DENIES DOLLAR CHARGES

After the House opened, Justice Minister Halsey rose on a question of privilege to "deny without qualification" a statement yesterday by Rodney Adamson (PC-York West) that the Canadian dollar had been moved to parity with the American dollar last July because of pressure from Washington.

In the debate, Mr. Zapitny said it was time the government was preparing public works projects for execution in periods of unemployment. He urged that the Government inaugurate its social security and welfare programs.

Mr. Raymond said that with a $352,000,000 surplus for 1946-47 the Government should have granted greater tax relief. He touched on immigration and said it was time the Government gave more consideration to assisting Canadians than assisting Britain.

Mr. Matthews said that when he was serving as a clergyman his salary, with exemptions, did not bring him into the income tax brackets. He could sympathize now with non-income tax payers who received no relief in the bud-

Mr. Quelch said the Government's policy was heading for a lower production which "might very well lead to a depression." He traced this to a statement by Finance Minister Abbott that present demand and production could not be maintained.

Mr. Raymond said Britain had forecast a $1,000,000,000 surplus yet Canada still was giving her assistance. He referred to the fact that Canada was selling wheat to Britain at below the world price. He depicted the policy as one "at the service of the Empire."

The Canadian Government had wound up with a surplus. Because of that fact income tax concessions should have been made effective from last Jan. 1 instead of from July 1. Exemption for single and married persons should have been increased. All medical expenses should have been made exempt for taxation purposes. Now only expenses above four per cent of income are deductible for income tax purposes.

He said the exemption should be raised to $500 for dependents and be applicable to youths up to 25 years of age who are attending college or university.

Mr. Quelch expressed criticism of the heavy national debt and said the Government should reduce it by refunding through the Bank of Canada. The debt should have been financed through the bank during the war.

Before the war the debt had been less than $3,000,000,000; now it totalled more than $17,000,000,000.

He said that financing through the Bank of Canada would not necessarily result in inflation if handled wisely. If Government loans were financed by the bank, there would be more money for investment in industry.

He suggested the Government cut expenditures by examining "costly items," such as the National Film Board and Government information services, with a view to reducing them.
