AUGUSTINE COVE NOTES

"By Naia"

Miss Buelah Robinson and Mr. Archie Robinson, accompanied by Miss Mae Foy, of Lower Tryon, were visitors to Crapaud last Thursday afternoon.

Miss Mary Inman was recently visiting in Carleton, the guest of Miss Hattie Ross.

Recent visitors from Augustine Cove to Cape Traverse were the Messrs. Leith Cameron, Archie Robinson, John and Milton Carr.

Mr. Edward McFadyen was a visitor to Crapaud, Friday morning also Mr. Harry Inman.

Mrs. Wendell Lea, of Victoria, was recently visiting her mother, Mrs. Frank Dixon.

Mr. John Robinson was a visitor to Carleton Siding Saturday afternoon.

Quite a number of the energetic farm-men of the vicinity are hauling their sufficient supply of fuel for coming months. While the weather permits fine and roads in excellent shape.

Mr. Leith Cameron was a visitor to Crapaud Thursday afternoon.

"Oh Say" their certainly was some "snap" to the frosty weather Monday. I guess it would surely put the "Arena's" in skating order by very fine tone. We really needed some frosty weather to make ice and I think perhaps we have got our desire.

Mr. and Mrs. Nathan Bell and son, Deane, of Cape Traverse, were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Harry McFarlane Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Crilly Lea of Victoria, were recent visitors to Augustine Cove the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Harry McFarlane.

Mr. Austin Cameron was a visitor to Crapaud, P. E. I., Wednesday afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. Hillard Francis and little son Leith were visitors to Crapaud, Saturday evening.

In the last issue of "Augustine Cove Notes" concerning the "Arena" there was a slight mistake in printing. Instead of three rinks being erected it should have read, "one rink."

Believe me "dear friends", the night is very cold and as I sit by the "fire" I recollect it has almost extinguished, so by the way really I shall have to say, Bon Soir. Naia O. K.—E. E.

Crime Foretold In Dreams

(British United Press)

VIENNA, Jan. 21. — Professor Ignaz Jesowers, following on the classic work of Dr. Siegmund Freud on dream interpretation, "Traumdeutung," says the "Neues Wiener Journal," is about to publish a book called "The Book of Dreams" which by its careful records of historic examples of remarkable dreams, amplified the work of Freud.

The chapter on dreams in connection with criminology is of particular interest. Dr. Peter Nieuwland, the great Dutch mathematician, contributes an authentic account of a man whose continued warnings in dreams that a horrible fate awaited him did not save him from being murdered exactly as he had dreamed.

The man, a watchmaker, of Locle, was found in the canal at Amsterdam, bound hand and foot. He was removed alive from the water, but died a few hours later, after uttering the words, "The brutes, the brutes!" Among his effects were found two pieces of paper, on one of which was written:

"This night I have had a terrible dream. I dreamed that two men seized me, robbed me, tied my hands and feet and threw me into the water. This is the fourth time in five weeks that I have had this terrible dream. May God protect me.

On another piece of paper was written, "Should something terrible happen to me, and should I lose my life in consequence, I pray those who find this paper to give news of my fate to my father, who is a town councillor in Locle." The murderers were never discovered.

A somewhat similar case is that of a young apprentice in Hamburg, who dreamed that he was robbed and murdered on the way to Bergedorf, and told his master of the dream.

"That is a strange coincidence," remarked the master, "because it so happens that today I want you to take some money for me to Bergedorf."

The apprentice became alarmed on the way to the village, returned to the last village and asked the local policeman to send someone with him until he had passed a certain corner in the woods. The policeman sent a farm lad with him, and as soon as they had passed the dangerous spot, and the youth had gone back, the apprentice felt so scared that he returned to the village and asked the gendarme to send some one with him as far as Bergedorf itself.

The farm lad was detailed for the duty again, and on the way the apprentice, now reassured, told his companion what he had dreamed. He had hardly finished the recital when the youth bent down, picked up a stone, and murdered the apprentice with it.

Another curious case was that of the Dusseldorf workman named Schramm, who was condemned to death in consequence of a dream. The body of an unknown man had come time before been taken from the Rhine and buried without identification. There were two bullet-wounds in his head, and a stone was tied by a cord to his neck.

Six months later Schramm was sleeping in a common cell with other prisoners—he had been arrested on some minor charge—when he cried aloud in his sleep. "Throw him into the Rhine. Tie a rope around his neck first and attach a stone."

The other prisoners awoke him and asked what he had dreamed. He replied that he had dreamed of a murder committed on a workman named Maasen, in which he had actually taken part.

One of the prisoners told the story to the governor, the body of the unidentified man was exhumed and was found to be that of Maasen.

Schramm afterwards denied that he had had anything to do with the murder itself, saying that it was all the phantasy of a dream, but sufficient evidence was forthcoming to convince a Dusseldorf jury of his guilt, and he was condemned to death.

HUSBANDS' PARADISE FOUND

What has been described as a paradise for husbands has been discovered by an expedition in the island of Nunivak, off the coast of Alaska. The island is inhabited by 170 Eskimos, and, during five months in the year, by thousands of seals. A native custom orders that, directly the seals appear, the men, who live by selling the skins, shall move into a camp known as the "Kazhoe" and live there until the last seal leaves the island. They are not allowed to see their wives or their families, and their food is brought by their wives to a central spot, where it is collected. A feast at which the bladders of all seals caught during the year are thrown back into the sea to propitate the seal tribe ends their period of isolation.

SHEIKS SPURN PLANES, AUTOS

Airplanes and automobiles failed to impress a party of real sheiks when they recently visited a small town in the Soudan, but a staircase aroused their veneration. They were familiar with trees growing in groups, but they could explain the shade-givers being in rows only through the trees being able to walk.

Water faucets amazed them, for to turn a screw and see water rushing out of a wall seemed magic to them. They bought a number of the "rods of Moses" from a junk dealer to hang on their walls at home to spurt water for them. When their error was explained the dealer took back the faucets, but later each sheik stealthily repurchased them so that he "would not be cheated out of the white man's magic."

Ten zebras and two antelopes were shipped recently from South Africa to European zoos.

Aberdeen, Scotland, has a movement for more cleanly methods of marketing fish.

An extensive Netherlands Industrial Exposition will be held at Rotterdam from next May to August.

The Business Girl Knows the Dollars-and-Cents Value of "That Schoolgirl Complexion"

AS beauty is rated a dollars-and-cents asset by women of the stage and screen, so too it is rated today by women in the business world. Note there the lovely complexions that you see.

The rule for gaining a good complexion is the same as for keeping one—soap and water, as advised by virtually every leading authority on skin care. This is to keep the skin and pores clean and free of beauty-impairing accumulations.

The one secret is in the kind of soap one uses. Only a true complexion soap can be wisely employed on the skin. Other soaps may be too harsh.

The rule for "That Schoolgirl Complexion"

Thus millions use Palmolive, in this way—a soap made for ONE purpose only, to safeguard the skin. A good complexion is worth too much to experiment.

Wash your face gently with soothing Palmolive Soap, massaging the lather softly into the skin. Rinse thoroughly, first with warm water, then with cold. If your skin is inclined to be dry, apply a touch of good cold cream—that is all.

Do this regularly, and particularly in the evening. Use powder and rouge if you wish. But never leave them on over night. They clog the pores, often enlarge them. Blackheads and disfigurements often follow. They must be washed away.

Avoid this mistake

Do not use ordinary soaps in the treatment given above. Do not think any green soap, or one represented as of olive and palm oils, is the same as Palmolive.

And it costs but 10c the cake! So little that millions let it do for their bodies what it does for their faces. Obtain a cake today. Then note what an amazing difference one week makes.

KEEP THAT SCHOOLGIRL COMPLEXION

The series of sketches above shows the stages in the career of George Deignton, M. C., of Toronto, noted linguist and distinguished army officer, who slew his young son with a hatchet and seriously injured his wife and his other child then gave himself up to police after wandering around the streets of Toronto for hours. He says he did it to save them from poverty.
