World Series Players To Get Attractive Bonus

NEW YORK, Oct. 10 (AP)—The winning New York Yankees and the losing Brooklyn Dodgers began scattering for their homes today to await final World Series cheques from baseball commissioner A. B. Chandler.

Yankee officials also began the painful task of returning some $700,000 to fans who bought tickets to unplayed sixth and seventh games at the stadium.

Although exact figures will not be known for several weeks, it is estimated that each full-share Yankee will receive close to $5,800 for the part he played in humbling the National Leaguers, and that each Brook will be saved to the extent of $4,100. That is nice save even after taxes.

The happy Yanks, who survived everything except fire and flood in their limping progress toward a 12th world championship, held a colossal victory celebration last night. Manager Casey Stengel contradicted a report that he might not be back next year because of ill health.

"Nothing to it," said old Casey. "Why, I'm so healthy that I'm the only guy on the club who hasn't had a doctor all year."

Casey is working on a two-year contract calling for $40,000 a season. It would cause no surprise if co-owner Dan Topping and Del Webb should tear that one up and reward their hand-picked pilot with another, reading, say, $50,000 a year.

catches by Duke Snider in centre field.

Fall In Clutches

The same Snider, by his awful ineptness at the plate in the first four games, brought another shower of criticism down on Shotton's grey dome. Besides tying a World Series record by striking out eight times, the luckless rookie hit into a tragic double play in the midst of a seven-hit, four-run Brooklyn rally in the fourth game.

But Snider was not the only Dodger to fall in the clutches. The playoff brought out a striking speed become evident in the last game. Of eight pinch-hitters sent in by Shotton, five struck out—three of them in succession in the last game.

It is an extremely young Brooklyn team, and the consensus is it will top the National League for another year or two, until the Phillies find the pitching to take over. But the Brooks never found a few long-ball hitters before the 1950 race opens.

The series demonstrated clearly that the speed becomes a secondary factor under certain circumstances. The young Dodger have speed to burn, whereas the Yankees are, if anything, on the heavy-footed side. But the Brooks never found a time they could run the bases with any prospect of gain, and actually stole only one sack to their opponents' two.

Shotton Under Fire

Naturally, most of today's second-guessing was directed at Burt Shotton. Brooklyn's 65-year-old guiding hand. The opinion is not unanimous that Burt will be back. Loss of the playoffs in five games and especially the final sad rout of his strong-arm young pitchers by a Yankee club of only moderate power, could only have been a sharp blow to Shotton's ego. Rickey, who in the spring called the Dodgers "the greatest team I ever put together."

Brooklyn fans, looking back at the massacre, faulted Shotton on numerous counts, but first and foremost for his kindness in permitting third baseman Ralph Branca to pitch to left-handed Johnny Mize in the ninth inning of the third game.

That undoubtedly was the turning point of the series. Mize's two-run smash off the right wall, followed by Gerry Coleman's hit to clinch the victory, finally broke the playoff wide open after nearly three full games of phenomenal pitching.

From there on, the Brooklyn throwers simply didn't have it. Even the remarkable Joe DiMaggio, who could beat out only one questionable hit in the first four games, found the Dodger pitching staff were yesterday and would have had two extra-base hits, besides his home run, but for sensational

SANT JOHN, N. B., Oct. 10—Saint John Main Brace won the Maritime senior softball championship today by swamping Halifax Zwickers 18-2 in the second game of a doubleheader. Halifax took this afternoon's first game 4-3, knocking the series at 1-1. Main Brace edged Zwickers 11-10 in yesterday's opener.

Wind Up Series In Five Games With Smashing Assault

Saturday's Game
BROOKLYN, Oct. 10 (AP)—The "pitchings" World Series of modern times came to a smashing end today as New York Yankees smashed out 10 hits—four of them ringing extra-bases—to subdue the Dodgers 6-4 and pull within a single victory of the winners' share.

In two big innings, the fourth and fifth, the American League champions doubled two Dodger pitchers for all their run on two singles, three doubles and a three-run triple by their "Golden Boy", Bobby Brown.

Then, after the home team had rallied with seven singles in an amazing sixth chapter to rout starter Ed Lopat and reduce their deficit to two runs, the Yankees sat back behind remarkable relief pitching by Alie Reynolds to clinch their 3-1 lead in the play-off.

From the time he took over from Lopat with the tying run on base and two out in the sixth until he struck out the final two Dodgers to wind up the game, Reynolds did not permit another Brook to reach first. The 10 men he faced went down as though pole-axed.

Thus the sturdy righthander from Oklahoma had in 12 1/3 innings of World Series pitching, including his brilliant 1-0 victory in the opener at Yankee Stadium, surrendered just two harmless hits to the National Leaguers.

The Yanks, in gaining up on Negro Newcombe, Brooklyn's top Dodger fireballer, for three doubles and knocking his Jerry Coleman, in the fourth inning, tied a series record. No club ever has bashed more two-baggers in one frame.

Newcombe, who was pitching with only two days' rest after his brilliant but losing effort on Wednesday, didn't have what it took to halt the Yanks Saturday. The first two hits to face him hit safely, and he sweated through a 20-minute batter before he retired the side.

In the fourth Bobby Brown, the day's slugging hero, pounded a double into left, Gene Woodling drew a walk on four pitches and Cliff Mages delivered his first hit of the series, a bruising double into the left field corner which counted both Yanks.

Manager Burt Shotton didn't yank Big Don at that point. He let him pitch to face Coleman, and the latter fouled out. But then Lopat, himself, poled the clincher against his mound rival, a screaming double against the left centre field barrier. That made it 3-0, and was enough for Newcombe.

Joe Hatten took over with two out and ended the inning without further scoring.

Hatten opened the fifth by walking Tommy Henrich. Yogi Berra singled for his first hit of the series, a bruising double. Gene Hermanski's throw-in went over third baseman Eddie Miksis for an error.

That brought up the ailing Joe DiMaggio, who was deliberately put on base on four balls. The next batter, Brown, slashed a drive down the right field line. By the time the runners advanced, three Yankee runners were across and Brown was on third.

Hatten finally retired the next three batters and his successors, Alie Reynolds and Joe Banta, kept the Bombers in check the rest of the way.

Up to the sixth inning the crafty Lopat held only allowed one hit. But the frame he fell apart. Pee Wee Reese led off with a single into short center. Billy Cox hit for Miksis and laid down a roller to the left of the mound which went for a hit. Duke Snider followed and hit into Alie Reynolds, Phil Rizzuto to Henrich, leaving the Dodgers with a man on third and two out.

The next five Brooks, Jackie Robinson, Gil Hodges, Luis Olmo, Roy Campanella and Hermanski, each rapped one out. The seven hits in the inning tied another World Series mark.
