SKETCH OF LOUIS NAPOLEON.

At a time when the name of Louis Napoleon is engrossing so much of the attention of mankind, it may not be deemed superfluous for us to lay before our readers a slight sketch of his early career. This Prince, third son of Louis Napoleon, brother of the Emperor, and King of Holland, and of Hortense, the daughter of the Empress Josephine, was born in Paris, 20th April, 1808. His birth was saluted by the cannon of the grand army along the whole line. He was not baptized until the 4th of November, 1810, when the ceremony was performed at Fontainebleau, by Cardinal Fesch, the Emperor standing godfather, and the Empress, Maria Louisa, godmother. Louis Napoleon, as well as his brother, was an object of particular attachment on the part of the Emperor his uncle, which was not weakened by the birth of the King of Rome. At the return from Elba, in 1815, he stood by the side of his uncle during the holding of the Champ-de-Mai, and was presented to the deputation from the people and the army. These solemn scenes must have deeply impressed his infant mind, and his affection for France grew rapidly under the caresses of Napoleon. When the latter embraced him for the last time at Malmaison, young Louis, then but seven years old, showed very strong feelings, he wanted to follow his uncle, he cried out, weeping, that he would go and fire off the cannon, and his mother, Hortense, had much to do to pacify him. His exile now commenced at Augsburgh, where for a time he pursued his classical studies, and acquired a knowledge of the German language. From thence he accompanied his mother to Switzerland, to the canton of Thurgan, and while completing his education, he was enabled to follow his inclination, by applying himself to military science, and studying engineering and artillery under General Dufour. In one of his letters to his mother, we find him "engaged in military reconnoitring in the mountains, walking ten or twelve leagues a-day, with his knapsack on his back, and sleeping under a tent, at the foot of a glacier." During his sojourn here, he heard of the revolution of July, when he hastened to Paris, and immediately wrote a letter to the King of the French, asking permission to serve in the French army as a common soldier, which offer was instantly rejected, with peremptory orders to quit France. In 1831, he was in Italy, when the insurrection broke out in the Papal States, and together with his brother, joined it, and here they remained until the brother died at Forli, immediately after which the capitulation of Ancona took place, when Louis Napoleon was in jeopardy. At length his mother, to save her only remaining son, boldly entered France, by means of a passport furnished her by an Englishman, and drove to the Hotel de Hollande, where she wrote to Louis Phillippe, announcing her arrival, who, a few days after, sent an order for her to depart, and in a short time they departed for London, and from thence to Switzerland. It was in Switzerland, in 1832, '33, and '35, that he published his Reveries Politiques, his Considerations Politiques et Militaires sur la Swisse, and Manual d'Artillerie. The attempt made by Louis Napolean at Strasburg, on the 30th October, 1836, must be in the remembrance of many of our readers. It was not the result of a daring and deep inspiration, it was the fruit of two or three years' preparatory plotting, and mistaken conviction that the time for action had arrived. At Strasburg he was arrested, and ordered for trial, but eighty generals and superior officers appeared against it. The embarkation of Louis Napoleon for the United States, his return to Switzerland, his expulsion thence, and his subsequent refuge in England, where he planned his Boulogne invasion are all matters of notoriety. The Emperor had determined, that the eldest of the family should always be called Napoleon, and after the death, in Forli, of Louis Napoleon's brother, Louis, added Napoleon, according to the provisions of the Senatus Consultum, of the 28th Floreal, twelfth year, otherwise he was only Charles Louis Bonaparte.—LONDON PAPER.

The Maine Law does its work: True, it does not stop all selling, any more than our laws against Theft, Forgery, and Murder prevent absolutely the perpetration of those crimes; but it renders the traffic infamous, and doomed to secrecy, stealth and darkness. It confronts every tippler with the warning that he is making himself an accomplice of offenders; it startles every youth who may be tempted to take his first lessons in dissipation, with the knowledge that the Public Conscience and Public Judgment have deliberately condemned and stigmatised the traffic he is abetting. He who shall become a tippler in defiance of the Maine Law, can never plead ignorance as an excuse nor saddle his degredation upon the community.

SUICIDE OF SLAVES BY DROWNING.—A negro woman, with a child in each arm, jumped from one of the steamboats at the upper wharf, last week, and all three were drowned. The woman's husband endeavoured to end his existence in the same way, but was prevented from accomplishing his purpose by the interference of bystanders. The woman and children had been sold by a citizen of this country to a man going South, and she preferred death to removal from her old home.—Nashville Gazette.

Beauty has but little to do with engageing the love of woman, the air, the manner, the tone, the conversation, the something that interests, and the something to be proud of; these are the attributes of the man bound to be loved.

PROSPECTUS
OF THE
Charlottetown Gas Company.

PROVISIONAL COMMITTEE:

Hon. Daniel Brenan, Chairman;
Hon. Charles Young, Hon. W. W. Lord,
Hon. Charles Hensley, Hon. Joseph Pope,
Francis Longworth, Esq., James Walkinshaw, Esq.,
Mr. James Anderson, Henry Haszard, Esq.,
Hon. George Birnie, Mr. George Beer,
Hon. Colin Campbell, Esq., George Dodd, Esq.

THE superiority and advantages of Gas over every other method yet discovered for lighting Towns are so self-evident and so universally acknowledged, that it would be superfluous to dilate upon the subject, and it is only surprising that, while every Town and considerable Village of Great Britain, as also many Towns in the neighbouring Provinces, are lighted by Gas; this, the Capital of Prince Edward Island, should be still in darkness.

To supply this desideratum, it is now proposed to form a Joint Stock Company—to be Incorporated by an Act of the Legislature—with a subscribed Capital of £6000, in 1200 Shares, of £5 each, to be managed by a body of Directors, annually chosen by the Shareholders.

As many of the inhabitants of Charlottetown may be comparatively unacquainted with the practical results of Gas Companies, it may be proper to observe, that a Joint Stock Company for the purpose of lighting the Town with Gas, can hardly be called a speculation; because it is now ascertained, by reference to the annual Reports and Dividends of the Gas Companies of Great Britain, and some of the neighbouring Colonies, that wherever they have been managed with ordinary prudence and economy, they have yielded a certain and steady return of annual interest on the capital invested.

Previous to bringing the scheme before the public, the Provisional Committee have been in correspondence with competent parties, both in the neighboring Provinces and in Great Britain, and from the information thus obtained, and the estimates they have received, they are of opinion that the Land, Buildings, Apparatus, Machinery and Pipes requisite to enable the Company to go fully into operation, may be secured and completed for and with the proposed capital.

To enable the Company to commence operations at once, and on the most advantageous terms, it has been resolved to dispense with a deposit of £1 for share be paid on the allocation of shares, and that no further call be made, till the Act of Incorporation be obtained; and that such further calls shall be made payable by such instalments, and at such intervals, as the Directors may judge most convenient for the Shareholders and the requirements of the Company.

Although certain spirited individuals were prepared to subscribe the whole of the requisite Capital, it is deemed but fair to give the public an opportunity of participating in the advantages of the undertaking; and for this purpose the Subscription List will remain open at the Office of Mr. Lawson, Interim Secretary, to the Company, for more than one-half of the Shares being already subscribed.

JOHN LAWSON, In. Secretary.

In addition to its greater economy, Gas Light may also be pronounced safer than any other ordinary Light. It produces no sparks—it cannot be carelessly or ignorantly used with lighted curtains, or substances easily ignited, and it requires scarcely any attention. It may be turned down in an instant to the most minute speck of flame, ready to be restored to full brilliancy when necessary, by the simple turning of the stop cock; and even when it escapes by the carelessness of an attendant, or a defect in the pipes, it is once indicated by the accident to the whole household, by the disagreeable smell which it occasions.

From the peculiarity which must be mixed with atmospheric air before it becomes explosive, it is scarcely possible that this accident should occur, in any ordinary apartment, even if the Gas were allowed to escape for the purpose. And as its smell so instantly indicates its presence in cellars, or other confined situations, where it may have escaped in ignorance from the accidental breaking, or leakage of a pipe, it is only by the greatest carelessness, or ignorance, that a light will be approached to it, before it has been allowed to escape by the free admission of air. There is no such thing as the bursting of a pipe, or the blowing up of a Gasometer.

RELATIVE EXPENSE.—The relative cost of Gas has been generally considered not to exceed one-third to one-half the cost of tallow candles.
