AUCTION SALE

Of Valuable Property in Charlottetown

I am instructed by T. B. Woodman, esq., to sell by public auction on Tuesday, March 23rd commencing at 2 o'clock p. m. the valuable property known as the DeBols estate, consisting of 12 acres of choice land with dwelling house, barn and outbuildings, situated and fronting on the East by Upper Queen Street, on the north by the Woodman Fox Ranch on the west by Spring Park Road and on the south by Douglas Street. This property is beautifully situated, the land being high and sloping, having a splendid view of the city and only ten minutes walk from the post office is suitable for market gardening building lots or fox ranching, as there is a never-falling stream of water running through the centre of the land. And there is also a small orchard, altogether making this one of the most convenient properties within miles of the city of Charlottetown. Terms for this property will be made known at sale.

Also on the same day and place I will sell 6 choice milk cows, 3 horses, 4 new wood sleighs all mounted and ready for service. Two driving sleighs, one cream separator, Simplex, a lot of harness and other articles, also one choice brood sow. Terms, at sale.

The Woman Who Loved and Earned

BY JANE PHELPS
A Modern Story of Home and Business

ROBERT FINDS WORK
BUT NOT HAPPINESS
CHAPTER 59.

Mary Ryan flushed when I asked her why she wanted to know if I had seen Marion Hovey, but answered promptly:

"I thought I saw her and Robert walking in the park yesterday. My head ached and instead of going to lunch I took a walk. I didn't pass them, so I may be mistaken. But if I was you I'd hurry up a job for him if I could. Ain't you ever heard about Satan finding mischief for them that are idle?"

"It wouldn't be anything very wrong for them to take a walk, would it?" I tried to speak lightly.

"Not if that was all there was to it. But usually it ain't."

Madame just then called Mary, so I had no chance to reply. So my fears were true, and Robert did spend some of his time with Marion. I thought of it bitterly, then more saucily said to myself:

"I suppose the poor fellow hardly knows what to do with himself all day long." I wanted to excuse him, yet felt that he had no excuse. I had no time to walk to the park, no time for anything but work.

"Did you find anything today?" I asked while we were getting ready for dinner.

"Yes and no. I found one place I can have, but the place don't amount to much."

"How much?"

"Less than Cadding gave me. The boss, Mr. Birch, said he couldn't understand why Cadding let me go—that he always made it a practice to keep his help—if they were good salesmen. But—"

"You explained that you had been hurt, didn't you. That you had been away several weeks, I interrupted.

"Yes—I told him all that, gave all the excuses I had up my sleeve."

"I had said nothing about the position at Leets, perhaps Mary was too sanguine, and they would not take Robert on. He knew absolutely nothing of the business, and would have to commence at the bottom. But also I knew that if they would take him, he would have a chance to rise. So later in the evening I said:

"You don't seem any too pleased over your new position Robert." He had said no more concerning it, had even acted more depressed than usual.

"Why should I be? Less salary than when we were first married. One isn't apt to be very proud, or to talk much of a thing like that."

"Oh, you mustn't take it like that! You will get more after you have worked for them a while."

"I will. I'm glad you are so optimistic."

I paid no attention to his sarcasm. Then after a minute, I said:

"How would you like a position in the downtown office of the shop?"

"You mean—hats?"

"Yes, but perhaps you could be bookkeeper or something like that. I didn't mean to sell hats."

"I should hope not!"

"Mary Ryan thinks Mr. Leets might take you on if she asked him. He thinks a good deal of her and"

"Not on your life! I tell Mary to mind her own business. I wouldn't work for him if he paid me 10 times what I am worth!" Robert interrupted the veins on his forehead standing out as he did when he was angry, and his face red, almost purple.

"Why, Robert! whatever is the matter Mary only meant to be kind."

"Oh, Mary is all right," he spoke more quietly. "But I will attend to my own affairs. It is big enough to have you work without being embarrassed by working for the same people. I suppose they would pay me about half what you get, and be so sorry for you because you had such an incompop for a husband."

I thought he referred to his inability to earn, not to any dislike of my earning, so made no reply.

RELIEF FOR CENTRAL EUROPE

LONDON, Feb. 15.—Replying to a question as to what steps the Government proposed to take for the relief of Central Europe, Austen Chamberlain, the Chancellor of the Exchequer, said in the House of Commons this afternoon that the final arrangements could not be made until the congress of the United States had granted the necessary powers. The relief administration and the British Government would have preferred to prepare a comprehensive plan, with Allied and neutral co-operation.

Mr. Chamberlain stated, but in view of the urgency of the need and despite the financial situation in the United Kingdom the British Government had informed the United States that in addition to the $12,500,000 voted for the current financial year, it was prepared to contribute a further sum, not exceeding half the sum contributed by the United States and not exceeding $10,000,000 in all.

Mr. Chamberlain said the British share would be applicable for the provision of British supplies, foodstuffs, raw materials, and other essentials and the payment of the freight charges on the goods carried on British ships. If the American grant was limited to $50,000,000 Mr. Chamberlain added, the necessary tonnage for transporting the American supplies could be provided.

The Canadian Government, also said the Chancellor, had intimated its desire to make a contribution, and the British Government was confident that other Allied and neutral governments also would cooperate in this emergency measure for dealing with the desperate needs of the Central part of Europe.

It Pays to Advertise Your Foxes in The Black Fox Magazine

The following testimonial letter, which speaks for itself has been received from a well known Rancher in Summerside. February 7, 1920

The Black Fox Magazine,
1400 Broadway,
New York, N. Y.

Gentlemen:— I have had wonderful returns from the page advertisement I sent you, and I am fairly buried in inquiries from prospective ranchers all over the United States and Canada.

Would appreciate it if you would intimate to enquirers in your paper that if there is any delay in replying to their letters it is not a matter of intentional laxity, but a physical impossibility to give all the promptness that I would like to; but all enquiries will be answered in the shortest possible space of time.

Yours truly,

D. J. BONNELL,
Summerside, P. E. I.

The Black Fox Magazine is the only Magazine in the World published exclusively in the interests of the Fur Farmer—it reaches them all—and now has a very great circulation throughout the United States, Canada, Japan and other countries.

There are hundreds of people today who want to buy high grade "Quality Foxes," but as these buyers are widely scattered your only chance of reaching them is through carrying an advertisement in this Magazine.

Write for advertising rates, and reserve space in advance.
