happy. She sent Dora to make a fire in the old lady's room, and sang loudly and cheerfully as she unpacked her own trunks. She worked hard all afternoon helping her mother untie blankets and sheets and unpack the barrels of china. The efficient Aunt Maude had things so arranged that moving from farm to city was never a great deal of work.

By Sunday dinner they were all settled. After the meal Dora walked out into the garden, wondering whether any more bulbs were up, as Morton rode up to the gate.

"Hello, here I am again," he called. "Gladys asked me to her place today, but I'd much rather come out and see you."

Dora began to explain the change of plans.

"Hello Morton!" Gladys herself called from the doorway. "Knew you were coming so I followed you out here! You can't escape me, villain." This in movie melodramatic manner. She came down the path dressed up and smiling. "Will you two invite me on your walk today?"

Tomorrow—Gladys Gets Her Hand In.

Oil Light Beats Electric Or Gas

BURNS 94 PER CENT AIR

A new oil lamp that gives an amazingly brilliant, soft, white light, even better than gas or electricity, has been tested by the U. S. Government and 35 leading universities and found to be superior to 10 ordinary oil lamps. It burns without odor, smoke or noise—no pumping up; is simple clean safe. Burns 94 per cent. air and 6 per cent. common kerosene (coal-oil).

The inventor, G. A. Johnson, 216 Craig St., W., Montreal, is offering to send a lamp on 10 day's FREE trial, or even to give one FREE to the first user in each locality who will help him introduce it. Write him today for full particulars. Also ask him to explain how you can get the agency, and without experience or money make $250 to $500 per month.

Sulphur Clears A Pimply Skin

Apply Sulphur as Told When Your Skin Breaks Out

Any breaking out of the skin on face, neck, arms or body is overcome quickest by applying Mentho Sulphur. The pimples seem to dry right up and go away, declares a noted skin specialist.

Nothing has ever been found to take the place of sulphur as a pimple remover. It is harmless and for a small jar of Mentho Sulphur inexpensive. Just ask any druggist and use it like cold cream.

Modern Medical Views on Alcohol

(By Dr. J. C. Houston, Charlottetown.)

IV

THE EFFECT OF ALCOHOL ON BODY TEMPERATURE

We have heard the saying that one takes whiskey in winter to make him warm and in summer to keep him cool. There may be more truth in that remark than you think. We must distinguish between deep temperature and surface temperature. The deep temperature of the body varies very slightly in health and it is controlled by the heat centre. The surface temperature varies considerably according to atmospheric conditions and the amount of clothing a person is wearing, etc. Alcohol causes the skin to become flushed and there is a feeling of warmth on the surface. More heat evaporates from the body and in this there is a slight tendency to lower the deep temperature when the surface temperature is raised. Alcohol also exercises a paralysing effect on the heat centre and this is the reason why it should never be taken while exposed to cold. Arctic explorers were the first to learn this fact. The heat centre acts in this way. You feel the air somewhat chilly. A message to that effect goes to the heat centre and an order goes out which causes the skin to contract "goose flesh" we call it. Or we sit in a cold draft. This time a more urgent message is sent in and an order goes out which causes the muscles to twitch. You shiver with the cold. You can see what valuable signals they are and what may happen if that heat centre is put out of business by alcohol. Hence the danger of taking a drink to warm you up while exposed to cold but alcohol does undoubtedly help to restore the natural heat of the body after exposure and may be so used to advantage.

Then there is the effect of alcohol on the race. This is a big question and one that is still under consideration. Suffice to say that experiments, which have been conducted on lower animals show that alcohol always has a bad effect on the offspring and the effect is seen in several generations. There is also some strong evidence to show that there is a striking relationship between idocy, imbecility, epilepsy and other nervous diseases and alcoholism. One writer in medicine refers to the case of a man who scarcely knew the taste of liquor, and who became the father of four healthy children. Then he became prosperous, organized a wine cellar and became a "bon vivant". Two more children were born, both of whom developed epilepsy.

Another important social relationship of alcohol is that of sexual immortality and the venereal diseases. Alcohol and sexual vice go together and I have only to mention the fact that you may realize what a far reaching question this is and what terrible results may follow in the trail of alcoholism.

Lastly there is that peculiar property which some drugs possess of producing an appetite for themselves. Although alcohol is put in this class with morphine, cocaine nicotine and other less common, doctors in charge of institutions where drug habitues are treated tell us that a man will crave for his tobacco far more than his whiskey and that a patient suffering from acute alcoholism in any form, such as, for instance, delirium tremens, commonly called D. T.'s can be treated by first withholding the use of alcohol in any form without any ill effects whereas it is not safe to suddenly refuse all morphine from a morphine fiend or cocaine from a cocaine fiend.

Nevertheless we must admit that there is a certain craving for alcohol in those who habitually use it especially in persons of a nervous temperament and also in young people (boys in their teens) whose will powers are not fully developed. Two classes by the way, who should never taste alcohol. Habitual drinkers will all acknowledge this for I have never yet met the man who would not hate to see his son take his first drink of whiskey before he has grown into full manhood. I once heard a learned Judge of our Province say (and he wasn't a teetotaller by any means) that he would prosecute the man who would sell his son his first bottle of booze.

Some one may be wondering if alcohol in moderation tends to shorten or prolong life. The Advisory Committee went into this question of the effect of alcohol on longevity very thoroughly and this is their report in brief. "That the death rate is lower and the expectation of life longer in total abstainers."

So much for alcohol as a drug.

POTATO SEED TREATMENT

The time of soaking seed tubers in corrosive sublimate solution can be materially lessened if the potatoes are first thoroughly wetted and then kept moist for a day, according to a circular by R. T. Hartman of the Pa. Dept of Agr. The moisture starts germination of the scleratis of Rhizoctonia and the fungicide then kills them very promptly. After wetting, the length of time for treatment in the 4 oz. to 30 gal. solution is given as from thirty minutes to one hour. When using corrosive sublimate in treating seed tubers, it is advisable not to use the same solution more than three times without the addition of an ounce of the material in order to keep the strength of the fungicide at the proper strength.

"SIX MONTHS AGO"

"It's hard to realize that six month ago I couldn't walk across the floor and now I am so well!"

"I have never been very strong but the heat last summer was too much for me. This and the fact that my husband was out of work and I had to work day and night to keep from starving, left me a physical wreck. Luckily my husband was able to get a good job just when I had to go to bed. I tried everything I could think of to get strong, but each day I seemed to be getting weaker and weaker. I was reduced to a skeleton. I couldn't eat or sleep. I had no strength left and finally I was so weak that in trying to cross the floor one day I collapsed. I was so ill and weak that I didn't care whether I lived or died. And then I heard about that marvellous preparation Carnol! A friend of mine had used it with wonderful results and as it had done so much for her, I decided to try it. The results were nothing less than miraculous. In two weeks I was able to get up and walk about the house. My appetite had returned. I was actually hungry. I could sleep when I went to bed, something I had not been able to do for months. I have already taken six bottles of Carnol and I am still taking it. I weigh more today than I ever weighed before in my life. I sleep like a child. I am never tired and my skin is as clear and my cheeks as rosy as a girl's. I bless the day I heard about Carnol." Mrs. K., Toronto.

Carnol is sold by your druggist and if you can conscientiously say, after you have tried it, that it hasn't done you any good, return the empty bottle and he will refund your money. 3-122
