JAPANESE FAVOR BRITISH PROPOSAL

To Discuss at Geneva Questions Which Were Settled at Washington Conference of 1922.

(Special to the Guardian)

GENEVA, June 27. — It was reported, though not confirmed, this afternoon that the Japanese delegation in consequence of fresh instructions from Tokio is now disposed to favor the British proposal to discuss at the present naval conference questions concerning capital ships which were settled at the Washington conference of 1922.

The British leaders have given no intimation to the United States delegates that they have definitely abandoned their attempts to reopen Washington treaty problems at the present meeting. According to some reports, the British would like to exact a promise from the United States to refrain, pending the 1931 conference, from building any 35,000 ton battleships, of which the British already possess two, the Nelson and Rodney. It is stated that the U. S. delegates will refuse to give answer to such a suggestion if it is officially advanced.

Referring to the British attempts to reopen the Washington treaty, Mr. Gibson declared today it would be a great mistake for the powers to have the "Washington edifice tumble about their ears in an endeavor to make what would certainly be a lopsided rearrangement".

Since both France and Italy were not participating actively in the present conference. Arrangements were made today to have the French "informer" and the Italian "Observer" present at all committee meetings, thus eliminating any possible intimation on their part that they are being shut out of the tripartite negotiations.

NEW YORK, June 27. —An all-round scaling down of paper without disturbing the 5-5-3 ratio is the aim of the British proposals to the Geneva tripartite conference on naval disarmament, says a statement issued by Sir Harry G. Armstrong, British Consul General, on behalf of the British Ambassador Sir Esme Howard.

Ten Steers Killed During Thunderstorm

(Special to the Guardian)

TORONTO, Ont., June 27. —Saturday's thunderstorm resulted in the death of ten splendid steers, valued at $200 apiece on Sir Henry Pellatt's estate at King. The cattle had headed for shelter beneath a giant tree, some 500 yards from the house, and the tree was struck by lightning, ten of the animals being crushed to death.

Many Desertions From U. S. Army

(Special to the Guardian)

WASHINGTON, June 27. —The desertions problem in the army continues serious. There has been a slight decrease of late generally credited to slowly improving housing conditions, but the number of desertions is still large enough to warrant serious attention.

This was discussed by the conference of general officers, recently held here, but no definite solution was reached. An officer on duty here, who entered the army as an enlisted man, and is now a major attributes most of the desertions to poorly prepared food and lack of proper variety in the daily menus.

Wales Name Record Lost

(By British United Press)

LONDON, June 24—The news received from Danville (Illinois, U. S. A.) that a man, who presented himself for enrolment as a constable, gave the name of Ducorapanagietokiriakoploliffitgpolos, has caused consternation in some of the Welsh villages.

Here is a challenge that strikes deep down into the very heart of Welsh tradition and Eisteddfod articulation.

In a word, can even Wales repudiate the challenge? Inquiries show that it cannot.

On a tombstone in a little village cemetery there is a name of 38 letters, but there is a hyphen in the middle.

So it has fallen to a miner to try to restore the falling prestige of Wales.

He cannot spell his name, but in all its pride and glory it is chalked round two sides of his washhouse. It is:

Llewellynchyddollandychndwllcyffaidd.

Only 36 letters. One down and two to win. Isn't it sad?

Cripple's Faith A Lourdes Cure

LONDON, June 27.—Miss Mary Smallman, a Hereford girl, who recently visited Lourdes, the famous place of pilgrimage in France, has returned home declaring that she was cured of a spinal disease which made her a cripple.

"I was a cripple, and used to walk with a stick, but I came back from Lourdes carrying two heavy travelling cases," Miss Smallman, who is a Roman Catholic, told a newspaperman.

She added that she had suffered from spinal disease for nine years, and had undergone treatment in this country.

"I travelled to Lourdes with a friend, joining 950 other pilgrims in London," she continued. "I entered the waters at Lourdes and kissed the feet of Our Lady's statue. I came out of the water perfectly cured, and as I walked out I bent backwards, a thing I could never do before without pain."

S. S. St. Lawrence And Party Due Here On Thursday Morning

His Worship Mayor Miller received a telegram yesterday stating that the palatial S. S. "St. Lawrence" sailed from Montreal yesterday afternoon under the auspices of the Choral Society of St. Louis of France and party of about four hundred, and will arrive in Charlottetown on Thursday morning at seven o'clock. Arrangements are being made by which this party will be given an opportunity to see the city and country during their short stay with us, and to this end the owners of automobiles are respectfully asked to render their valuable cooperation. The party will be ready to leave the ship at 9.30 and have arranged for lunch at the Beach Grove Inn at 12.00 for themselves and escorts. At 3.30 they are due at the Cathedral where they will render the programme which was published a few days ago. The mayor is exceedingly anxious that the owners of cars will extend to this society that generous hospitality which has made Charlottetown famous in the past. The City Clerk will be glad to receive the names of those who will aid with a car.

Following is the address delivered by Major T. E. McNutt:

Ladies and gentlemen as chairman of the Publicity Committee of the Canadian Legion, British Empire Service League in this Province, it has fallen to my lot to speak to you tonight. While my remarks are chiefly addressed to comrades of the Great War, I trust however they will be of interest to all of our people who may be listening in.

It is now twelve years and more since many of us had both the responsibility and privilege of going from place to place endeavouring and with considerable success to induce our Island sons to enter the service. How time flies? It was eleven years on the night of 12—13 of this month since the Island Battalion left Charlottetown on the Car Ferry for Pictou. It was a memorable night in the history of our Island home. Alas many of those who left with us have not returned, but it is a comfort to believe that they rest in peace.

After a decade I now appeal to our comrades through the Radio to get together for the benefit of those among us who need our help, and also for the purpose of binding together again those friendships which can never die, but which have to some extent become dormant on account of separation. I therefore appeal to you tonight to come with us into our great Empire Organization the Canadian Legion of the British Empire Service League.

It is necessary to explain to you first the Principles, Policy, Objects and Aims of our Empire League. Therefore please bear with me while I enumerate them briefly.

The Legion is democratic and nonsectarian. It stands for loyalty to the reigning Sovereign, Canada and the Empire and an ordered Government. It stands for peace, goodwill and friendship among all nations, but advocates efficient forces on sea, land and air for the discharge of our Empire obligations.

The Legion aims to bring about the unity of all who served in His Majesty's Navy, Army and Air Forces, and to further among them the spirit of comradship and mutual help, and the close and kindly ties of active service.

To preserve the records and memories of their services, and to see that their services generally shall not be forgotten by the nation, and that due attention shall be paid to their welfare and that of their dependants.

To perpetuate the memory and deeds of the fallen and of those who die in the future; to promote and care for memorials to their

Oldest Woman In London

(By British United Press)

LONDON, June 27. —London's oldest woman, Mrs. Emma Oliver, who lives with her twin sons over their printing establishment in New Street-hill, behind Shoe-lane, has just celebrated her 102nd birthday.

Mrs Oliver was born in Brown's-buildings, St. Mary Axe (known to all good Cockneys as 'Simmery Axe'), was apprenticed for seven years to a bookbinder in Cheapside and married a paper-strainer while an apprentice, so that when her master said in a jest, "Emma, I could lock you up for being married without my consent," he spoke truly. Their first home was in Doctors' Commons.

She had nine children, including the 70-year-old twins, John Samuel and William James, who have never left her apron strings. Few people, including their mother on occasions, can tell them apart.

Seen 79 Lord Mayor's Shows

Mrs Oliver still enjoys good health, and each night insists on being supplied with the evening papers.

"My mother has not been out since she celebrated her centenary", said one of the twins the other day. "At eighty she was a 'flapper' she would jump on and off omnibuses like a girl of 15, and she was always out and about enjoying life.

"Mother has often talked to us about her young days in old London, particularly how she saw the Duke of Wellington's funeral, when she was carried shoulder-high by her uncle."

She has seen 79 Lord Mayors' Shows and remembers the time when the watchmen used to go round the streets of London giving the all-clear signal and calling the people from their beds.

She recalls the time when she had to walk a mile to get water from a well "down the bonnie fields in Shore

William Got The Wrong Number

(By British United Press)

LONDON, June 27— Because William McLaughlan could not get the right number on a Glasgow telephone, he used language which so disgusted the telephone operator that she—resourceful girl—switched him on to the police station.

The police listened in. They arrested William. His little outburst cost him $5.00 before the magistrates.

Indian Magician Gets Rich Quickly

(By British United Press)

BOMBAY, India, June 27.—Indian is a land of simple faith, in which the three-card trickster would reap a golden harvest. There are holy men, who do all kind of uncanny things, or promise to do them, and a nice fat living they make out of the credulity of the villagers.

From an obscure corner of the Bombay Presidency there comes an account of the adventures of a magician, who claimed to be specially endowed by the Goddess of Good Fortune, a man who could turn stones into gold. His methods were these:

He would talk to the women of the house, he found he could convince the women where he could not convince the other sex. He would induce them to make a present of their jewellery to the Goddess, and in return he would present them with a pot of honey. This pot, he told them, was to be placed under the doorstep, and after two days it would be found that the honey would be turned to gold on top of the gold would be found the family jewellery, returned by the Goddess. He himself would go away to pray to the Goddess. He went.

The police have been on the track of the holy man for a long time, but he continues to appear in the most unexpected places and to exchange very poor honey for jewels.

Duke And Duchess Arrive In London

(Special to the Guardian)

LONDON, June 27. —The Duke and Duchess of York, returning today from their six months visit to Australia, were given an enthusiastic reception when they reached London. The King and Queen greeted them most affectionately at the railway station whence they were driven in an open carriage to Buckingham Palace amid the cheers of vast crowds lining the route, despite a drizzle which ceased at the time the returning royal couple appeared. After entering the palace, the Duke and Duchess lost no time in having their baby, Princess Elizabeth, who had been left at home, brought to them.

Rang His Own Death Knell

(By British United Press)

PARIS, June 27.—The sacristan of the church of the village of St. Martin de Perigueux, near Perigueux, a man of 66 named Jean Viveau, having decided to put an end to his life, committed suicide in an original manner.

He rang the church bell as usual. Then he made a knot in the rope, placed his head into it, and hanged himself.

Strange sounds from the bell called the attention of the local cure, who arrived too late to save his sacristan's life.

Arrangements were discussed for the luncheon to be given to Countess Willingdon, and final details for above were left to Executive. A report was given that the plaque for the table in the Legislative Building had been received and it was decided to ask Miss Haviland who is a daughter of one of those who officially sat round the table in 1864, and is also a charter member of this Order to unveil this plaque Friday at 12 o'clock noon. Feat of Mighty Man

(By British United Press)

LONDON, June 27. —A great attraction at the famous annual Bath and West and Southern Counties' Society's Show was staged in the shoeing forge, where several mighty men were at work.

Perhaps the mightiest was J. C. Price, of The Forge, Bearland (Gloucester). Besides being an expert blacksmith, who has won numerous prizes for shoeing, including some at this show, he is recognized as one of the strongest men in England. An ex-champion weight-lifter, during odd moments at the show he was entertaining and amazing his fellow-competitors with feats of strength. He is 44 years of age.

After he had won a prize in a shoeing contest, he surprised everyone by bending thick iron bars nearly double across his jaw. Then he took two long rails, over a quarter of an inch in thickness, and bent them so that the points and heads of each met.

"I certainly am a little stronger than most men," said Mr. Price. "I am the youngest of eleven children and neither my sisters and brothers, nor my parents are particularly strong. I became aware of my strength when quite a youngster, and took up courses of physical culture to develop it. A year or two ago I won a championship for weight-lifting. I train on nothing I smoke a little, but I never drink alcohol. I believe I eat rather heartily but I have no special diet."

DOCTOR WAS KILLED BY A MAN HE SAVED

Prominent Indiana Surgeon Was Murdered in Motor Car —Slayer Ended Own Life.

INDIANA, Pa., June 27—The successful treating of a broken back seven years ago by Dr. Frank Fisher Moore, well known Homer City physician and surgeon, is believed by the authorities to have led to the murder of the doctor and the suicide of the man he saved from being a helpless cripple.

Seven years ago the doctor was called on to treat John Ammorian, a Creekside coal miner, and his fellow surgeons marvelled that he saved the miner's life and made it possible for him to walk. But Ammorian, forced to go about with the aid of a cane, nursed a grudge against the surgeon.

Yesterday the miner hobbled into the doctor's office at Homer City and complained that his back pained him. The doctor told Ammorian that he would be glad to take him in his automobile to an Indiana Hospital for an X-ray of his back. They boarded the surgeon's machine. About four miles from here the automobile left the road and overturned. At first it was believed the doctor lost control of the car. Nearby farmers rushed to the scene, only to find that Dr. Moore had been shot three times in the head from the rear, while Ammorian, in the back seat, had three bullets in his temple and a pistol by his side.
