Trial Of Medium Is Source Of Worry To Judge

By FRANK LOWE
Canadian Press Staff Writer

LONDON, March 30—(CP Cable)—Rheumatic ghosts and amorous spirits are cluttering up the dignified precincts of the "old Bailey" Court here. Leading them is an animated slab of ectoplasm who answers to the butler-like name of Albert and occasionally gives a raucous rendition of "South of the Border.'

Confusing?—Well, you haven't anything on the judge who for more than a week has been attempting to inject a little reality to the trial of Mrs. Helen Duncan 40-year-old medium charged with pretending to exercise conjuration—an offence under the 200-year-old Witchcraft Act. But all that happens is that no sooner is one ghost laid than another pops up in testimony.

So far the spiritualist and her supporters have held the floor. That is, with exception of Lieut. Stanley Raymond Worth, the man who first sent police hot foot after Mrs. Duncan and her mystic mates on a charge that he was defrauded at a seance.

Asked why he became suspicious of Mrs. Duncan, Worth gave the purely masculine reason that he thought her "too fat." That, however, failed to satisfy the concepts of British justice so he continued by saying Mrs. Duncan brought forth a spirit all right but it was an objectionable variety who in conversation called forth an insulting name.

He said the spirit—which is Albert in this strange case—materialized from ectoplasm exuding from the eyes, ears and nose of the medium.

Mrs. James Rust said Mrs. Duncan brought back the spirit of her husband. Asked how she knew him she said she felt his hand, the knuckles of which were gnarled with rheumatism.

She said also that the spirit kissed her and added with a nostalgic sigh "I would know my husband's kisses anywhere."

Hannen Swaffer, dean of Fleet Street journalists, testified that 12 years ago he tied Mrs. Duncan with 40 yards of sash cord and manacled her with regulation police handcuffs "but she was free in three minutes and not even Houdini could do that."

Albert was credited with untying her.

Booklet Issued On The 8th Army

LONDON, March 31—(CP)—Born at a critical time in Britain's fortunes, the 8th army today is Britain's most famous fighting formation and the War Office has saluted its triumphs with publication of its history, a booklet called simply "the Eighth Army."

This army was the child of the army of the Nile which, under Gen. Wavell, destroyed the Italian army in Libya, only to be brought to the brink of destruction itself by a German counter offensive launched when the British force had been weakened to reinforce Greece.

Th 8th army was organized in September, 1941. Its history extends from this time to the occupation of Tripoli in January 1943 after which it became part of the 18th army group, its independent mission of driving alone across the desert completed.

MORE CARS, TRUCKS

FREDERICTON, March 30 —(CP)— Tabled in the Legislature, the annual report of the Public Works Department shows that the number of automobiles and trucks operated in New Brunswick increased from 36,924 in 1942 to 38,507 last year despite gasoline and tire restrictions.

Their flying training completed, these R.C.A.F. aircrew graduates are taking a "duty fitness" course at a winter station high in the Laurentians to ready themselves for the rigors of operational flying overseas. The temperature drops far below zero but they are out every day and like it. Montreal is little more than an hour away but the lads reject their 48-hour leave passes when their turn comes around. The Experts Say

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

OTTAWA, March 2 —(CP)— You can't win the war when you're sick in bed, nor can you do any one of the many pleasant things people with vim enjoy. Take a tip from the factory assembly line, Dr. L.B. Pett of Nutrition Services says, for Canadian factory canteens know that to keep their workers well they must serve plenty of protective and attractive food.

Here's what industrial canteens serve for lunch: meat, fish or an alternate like beans; fruit or vegetable, preferably both; milk in some form- -as beverage, soup or pudding. It is not only the women with wrenches and their brothers on the assembly line who need these foods in their lunches, Everyone should have them.

LIVER LOAF: The remark, "Oh, I don't like liver...I never eat it," is a common one and it is a pity because liver is good to eat when it is well cooked and attractively seasoned. It is also a rich source of iron, one of the best food elements for combating "war nerves," and also of thiamin, part of the B complex of vitamins, which helps maintain normal weight.

A receipe from the Agriculture Department home economists suggests a liver loaf to tempt finicky appetites:

Cover sliced liver with boiling water and let stand for a few minutes. Wipe dry, remove any fibrous parts and put through the meat chopper. To each cup of chopped liver add 1 cup of bread crumbs, 1 egg, 1-4 cup grated raw carrot, 1 tablespoon salt, 1-4 teaspoon celery salt, 1-2 teaspoon pepper. Mix well and pack in greased loaf tin. Bake in moderate oven, 350 degrees, for one hour.

This loaf can be served with a well-seasoned sauce or gravy and is delicious sliced cold for use in the lunch box.

LENT WILL soon be ending but before Easter there are many meals at which fish or sea food make a welcome main dish. . .baked scallops and lobster salad are delicious at either lunch or supper when prepared according to these Fisheries Department receipes;:

BAKED SCALLOPS: Place one pound of uncooked scallops in a greased baking dish and pour over them the following sauce: 3 tablespoons melted butter, 3 tablespoons flour blended in with the butter; add 1-2 teaspoon salt, 2 cups warm milk added and all cooked till smooth and thick stir constantly.

Sprinkle dry, sifted bread crumbs over the tops of the mixture and dot with butter. Bake in hot oven, 450 degrees Fahrenheit, for 10 minuets, or until the scallops are a milky white. This serves six.

MOULDED LOBSTER SALAD: 1 tablespoon gelatin, 1 cup chopped celery, 2 cups flaked lobster, cooked or canned, 3 tablespoons cold water, 1 teaspoon salt, 1 1-2 tablespoons lemon juice, 3-4 cup mayonnaise, 1-4 cup Chili sauce or similar relish, 1 tablespoon horeradish.

Soak the gelatin in the cold water for five minutes and dissolve in boiling water. Add the mayonnaise and fold in the other ingredients. Mould in utensils which have been dipped in cold water. Chill in refrigerator and unmould on lettuce. This serves six.

ORIGIN OF PRIVATE

The word private- -lowest army rank- -was the name originally given to soldiers hired by feudal barons in their private wars.

Wartime Speeds Study Of French

MONTREAL, March 31 —(CP)— Montrealers who stored their French verbs in the attic with their high school diplomas today are dusting off test books and going back to school.

That's the report of night school and business college officials interviewed here who say the usual demand for French lessons has increased with four years of war.

War workers, men and women in the armed forces, secretaries, businessmen and housewives are among the students. The teachers range from McGill University professors to the correspondence school texxt book.

Instructors say their pupils base the bilingual urge on wartime living which brought many into new jobs and environments. Students, averaging from 18 to 25 years old, claim the ability to speak French and English will make for better jobs now and after the war.

"It's purely a commerical proposition with most of them," says one Montreal business college, which reports "a noticeable increase in the continual demand for night classes in French conversation."

Most students in the classes are war workers, the majority women who say they can "get along better" with a knowledge of both languages.

The Sir George Williams College, sponsored by the Y. M. C. A., has stepped up its French classes to 15 courses, ranging from elementary and business French to advanced work in French culture and letters. The student list for day and night courses includes 1,820 men and 1,482 women. Most popular courses is French conversation.

"Our pupils are young men and women in the armed forces and in business," says one instructor. "A lot were brought to Quebec by the war and they feel they should learn the language here to reach a better understanding of French Canada."

McGill University's French-English translation course has 243 students, compared with 12 four years ago when the course was started by the Montreal Translators' Society.

Now the course is carried on at night in co-operation with the Society. Students include teachers, bank clerks, translators, secretaries, 80 per cent of whom are women in their mid-twenties. Most say they continue their studies to aid them in their present jobs and to enable them to find better ones after the war.

English-speaking servicemen in Montreal take advantage of four courses in French offered by the Canadian Legion. They are among more than 18,546 members of the armed forces in Canada who registered with the Legion for French tuition since 1939.
