"THE LOVE PENDULUM"

HEART BALM

Chapter 85

But I did not call up Colin. Perhaps if I had been perfectly calm and logical I would have gone to my own place and telephoned him. But an empty taxi was passing when I left my aunt's house, and I hailed it and mechanically gave Colin's address. It was not yet noon and I knew as Colin spent his mornings working he would be in.

His housekeeper ushered me into a tiny reception room, and said she would send "Mr. MacReady" in to me in a moment. Evidently she took me for a client who wanted to arrange for a portrait. While she was gone I started about me in surprise, wondering for a moment whether I was in the right place. I was so absorbed with my own affairs that I had the curious feeling that everything outside myself was unreal. Every woman who has been through a sudden sorrow or crisis must know this feeling.

Then I remembered that Colin had done over his apartment. He was making quite a good income Now, but instead of moving into a more pretentious place, he had kept his old apartment and had it done over in a beautiful fashion.

He came hurrying in, with rolled up sleeves and old working clothes, his hands covered with paint.

"Sorry to have kept you," he apologized. "I've been cleaning off an old canvas. What is it, Connie? You look rather badly."

"All right, come back into my workship." Colin never called his studio anything but his "workshop." "Do you like my grand reception room? Done for my millionaire clients. You look lovely against that black velvet hanging Connie, especially with your pale skin. Shall I do you a portrait?"

"No," I said abruptly. "Where's the workshop."

He led the way to a small room with a north window. I had been in his place before when he gave little parties, but never in this tiny studio. It was littered with canvases and paints, with odd stools and chairs and pieces of lovely old brocades and velvets for backgrounds. It looked more like a photographer's studio than an artist's.

I held out the letter from Win, and he read it.

"So that accounts for the tragic face," he remarked, calmly tearing the letter into bits.

"Reason enough! Colin, what shall I do?"

"Oh, answer it. I suppose. It's the usual thing with letters—to answer them. I think we'll have some lunch first."

"Lunch! I don't want to eat!"

"I do. Then we'll answer it." He rang a bell and the housekeeper appeared.

"I think we'll keep Mrs. Taylor for luncheon," he said. "She isn't feeling well, so we'll have a lot of hot coffee. I think we might have some of that consomne you make so well—"

The woman nodded and went away.

"You take it calmly enough," I burst out. "Consomne and coffee!"

"Nothing," said Colin calmly. Connie my dear, you are always trying to make a tragedy out of life. You are always on the edge of a grand climax. The climax never comes if you learn how to defer it. Now Then—"

He stood staring at me a moment. I was on the edge of nervous tears again.

"I wish you would do me a favour and sit in that chair with your profile toward me," he said suddenly. "Will you? I want to make a sketch for a figure in a group picture, and I have no model for it."

I sat down as he asked. He went to work industriously. I never knew until afterward that he did it only to distract me, to give me something else to thing about. The instinct in me to do as I was asked came up at once—the curious yielding quality that never said "no" to Win, nor to my family. When the housekeeper announced lunch, I found I was calm and ready to eat it.

After lunch he began:

"Win doesn't want to get away from you, as you think. He wants you to come back. But he—"

"If he wants me I'll go at once."

"No, not yet—not if you are wise. I know about this rumour concerning Win and Gwen. I don't believe it—but I expected some such letter as this. That's why I asked you the other day whether you had heard—"

"But it's evident he wants to get away."

"No, it's evident he wants to see you. I'm more afraid of that than that he wants to marry this other woman. I'm afraid you will go as soon as he asks you to come back."

"I will."

"And there make a mistake and start all his trouble over again. Let him wait and want for a while—then—"

"Do you really think he—is feeling—that he likes me more?"

I did not believe what Colin said. But when I left a few moments later, I felt calm again, and quieted. Colin, his bulgy working clothes making his figure uglier than ever, smiled a little goodbye from the doorway.

Tomorrow—An Answer.

SOCIETY ATTENDS LEARD-WEBSTER NUPTIALS

Jamaica Plain Man Takes Bride at West Roxbury

The following is copied from the West Roxbury News. Dr. Leard is a son of the late Mr. John N. Leard of Tryon:

The wedding of Miss Gertrude Frances Leard, daughter of Dr. John S. H. Leard of 1895 Centre Street, West Roxbury, to Robert Crosby Webster of Orchard street, Jamaica Plain, was solemnized on Tuesday evening at 8 o'clock in Emmanuel Episcopal Church, West Roxbury, Mass.

Rev. Dr. George A. Spencer of Milton performed the ceremony with the assistance of the Rev. Howard S. Wilkinson, rector of the local church. Miss Rhoda Spencer of Milton was the maid of honor and Mr. Vaughn Weatherly of Brookline was the best man. Dr Leard gave his daughter in marriage.

Bridesmaids were the Misses Mary Foster of Oriole street, West Roxbury, and Evelyn Chase of Brookline. John E. Leard and Samuel E. Leard, brothers of the bride, acted as trainbearers. Following the church ceremony there was a reception at the home of the bride.

Miss Leard wore a gown of ivory satin with a long train flowing from the shoulders. She carried a shower bouquet of lillies of the valley and white roses. Miss Spencer was dressed in rose changeable taffeta. Miss Foster wore petunia changeable taffeta and Miss Chase was attired in a blue gown of the same material. All the attendants carried old-fashioned bouquets with paper frills.

The ushers were Harry Chase and Benjamin Chase of Brookline, Norman Leard of Jersey City, and William Alexander of Bellevue street, West Roxbury. Mr. Alexander also presided at the organ. The church was beautifully decorated with white gladioli, white asters and baby's breath tied in great white ribbon bows.

The house was also tastefully decorated. The reception room was arranged with pink gladioli, plams, ferns, and a bay tree. In the dining room, where the refreshments were served, there were cream gladioli larkspur and baby's breath. In the rest of the house were massed bouquets of roses, asters and gladioli.

Among the guests were: Miss Ruth Leard of Jersey City, N. J; Mr. and Mrs. Paul A. Peters, Dr. and Mrs. Jillson, Dr. and Mrs. Stevens, Mr and Mrs Charles W Earnshaw and family of Weston, Mr. and Mrs. H. J. Earnshaw and daughter; Mr and Mrs G F Earnshaw of Glencoe, Ill; Mr and Mrs William Alexander, Madame Ellen P Alexander, Miss Ellen G Earnshaw, Mr and Mrs Sears Gallagher.

Others were: Mr and Mrs Chester Kendrick, Mr and Mrs G W Harvey and daughter of Roxbury, Mrs Lowell Manley, Col and Mrs. Chase of Brookline, Dr and Mrs Caswell of Brookline and many other prominent residents of West Roxbury and vicinity.

The couple left on their wedding trip in the midst of the reception.

PUTS HEALTH AND VIM INTO WOMEN

So Says Mrs. MacPherson of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Brantford, Ont.—"I was always tired and the least exertion would put me out for a day or two. I had a pressing pain on the top of my head, pain in the nape of my neck, and when I stooped over I could not get up without help, because of pain in my back. I did not sleep well and was nervous at the least noise. I keep house, but I was such a wreck that I could not sweep the floor nor wash the dishes without lying down afterwards. A friend living near me told me what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound had done for her so I began to take it. With the first bottle I felt brighter and got so I could wash dishes and sweep without having to lie down. Later I became regular again in my monthly terms. I have taken ten bottles all told and am now all better. I can truly say that your wonderful medicine cannot be beaten for putting health and vim into a woman."—Mrs. JAMES H. MACPHERSON, 809 Greenwich St., Brantford, Ont.

If you are suffering from a displacement, irregularities, backache, or any other form of female weakness write to the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Cobourg, Ontario, for Lydia E, Pinkham's Private Text-Book upon "Ailments Peculiar to Women."
