Facts are Stubborn Things

So is Bad Blood. The difference between them is that a fact is here to stay. Bad Blood can only stay until Burdock Blood Bitters is used, then it must go. It takes facts to prove this to your satisfaction, and we give them to you every time we catch your eye. Here is one of them. Don't throw the paper down, but read this letter from Mr. Fred. Taylor, a detective of Winnipeg. We present his portrait, together with that of his little daughter, mentioned in his letter.

FATHER AND DAUGHTER.

ONE OF THE GALLANT 90TH BATT.

DEAR SIRS,—Having felt out of order for some time, and having no energy or appetite, blotches on legs, tumor on neck—arising from impure blood, doctors doing me no good, I was induced to buy some B.B.B. I was very much against patent medicines at the time having tried so many, but after using two bottles I began to get better, and at the fourth bottle was completely well and around again. I believe in B.B.B. now, I tell you. I send you a photo of myself and little daughter, Lilly. B.B.B. cured her of nasty blisters which came out on her lips. Yours thankfully,

F. TAYLOR,
9 St. Stephen St., Winnipeg, Man.

Evading the Anti-Lottery Law.

CHICAGO, March 18.—Post-office Inspector Fritz has discovered as a result of several months' investigation, that the Louisiana lottery has succeeded in evading the anti-lottery law by establishing a branch office under the name of the Mexican International Banking Company, at Ciudad Juarez, Mexico, under the patronage of General John Mosby. It is flooding the large cities in this country, and the postal authorities cannot prohibit it because they have no authority to tamper with mail from a foreign country.

A Great Compensation.

Visitor—"Are you going to be a great man when you grow up, Willie?"

Willie—"You bet!" I'm going to be an Arctic explorer."

"An Arctic explorer's life is full of hardships, Willie."

"Yes'm. But I can staud 'em I reckon."

"I like your spirit, my boy. There is a great deal of glory to be gained in a career of that kind."

"Yes'm. And you don't never have to wash your face.—Chicago Tribune.

A Lucky Fright.

Seven men came near being buried alive at the Gay's River gold mines one day last week. The Truro News says they were at work underground when an unusual noise by escaping steam at the mouth of the pit frightened them and they came out as soon as possible. The men had not been out of the mine but a few seconds when a thousand tons of earth caved in. The hissing steam was caused by a steam pipe at the crusher bursting, and the men have reason to feel thankful that it happened just when it did.

Delegates from Newfoundland.

OTTAWA, March 19.—Mr. Herbert E. Knight, of Newfoundland, who arrived here to-day, is delegated by the Newfoundland Government to confer with the authorities here on the subject of trade relations with the United States. Newfoundland has been invited by the Imperial Government to act in concert with the Canadian Government in endeavoring to negotiate a reciprocity arrangement at Washington and Mr. Knight is here to ask Sir John Macdonald what his programme is.

Mr. Gladstone's Peril.

LONDON, March 18.—It has transpired that, after leaving the theatre in Hastings in which he delivered his closing address last night, Mr. Gladstone had a narrow escape from serious injury, if not from death. It appears that the coachman who was driving the carriage in which Mr. Gladstone was being taken to the railway station lost control of his horses. It was only after some furious running and frequently coming into close proximity to dangerous obstacles that the animals were finally brought to a halt and the illustrious passenger released. The coachman, who, it seems, was intoxicated, was arrested and fined in the police court this morning.

License Not a Ban.

There is a strange misconception in the minds, even of some good people, that there is no way of restricting the liquor traffic and diminishing its evils except through a license law. A writer in the Western of April 23rd says, "It is the license law alone which places the ban on the liquor business." To license is to legally authorize. And it is inconceivable that the legal authorization of the liquor business can place a ban upon that business. But in connection with license laws there are usually restrictions or prohibitions against selling to minors, etc. These prohibitions constitute all the 'ban' there is in the law. The license element protects and legalizes the business; the prohibitory element restrains it. The latter element has some in it; the former is all bad—"vicious in principle and powerless as a remedy.—Western Adv.

Strange History of a Abducted Girl.

FORT DODGE, Ia., March 17.—Mary Puckett, a young lady whose home is just now in Carroll county, is the heroine of a story of abduction, exile and final restoration as strange as ever recorded.

Ten years ago, while herding her father's cattle on a Dakota farm, she was kidnapped by a Black hills trapper.

She was then 13 years old.

Her captor dressed her in boy's clothes, and for three years compelled her to do the drudgery of his camp.

At the end of this time the trapper who was old, moved to a point on the Mississippi river near the southwest corner of Arkansas. There they lived on a flat boat.

Mary had by this time cast off her male attire, and was introduced as the niece of the aged abductor.

The girl soon forgot all about her old home and lived the hard life required of her without a thought of better times.

Some weeks ago some neighbors became interested in her, and started an investigation, which resulted in her restoration to her parents.

Jenny Lind.

"It was in Florence," General Sherman said, "I received a card to a 'musicale,' they called it, and Jennie Lind sent me with this card a note saying how much she would feel honoured, and all that. So I went.

But it was awful!

"They lived on the top floor of an old palace. Jennie Lind looked like a washwoman, and Goldschmidt, her husband, was a little black, weazen fellow. There was a daughter, too, I remember. She was freckled mighty bad!

"It was an awful time. The refreshments were ice cream and jumbles. I got away as soon as I could—it made my heart ache to remember that woman so different and see her now so contented with the change. I'd have jumped out of a four-storey window to have escaped.

"She was a good woman, too," he went on musingly. "They were very poor at this time. She had spent all the money she had made in America in Swedish charities. I think she might better have kept some of it anyhow."—N. Y. World.

Why a Prohibitionist?

Why should a farmer be a Prohibitionist, when the liquor business helps him by buying his grain? asks a Western farmer. "Helps him," does it? See how it helps.

A farmer sells a bushel of corn for 14 cts. A distiller buys it and makes from it 3.6 gallons of whiskey. The government taxes this $3.24 to begin with—withdrawing that amount from circulation and piling it up in the Treasury vaults. The wholesale and retail dealers get their phenomenal profits, and then the consumer pays $19 dollars for it, and makes his wife and children go without anything to eat or wear in order to keep up the market for that farmer's one bushel corn at 14 cents.

This may be good political economy, but it is difficult to see how the farmer is going to get rich at it.—N. Y. Voice.

Chicago in the Throes of "La Grippe."

CHICAGO, March 20.—Chicago is in the grasp of the "grip." Five hundred men employed on the West Side street car system are laid off with the epidemic. The South side company has 125 men on the sick list. The North Sides company has 75 men out, while many of those at work are suffering foom the disease in a mild form. The down town stores are having a like experience. In one store, employing 150 clerks, 40 are sick. Ten per cent of the police force are laid off, and 50 men in the fire department are of. Fifty-two of 100 mail carriers are suffering from the disease. All the hospitals are overcrowded. There are large numbers of grip sufferers in hotels and private houses all over the city, and doctors are kept busy night and day.

Despotic and Craven Magistrates.

LONDON, March 18.—The action of a magistrate in the town of Bewdley, in Worcestershire, Saturday, had the effect to arouse the inhabitants to a degree of indignation and excitement, nearly culminating in a riot. A young girl, fourteen years of age, of respectable family, was arraigned on the charge of stealing a copy of a magazine, the value of which was less than a shilling. After a cursory hearing of the case the magistrate declared the girl guilty and sentenced her to ten days imprisonment at hard labor and three months confinement in a reformatory. When the sentence was published and the papers containing it were distributed through the town this morning the people assembled in the public square and held an indignation meeting, at which speeches were made conveying threats to lynch both the mayor and the magistrate. The sentiments expressed by the speakers met the unanimous approval of their hearers and the crowd proceeded to the court house, where the offending magistrate was sitting, and advanced upon him with menacing cries and gestures. As the angry mob poured into the court room the magistrate became thoroughly alarmed, and in words whose tremulous utterance betokened his fright reversed his decision and ordered the immediate release of the girl.

Sleeping Under the Snow.

The case of Mrs. Elizabeth Woodcock, who survived long burial under snow, may be known to many readers. This woman, 42 years of age, of Impington, a village three miles north of Cambridge, lost her way in returning home from market on Saturday evening, February 2, 1799, and was buried seven feet deep in the snow. In this state she continued eight nights and eight days, when she was dug out alive on Sunday, February 10. She retained the full possession of her senses all the while she was immured. She died July 24, 1799.

A somewhat similar case occurred in the snowstorm of November, 1890. A middle-aged woman, named Alice Jane Lowe, belonging to Wigan, was admitted into Spalding workhouse in a very weak state, having been found by the relieving officer sleeping out in the snow in the Lincolnshire fens, near Spalding. She was put to bed, and then stated that she had slept out for five weeks continuously including within the last few days, the severest weather of the year, when the snow covered the ground to the depth of nearly a foot. The poor woman's hair was in such a matted state that it had to be all cut off. She stated that she had tramped from Lancashire, where she had formerly been in domestic service, and at the time she was found in the snow the appeared to have lost her way. The workhouse officials consider it most remarkable that the woman survived in the exposure and cold.—Leisure Hour.

Evangelist Moody in Boston.

Evangelist Moody drew immense crowds to Tremont Temple all day yesterday. In the evening he preached on the Ten Commandments. He said people now-a-days in this country worship more idols than the Chinese. He believed that taking the name of God in vain was on the increase. He noticed that when he was here as a boy years ago. "As far as breaking the Sabbath is concerned," said Mr. Moody, "we are getting along to the period when an attempt will be made to do away with it altogether. When that time comes this great nation will lose its prestige. France did it when she was a first rate nation and now she is only a third power."

He said there were 3,000,000 people in the world like the Scotch. "Scotchmen are the best financiers and the most successful men in the world. And why? Simply because the Scotch observe the Sabbath day better than any other people." Mr. Moody said he would not ride a horse car on Sunday, because the companies worked their horses every day in the week. If he could find a man who gave his horses a rest one day in the week he might then take a ride on Sunday. "The Sunday newspapers are breaking the Sabbath and keeping lots of men from keeping the Sabbath. There never was a man who worked on a newspaper seven days in the week who in time was not ruined." Mr. Moody hoped that if any of the papers made fun of his sermons, his audience would take no stock in it. "How did they know but that the reporter was an infidel?"
