Work on the new municipal airport at Sherwood was progressing favorably it was stated last evening. 115 men are employed on the project in weekly shifts. Already about 8 acres of wood have been chopped down, with some 12 acres remaining. Logging, which comprises the trimming and hauling away of trees once they are cut down, is also being carried on; brush is being burned and preparations made for stumping which also will necessitate the use of a considerable number of men.

The wood being cut is for the most part good hardwood. It is to be taken to the City where it will be sawed up and probably used for relief distribution this winter.

Mr. C .R. Haggerman of New Brunswick is supervising the work.

Progress is also being made on the Fort Edward project. Workmen have completed the new cement gun platform and are now engaged in grading and preparing construction of a ramp from the highway to the platform. Work in connection with the placing of 12 x 12 timbers in the new breast work calls for men familiar with the hewing of cross ties and longitudinals to anchor square timbers which form the face of the breastwork. Still another phase of the work going on is the sheating of the old cement wall to the East end of the Fort. Men here are engaged with star drills making holes for expansion bolts which will hold the sheating to the cement work, thus preventing the action of the ice on the cement wall.

Men are also engaged in sodding the Fort. This will not only improve the appearance of the Fort but will also improve the ball diamond from where the sods are being taken. The short haul from the diamond to the Fort cuts down expenses and expedites the work.
