

CROSS WORD PUZZLES ARE THE LATEST CRAZE

Everyone Is Working Them. Everyone Is Talking About Them.

After looking over the various collections of cross word puzzles now available, we have selected as the most satisfactory for our readers THE CROSS WORD PUZZLE GAME here pictured. It possesses the great advantage of permitting several people to work on different puzzles at the same time.

All other collections of puzzles are bound together so that only one person can work on them. In this delightful game, each player can work on his own puzzle and try to solve it before the others. There are simple puzzles for the younger children, more involved ones for older children and very intricate ones for grown-ups.

Cross Word Puzzles are fun to solve but they also are of value from an educational standpoint. They enable young and old to become familiar with new words, thus enlarging the vocabulary and improving the spelling. Both of these results are obtained unconsciously and do not in anyway interfere with the fascinating pleasure of working out the puzzles. Try them. You'll be delighted.

MUSKRAT FARMS (From the Vancouver, B. C. Daily Province).

The officials of the Provincial Game Conservation Board report that considerable interest is being displayed in various parts of the province in the direction of raising muskrats. A number of muskrat farms have been started this fall and the industry bids fair to reach considerable proportions.

It is said that the finest muskrats in the world inhabit the Fraser Valley. In addition to carrying beautiful coats, they are also noted for their mild and gentle dispositions and amenability to becoming domesticated. This, of course, makes them easier to raise. Some of the fur farmers have discovered that it is unnecessary for the animals to have more than enough water to drink, and that, like ducks and geese, they can be raised at a distance from any pond or stream.

A striking example of "dry" farming is afforded by the experience of Mr. True Oliver of Ladner. He has fifteen or twenty of these interesting rodents in a pen in his back yard. He is not quite certain of the number as there have been several additions within the last few months. They are only furnished with an ordinary pan full of water and seem quite satisfied and happy. They consume considerable quantities of parsnips, carrots, etc., and curiously enough are fond of salt.

According to Mr. Oliver they are charming pets. Apparently it would be quite possible to raise them in any back yard in Vancouver, like chickens. A number of other residents of the valley are also beginning to raise them as well as many ranchers in the interior. Mr. E. Mallory of Sàrdis, a fruit man, has some twenty-seven rats in his pond. Mr. Butler, secretary of the Game Board states that there are at present 110 fur farms in the province. Yard/ should be provided for These include, in addition to musk-rats, mink, beaver, martin and fox. He points out that anyone going into the business must first secure a permit for which, however, no fee is charged, as the board desires to know that certain conditions are complied with in connection with the proposed colony, which is also subject to governmental inspection at all times. There is, however, every desire to encourage the industry, under proper conditions.

THE BROOD SOW (Experimental Farm Notes)

At the Experimental Farm, Nappan, the eleven Yorkshire sows kept for breeding purposes for 1922 dropped seventeen litters within the year with an average of 11.7 pigs per litter and raised an average of 9.4 per litter. The eleven sows consumed 20,075 pounds of meal at a cost of $2.80 per ton, 3570 pounds skim-milk at $4 per ton, 8679 pounds roots at $3.27 per ton and were on pasture 3 months each, during the season at a charge of 50 cents per sow per month, making a total cost for feed of $367.07 or an average cost of $33.37 per sow per year. These sows raised 159 young pigs to six weeks of age at a feed cost of $2.31 per pig. The average market value per pig at six weeks was $6.25 (selling them as feeders not as pure-breds for breeding purposes, otherwise the value would have been $10 at six weeks) leaving a net profit over feed cost of $3.94 per pig. In other words, the average profit per sow over feed cost was $56.90 or for the eleven sows $625.94. If one wishes to gain profitable results, the first consideration must be the selection of the brood sow; she should be of correct bacon type, having a size along with deep straight sides, a well-arched back, good full quarters well carried down, strong heart girth, no undue flabbiness about the jowl and from a sow that has produced large litters. After having made a careful selection, breed to a good boar of the bacon type—provide comfortable quarters, well-lighted and ventilated, also free from dampness and draught. Yard/ should be provided for is very necessary for them as well as for the mature sow. At this farm, our brood sows are kept in hog-cabins for at least three-quarters of the year and have yards to run in at all times, as well as small paddocks with green feed such as clover for the early spring, oats, peas and vetch and rape for the mid-season and autumn feeding. The sows are turned into these fields for three or four hours each day, in this way we have not only reduced our cost of maintaining the brood sow from 6 to 9 cents per day, but have provided green feed which is most essential to the health of the breeding stock as it supplies lime which is necessary for bone and tissue. Sows that are kept housed all the time and heavily fed on concentrates usually produce small litters of pigs weak in bone and with soft flabby muscles. Brood sows should never be allowed to become over-fat but should be kept in good, thriving condition all the time. If comfortable quarters are provided and the sow well cared for she will produce two litters a year with an occasional rest, without impairing her health.

A good reliable feed for brood sows is a slop made up of equal parts of crushed oats, barley and bran or shorts, fed at the rate of from 4 to 7 pounds per day. During the winter months they should have, in addition to the meal, 4 to 6 pounds roots per day and clover or alfalfa hay to take the place of the green feed fed during the summer. The brood sow must have access to mineral or earthy feeds. Sods, which may be stored in a root house, are excellent. Charcoal, soft coal or ashes containing charred wood should be accessible at all times during the winter or when the sow is indoors. As a direct addition to the sow's meal ration the following is suggested:—Tankage 3 to 5 per cent of the weight of the mixture, or tankage 3 per cent, bone meal 3 per cent. The further addition of 2 per cent of ground limestone will frequently be of great value. Tankage is valuable, aside from its protein content, in that it contains desirable mineral salts derived from animal products; charcoal is high in phosphates and has a highly beneficial action on digestion; bone meal is

Winter has set in and good sleighing has followed almost immediately on the tracks of the automobile. During the long evenings our rural telephone system is more than ever acknowledged by all to be invaluable in our community life. In addition to this a half dozen of the homes in our midst have had the radio installed and in this way are enjoying splendid entertainments, etc., which heretofore have been the privilege of only the citizens of large cities in the United States and Canada. It is earnestly hoped that this form of entertainment will become more general and although we are deprived in country life of many of the advantages that our cities afford, yet there is compensation to those who are privileged to enjoy the radio connection.

A very pleasant evening was spent at the home of Mr. Edmund Phillips Hamilton on Wednesday, Nov. 26, under the auspices of the Hamilton Mission Band. Mr. John Simpson occupied the chair and the following splendid program was successfully carried out: Chorus: Hamilton choir; recitation, Jean Owen; duet, Jean Owen and Annie Ramsay; recitation, Lloyd Locher; dialogue, Alma Woodside, Arthur Owen and Wesley Crozier; address to Mission Band, Mrs. A. N. Gillis; chorus, Mission Band girls; recitation, Alma Woodside; chorus, Hamilton choir. The remainder of the evening was enjoyed by all in the playing of games and music and last but not least the serving of a splendid supper.

Owing to an outbreak of scarletina, several houses have been quarantined. The church, school, etc., have been closed and all precautionary measures are being taken. Misses Ross and McFarlane, teachers of Fanning school, left Monday, Dec. 15 for their homes in Charlottetown.

MAKING THINGS HUM IN ROME

The Romans had three recognized methods of applauding—the bombus, the imbrices and the testu. The word bombus did not enter any illusion to explosives. On the contrary, this form of applause was the most decorous, inasmuch as it consisted merely of a humming or buzzing noise. Thus in a way the Romans were the first to "make things hum" in a public assembly. The bombus was not the chief feature the Romans had to offer in the way of applause. The imbrices meant a demonstration made with the hollow of the hands. The testu meant the striking together of the flat portions of the hands. From this we may conclude that the Romans clapped, but there is no certainty on this point.

THE TALMUD

The Talmud is the compendium of ancient Jewish oral or unwritten law, as distinguished from the Pentateuch, or written law. Its origin is coeval with the return of the Jewish people from the Babylonian captivity, 536 B.C. Its compilation in Hebrew was begun by the scribes, and by their successors the work was carried on till 220 B.C. The Talmud is a combination of prose and poetry and contains two elements, legal and legendary. Its morality resembles that of the New Testament, and its philosophy reminds us very forcibly of that of the great Plato.
